[2] The act of 1721 placed on all negro slaves imported from Africa directly or from any other place, if above ten years of age £10, if below, £5. In addition to this all negroes imported from other parts of America must pay for six months after the passage of this act £30, and upon the expiration of the six months, £50, unless the owner, importer, or factor could certify that they were new negroes who had not been on shore six months in any part of America. For children under ten the additional duty was £5. The reason for this heavy impost was that slaves in other colonies were frequently shipped to Carolina for misconduct (Cooper, III. 160-161). The law of 1722 continued these provisions with the addition that Spanish negroes must pay £150, as they were thought to encourage the Carolina negroes to run away (ibid., pp. 194-196). Between Jan. 1, 1722, and Sept. 29, 1723, £3625 were received from the duty on negroes. Carolina Historical Commission, Columbia, Br. Trans., XI. 56, 63.

146. The Royal African Company: Minutes of Committee, 1722-1727.[1]

1721/2, Mar. 13. Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Wrag[2] attending, were Call'd and Discours'd with touching their Proposal for being furnish'd

[5] One cargo of negroes came to South Carolina inadvertently, probably late in 1724. Captain Durfey, with a cargo of the Spanish-American trade under the terms of the Assiento, was captured by pirates and the negroes on his vessel carried to Charleston. Whether they were sold there or not we do not know (letter to Gov. Francis Nicholson, Apr. 20, 1725, Add. MSS. 25564, p. 203). On Jan. 1, 1723/4, the agents of the African Company at Whydah wrote that there had arrived there the "Cleeveland Gally of Carolina".

[6] Endorsed: "Decr. the 23d 1724, Read Novr. the 18th 1725." What remained of this sum after the clergyman's stipend was paid and the building of a church was provided for was to be applied to redeem the £55,000 issue of paper currency (Br. Trans., XIV. 54). A calculation of the South Carolina revenue from negro duties for 1728 placed it at £750 stg. Br. Mus., Newcastle Papers, Add. MSS. 33028, p. 185.

by the Company with Slaves at South Carolina. And sometime was Spent therin, but could not come to any Conclusion.

1722, May 9. Mr. Wrag came, and was discours'd with about the Contract for Slaves at South Carolina, which he desires to Enter into for himself, and took time till tomorrow morning to Consider of that article relating to unmerchantable Negroes, which are to be valued.

1722, May 23. Mr. Wrag came and a farther progress was made in the matter relating to the agreement he desires to make with the Company for Slaves to be furnished at South Carolina.

1722, May 24. The Agreement Settled with Mr. Wrag for 300 Slaves yearly at South Carolina.

1722, May 31.[3] Draught of contract with Wrag, 300 slaves for South Carolina read. He asked to name his security. Penalty be double the sum of the contract.[4]

1722, June 29.[5] Agreed . . . That the Court be Mov'd for directions. . . . That a Ship be appointed for Gambia to Slave there for South Carolina according to the Contract made with Mr. Wragg.

1722, July 26. Agreed, To Report to the Court as the opinion of this Committee, That it be recommended to the Commitee of Goods to make a Computation of what Quantity of Kendal Cotton will serve for Clothing the Slaves which are to be Sent to South Carolina and to put it on board the Ship.

1722, Aug. 16. Agreed, To Report to the Court, That the Francis Galley which the Comm'ee of Shipping have taken up with design to Slave at Gambia for Carolina be appointed to go to Cape Coast Castle to Slave there for Jamaica, and that it be recommended to the said Comm'ee to agree with the Owners for this alteration of the Voyage and to the Comm'ee of Goods to order a Sufficient Cargoe on board her of such Goods as are in the Warehouse.

1722, Oct. 24. That it be recommended to the Comm'ee of Shipping to Consider of a Ship for 300 Slaves at Gambia for Carolina.

1722, Oct. 25. Ordd. . . . That it be recommended to the Com'ee of Goods to provide Clothing for 300 Slaves which are to be carried from Gambia to So Carolina.

1723, Nov. 6.[7] That Mr. Plunket have directions immediately on his arrivall at Gambia to proceed in purchasing a Number of Negroes not exceeding 300 to be Sent to South Carolina to be ready to be put on board in all February. And, That the Northampton be the Ship to carry them, if no other more proper Ship can be thought of to be sent out so as to be at Gambia in all January.

1724, Jan. 10. That the Cape Coast Frigatt be fitted out with all possible Dispatch for Gambia to take in what Negroes she can receive upon contract with Mr. Wragg for South Carolina.

1724/5, Feb. 17.[8] A Letter from Mr. Wragg read, desiring another Ship may be Order'd to Gambia, to carry a further Number of Slaves to Carolina upon the foot of the Contract.

Upon which the Contract was read As also a Minute from the Comm'ee of Goods, That there are no Goods in Warehouse proper for a Gambia Cargo.

Wednesday July 7th 1725.[9] . . . The Comm'ee took into consideration the Acct. with Mr. Wrag for Slaves furnished him at Carolina by the Ship Lady Rachell, and gave him the same to peruse and see if he has any objections thereto.[10]

Wednesday July 21st 1725.[11] . . . A Letter from Mr. Wragg recd. wherein he proposes as follows, Vizt.

That a Ship be now sent out by the Company which shall take in not less than 240 Slaves, which allowing for mortality, may deliver in Carolina Two hundred and Twenty. And that the Company be obliged to deliver Eighty more on board such Ship as he shall send (in not less than four months after) to Gambia the Company paying Customary freight, and he allowing the price on delivery in Carolina according to Contract,

And the Committee having discoursed him upon the same, are of opinion, That the said proposal be complyed with in order to the finishing that Contract, and that a Ship be taken up accordingly.

[7] T 70: 124. In his testimony before the Board of Trade in 1726 Wragg referred to his contract with the African Company as the only effort which that company had ever made to supply the South Carolina market (post, no. 147). Francis Yonge, in "A View of the Trade of South Carolina" (1723, Br. Trans., X.), refers to vessels fitting in Holland for Guinea and the plantations, some owned by Englishmen, some by Hollanders. It is difficult to believe however that any considerable portion of the Carolina supply was brought by the Dutch.

Which being stated, The Committee have no objection to William Hayes acct. and agreed that Mr. Wrag have Creditt for the ballance in his Acct. with the Company; but John Hodges being concerned with other Mutineers, ordered, That a stop be putt to his Acct. till he appears to answer for the same." T 70: 103, pp. 28-29.

[11] Ibid., pp. 32-37.

Thursday July 22nd 1725. . . . It is the opinion of this Committee, That Mr. Wrag pursuant to the 8th Article of the Contract, do furnish the Ship now to be sent to Carolina with full freight home in the same manner as if it was one of the Companys own Ships, and upon the terms therein mentioned, and that he endorse the Charter party accordingly.

Friday July 23rd 1725. . . . Considered further of the Memorandum which is to be indorsed upon the Contract with Mr. Wragg.

Wednesday July 28th 1725. Mr. Wragg came and was further discoursed with about the Ship which is to go now for Gambia and Carolina, and the Agreement concluded.[12]

The Comm'ee also settled Accts. with him for the Voyage of the Lady Rachell, the ballance due to the Compa. being £156. 19. 8.

Thursday July 29th 1725. . . . Ordered That Mr. Wragg have a Copy of his Acct. of the Voyage by the Cape Coast Fregate the ballance of which is £2435. 18. 6. due to the Compa. and payable in September next.

Friday July 30th 1725. . . . The Indorsement was made upon the Contract with Mr. Wragg according to the Order of Yesterdays Court.

Thursday Feb. 10th 1725/6.[13] Upon considering Mr. Wraggs Letter of the 20th of Jany. last, referred last Court Day to the Committee.

A Letter was thereupon drawn up to be sent to Gambia by the Ship he is now Sending thither, directing Mr. Plunket and the Chief Merchts. to putt on board the said Ship the 80 Slaves remaining to compleat the Contract made with him.

Thursday February 23, 1726/7. Mr. Wragg being discoursed with upon the Demand He makes of 240 Negroes which He alledges were delivered short at Carolina, upon former Contracts made with the Company.

The Committee are of opinion, That for putting an end to all disputes relating to the said Contracts the following Propositions be made to Mr. Wragg

1. That the Company do send out by a Ship He has ready to sail for Gambia to the value of £300 in Goods and Provisions, to be consigned to the Company's Agents there.

[12] This was apparently the Diligence, recently sold for £530. Items of July and August refer to the charter party of the Diligence, and later it becomes evident that Captain Rodwell delivered one cargo (possibly several) in Carolina for the company (ibid., pp. 29, 36, 37, 42, 141). An entry of Sept. 13, 1726, reads, "Allowed to pay to Captain Emanuel Rodwell of the Diligence in full of his own Commission and Doctors head Mony of Negroes deliver'd at Carolina as per Charter party", and for Oct. 10, 1727, "Allowed to pay to Emanuel Rodwell Commander and the Owners of the Dilligence, in full for Freight of Negros from Gambia to Carolina 700 £ as per Warrant Dated 20th Octr. 1726". T 70: 103, pp. 141, 234, T 70: 7, p. 133.

2. That the Company give Direction to their said Agents to purchase and deliver to the Master of the said Ship for the time being 50 Negroes certain, and also as many more as they can possibly procure during the said Ship's stay there, not exceeding one hundred qualifyed as to Ages and Sexes pursuant to the 2nd Article of the above-mentioned Contract. And that the said Agents put them on board, not less than ten at a time.

3. That Mr. Wragg covenant that the said Ship shall carry the above mentioned Goods and provisions and deliver the same to their Agents Freight free.

4. That upon putting the said Negroes on board, the Master for the time being shall draw Bills for the amount upon Mr. Wragg after the rate of £9. 10. Sterling per Head, payable 12 Months after Date, which Mr. Wragg shall covenant to accept and pay in their due time.

5. That the said Mr. Wragg will accept of the said 50 Negros in full satisfaction and discharge of the several parcels of Negros stipulated to be delivered him by the abovementioned contract and the Indorsement thereon dated 29th July 1725, any thing in the said Contract or Indorsement to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.[14]

Tuesd. April 25, 1727. Mr. Wragg came and his Acct examined and adjusted for Negroes carryed to Carolina by the Dilligence, Capt. Rodwell and the Samuel Capt. Paine; the Ballance due to the Company being £1037. 6. 8; whereof to be paid by Contract the 4th May next £348. 16. 3. and on the 10th Septr. next £688. 10. 5.

1727, Sept. 21.[15] Mr. Wragg came, And the Account between the Company and him was settled, and he paid the Ballance being £538.

1727, Sept. 27. Mr. Wragg's Letter read of the 26th wherein he desires his Ship the Ruby Capt. Colwell, if it happens to be at Gambia at the Same time the Guinea Packet is there, may be furnished with 40 or 50 Slaves for which he will pay the company at the rate of £10 per head.

It is the opinion of the Comm'ee That Mr. Wragg's request be complyed with, and that Orders may be sent to the Agents at Gambia accordingly.[16]

[14] 1726/7, Feb. 24: "Agreed with Mr. Wragg That He ship for the Company's Acco't 20 barrls of Gunpowder at 4.15 per Barrell to be allowed him in part paym't . . . . Order'd, That Mr. Lynn write to the Agents at Gambia by this Ship a Short Letter to inclose the Invoice and Bill of Lading and a Copy of the Agreement now concluded with Mr. Wragg."

[15] T 70: 103, pp. 229, 231. On Apr. 24 the Gambia factors, Anthony Rogers and Richard Hull, wrote: "Are Surprized at the demand of 100 Slaves for the Ruby Mr. Wraggs Ship" (T 70: 7, p. 134). Notwithstanding their surprise, they were able to provide part of a cargo: "Fifty Slaves Shipd on board her [Ruby, Captain Colvil] upon the Contract with Mr. Wragg. The finest Cargo of slaves that ever went from the River" (May 19, 1727, ibid.). On July 10 they sent a bill of exchange on Wragg by the Resolution (bound for Carolina) for £475. Ibid., p. 135.

[16] The Wraggs were during these years also acting as agents for Isaac Hobhouse and Company of Bristol. See instructions to Capt. William Barry, this work, II. 327-329.

147. Journal of the Board of Trade, 1726.[1]

May 4, 1726.

Mr. Serjeant Darnell then called upon several witnesses present, who were respectively sworn and examined viz: Mr. Samuel Wragg who informed their Lordships that he had been a Trader to Carolina Seventeen or Eighteen years. That that Country formerly had but very few Negroes, but that now they employd near 40,000. That they now usually import 1000 per Ann. whereas they formerly imported none, and some times 2 or 300. That the Company never supply'd the Province with any on their own Accot. except by a particular Contract with him, when they supplied him with 300 instead of 900. That the Province has been regularly supplied with what Negroes they want by the Seperate Traders. That the Rice Trade is encreased from 1500 to 25,000 Barrels a year; and that the price is fallen from 45 shillgs. to 22 shillgs. per Cwt. That the Price of Pitch and Tar is likewise fallen from 50 s. and 3 ll. to 10 s. or 11 s. per Barrel.

Mr. Platt [Splatt?] being likewise sworn acquainted their Lordships that he was lately come from Carolina and that the province was then very well supplied with Negroes. That he never knew of any Negroes brought into that Country by the Company, excepting those contracted for with Mr. Wragg. That the province annually takes about 1000 per Ann and that they sell at about 30 or 35 ll. sterling per Head. That a Negro can make about 10 ll. per Ann. clear profit to his Master, and that he thinks the Colonies would be cheaper and better supplied by the separate Traders than the Company.[2]

. . . They are uneasy in theire private Circumstances, for the great Number of Negroes, that have been imported within these three or four yeares, have run them prodigiously in debt, and the sudden fall of the price of Pitch and Tarr, which was what Abundance of them cheifly Employed themselves in, has rendered Numbers of them unable to pay their Debts soone, and their

149. News Item relating to Slave Trade, 1729.[1]

London Aug. 2 [1729].

We have an account from Guinea, by Way of Antigua, that the Clare Galley, Capt. Murrell, having compleated her Number of Negroes had taken her Departure from the Coast of Guinea for South Carolina; but was not got 10 Leagues on her Way, before the Negroes rose and making themselves Masters of the Gunpowder and Fire Arms, the Captain and Ships Crew took to their Long Boat, and got shore near Cape Coast Castle. The Negroes run the Ship on Shore within a few Leagues of the said Castle, and made their Escape.[2]

150. Concerning Duties on Slaves, 1730-1732.

24 March, 1729/30.

To the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, Petition of Merchants of London and Bristol.[1]

Sheweth, That by Acts of Assembly of that Province there is imposed a duty of Ten pounds and another (called the State house duty) of one pound (mony of that Province) on Every Negro imported there, above the age of ten Years which Sum of Ten pounds and one pound added together amounts to more then Thirty Shillings

[2] Another testimony to the debt for negroes is to be found in a representation of the council of the province: "all their schemes and projects about settling currency, settling discount establishing banks and making laws for tendering their Commoditys in discharge of debts are all of the same stamp when examined into, tho dressed up in so many different Titles and shapes and tend all to one purpose that as the generality of the people are got into debt by buying of Negroes beyond their abilities they would screen the debtors from their Creditors by the most plausible means they could and this under the sanction of Laws to be made for the general good and public good (as they call it) that is for the good of all that are in debt which comprehends everybody exclusive of those that trusted them and the populace never failed to send such representatives as will best answer the debts they send them for." Br. Trans., XIII. 316.

[149] [1] Boston News Letter, Sept. 25, 1729. There is nothing unusual about this disaster to the Clare save the wide publicity which it seems to have received. The account in the News Letter was taken from the Country Journal of Aug. 2, 1729. The editor has also seen the account in the Weekly Journal or British Gazette, in Fog's Weekly Journal, and in the Gloucester Journal.

[2] From the Vice Admiralty records in Charleston we know that the snow William, Captain Barry, from Cape Benda, Africa, reached Charleston in 1729. In 1730 two vessels were slaving in the Gambia for Charleston, the Elizabeth, Captain Carruthers, and the Sierra Leone, Captain Jenkins, 180 slaves. This work, II. 400-401.

[150] [1] C. O. 5: 361, C 79. The petition was presented to the Board of Trade by the three men whose names are affixed to it. That the question of a duty should receive serious consideration is not to be wondered at when one realizes that the negro population was estimated at 28,000, the white at 3000 at this time. Boston News Letter, Oct. 22, 1730.

per head Sterlg. mony of Great Britain, according to the present rate of Exchange from That Province.[2]

That this is become a very great burthen and discouragement to the British Trade and defeats the good intentions of Our Legislature (who by taking off the dutys and giving bountys have Endeavoured to Encourage the Exportation of Our Manufacturers) by thus taxing of Negroes Imported from Africa who are there purchased, principally with British Goods,

That it is humbly conceived they have no right thus to Tax the British Trade for the Support of the contingent charges of that Colony or any publick Edifices there.

Your Petitioners therefore most humbly pray your Lordships to cause the said dutys to cease on the British Trade by instructing his Majestie's Governour (now going over)[3] to that End or in any other manner as to your Lordships shall seem most meet etc.[4]

[Sir William Chapman to the Board of Trade.][6]

My Lords, A Lameness having unfortunately prevented my waiting on yr. Lordships this Morning, I humbly offer to yr. Lords'ps an Expedient regarding the present Dutys as laid upon the Blacks Imported into Carolina.[7]

We Represented to yr. Lords'ps that this is in Effect a Duty on the Brittish Manufactures the Blacks being the produce thereof, and Farther that the Merchant Importer often paid hereby the Duty for Blacks which dyed before they were sold.

But whereas this Duty is appropriated I should hope the same being laid henceforth on the Buyer in the like Manner for all Blacks

[2] The rate was by this time seven to one. For a table showing the rate from 1710 to 1770 see Wallace, Laurens, p. 53. A report made to the House of Lords by the Board of Trade in 1734 referred to an act of 1727 to carry on an expedition against the Indians as having "revived" the duty of £10 on negroes (Add. MSS. 33028, p. 251). The act of 1722 was to operate till 1726. It is possible that after its expiration there was an interval when no duty was in force. Neither Wallace (Laurens, p. 82n.) nor DuBois (pp. 9, 212) throws any light on this. Nor is it clear when the state house duty here mentioned was levied.

July 15, 1732.

To be sold, On Wednesday next, the 19th Instant, by Benjamin Godin and John Guerard, a Parcel of Gold Coast Slaves, lately im-

[8] C. O. 5: 388, p. 14. Newcastle was one of his Majesty's secretaries of state. In the earlier part of this letter the governor states that he has received the king's additional instructions of Dec. 10, 1731, against imposing duties upon imported negroes. In response to the pressure of the merchants the Board of Trade inserted an article in the instructions to the governor asking him to use his influence for the passage of an act repealing the duties on the importer and placing them on the buyer (Br. Trans., XIV. 79). On June 10, in a representation to the king, the board explained that art. 57 of Governor Johnson's instructions had been inserted to encourage the importation of white people, and art. 125, at the request of the merchants who complained of the duty. This article not only instructed the governor to procure a law which should clarify the negro duties, but also to send home an account of the number imported (ibid., pp. 145-146). In the instructions to Johnson as they appear in the British Transcripts (XIV. 208) there is no art. 125. Art. 114 reads as follows: "Whereas Sev'l Merchants of Great Britain Trading to South Carolina have complained that by certain Acts of Assembly now in force in the said Province, Duties are imposed upon Negroes Imported there, and made payable by the Importer, to the discouragement of the said Trade and have desired the sd Duties may for the future be made payable by the Purchasers and not by the Importer, submitting nevertheless that the Importer or his Factor shall be Security to the Publick for the Payment of the said Duty in case of the Purchasers failure. It is Our Will and Pleasure that you endeavour to get a Law pass'd for explaining and altering the Laws for collecting of the said Duties on Negroes agreeable to the Desire of the Merchants." Ibid., p. 146.

[9] The act to which Johnson refers is probably that of Aug. 20, 1731, which was to continue the negro duty for seven years. The governor, in a letter of June 16, 1731, stated the duty in terms of sterling as 28 s. 7 d. for negroes over ten, and 14 s. 3½ d. for those under ten, perhaps thinking that it would sound less oppressive thus than when stated in terms of Carolina currency (Br. Trans., XV. 88). On June 26, 1732, in a letter to the Board of Trade, Governor Johnson repeated the statement here made to Newcastle. C. O. 5: 362, D 40.

To be Sold on Thursday next, being the 5th of October, by George Austin, for ready Money, a Choice Parcel of Negroes, lately imported in the Ship Edward, to be seen on board the said Ship at Eliott's Wharff.[2]

Dec. 6, 1732.

To be sold by Benjamin Godin and John Guerard, on Thursday the 21st Instant, a Parcel of Negroes, imported directly from Gambia in the Ship Molley Galley, Capt. John Carruthers.[3] detailed information concerning the importation of negroes can be gleaned than has been found for the earlier period. The customs entries show that vessels from the West Indies, as was to be expected, frequently brought a few negroes: "Sloop Resolution, Sam. Spencer, from Bermuda, 4 negroes"; "Sloop Benjamin, Joseph Hinton, from Barbadoes, with 7 Negroes". These are seldom advertised for sale, and, since the practice of printing such entries did not continue throughout the century the figures which have been gathered from the Gazette omit the scattering importation of negroes from the islands.

[2] The cargo of the Edward was apparently divided between two Charleston merchants, as John Grove also announced for sale slaves from the Edward.

[3] The Molly brought 120 negroes and "a parcel of Teeth and wax". S. C. Gazette, Dec. 23, 1732.

[152] [1] This table with those similar to it which follow has been compiled from the advertisements in the pages of the Gazettes. From Sept. 29, 1730, to Sept. 29, 1731, 1533 negroes were imported (Report of Charleston Naval Office, C. O. 5: 362). From Christmas, 1732, to Midsummer, 1733, the importation was 1156; from Christmas, 1732, to Christmas, 1733, it was 2745 (S. C. Gazette, June 30, 1733, Feb. 2, 1734). During the consideration of the act for a duty by the Board of Trade in 1734 it was stated that whereas the duty was expected to yield £8500 a year it had actually yielded from Mar. 25, 1731, to Mar. 25, 1732, £12,085, and from Christmas, 1732, to Christmas, 1733, upwards of £10,000 (Br. Trans., XVII. 80). It should be borne in mind that the negroes advertised are new negroes, and that the mention of a West India source means either that they were purchased there from an arriving African cargo or that this vessel on the voyage from Africa had stopped in the West Indies and disposed of some of her cargo. Where the African source is known it is added in parentheses. A number of the vessels in this list are to be found in the list of those paying duties on negroes delivered in Barbados between 1730 and 1737. See this work, II. 428-431.

[2] Probably a Bristol brigantine, as she cleared for Bristol on June 23. The advertisement reads, "For the encouragement of which Sale great Regard will be had to ready Rice, as well as Ready Money".

[3] Cleared for London July 28. This of course is not absolute proof that the vessel is owned in London, but in every case where it has been possible to test it the vessel clears in Charleston, after delivering her African cargo, for the port of her owners.

[4] The Cato, the Amoretta, and the Shepherd, "entered out" for Bristol.

[5] "A parcel of Rum just imported and 4 choice Gold Coast slaves to be Sold by Ribton Hutchinson, July 7, 1733."

[6] The figure printed is 13, obviously a mistake. "Good Encouragement will be given for ready Pay, in Currency, Rice, Pitch, and Tar."

[7] Wragg's notices add, "N. B. Great Regard will be had to present Pay".

[8] The brigantine John entered from Jamaica, which fact suggests that the slaves may have been the captain's own venture, purchased from a cargo there.

[9] Cleared for London. The Amoretta and the Post-Boy cleared for Bristol.

[10] "In 30 days from Gambia."

[11] The Grayhound was owned by Isaac Hobhouse of Bristol; for its earlier voyages see this work, II. 299, 428, 432, and ante p. 267. The Gazette reports the negroes received from Africa between Nov. 1, 1734, and Nov. 1, 1735, as 2671; those from the West Indies for the same period as 236; the duty amounted to £4360. 10. S. C. Gazette, Nov. 8, 1735; Br. Trans., XIX. 56.

[12] In the customhouse entry John Mathews is given as the captain.

[13] The sale is to be "on board ship".

[14] This cargo was also advertised as for sale by Richard Hill, who wrote: "The sale to be at my House, where may be had Barbados and Jamaica Rum."

[15] "Directly from Angola in eight weeks."

[16] "Extraordinary Encouragement will be given for present Pay and Payment with this Crop." Sept. 12, 1735, Samuel Eveleigh to Godfrey Malbone, sr., Newport, "There has been imported into this place Since the 25. of March Last Twenty four Hundred Negroes, which have sold very well, tho the greatest part upon Credit." Newport Hist. Soc., package 157.

[17] To this list one cargo for South Carolina, if not for Charleston, can certainly be added, that of the Susannah, of which we learn from a notice in the Gazette for Mar. 17, 1739: "Twenty-eight Negroes to be sold at Beaufort Port-Royal, on the first Day of April next, the Negroes are the said Remainder of those that were landed at the said Place in May 1736 by Mr. Delas out of the Susannah, Capt. Mallortie from Angola: therefore they are season'd to this Country and will be sold for ready Money or payable the next Crop upon good security if required by MONTAGUT and PERRY." This is one of the very rare advertisements of seasoned negroes, in which the place of origin is given.

[18] "A great Part of the said Slaves are Gold Coast."

[19] On Oct. 2 Messrs. Yeomans and Escott advertise a "small Parcel of likely young new negroes lately imported", with no further information concerning them.

[20] This is probably much below the actual number of vessels for 1737.

[21] On Apr. 2, 1737, there appeared in the Gazette an article signed "Mercator", dwelling on the evils of the heavy debts which the planters were incurring for negroes. The importation for 1728-1733 had been 5153, for 1733-1737, 10,447. See also, post, no. 155.

[22] "Great Encouragement will be given for present Pay in Rice or Cash." This or a similar statement is almost always affixed to Joseph Wragg's notices of sale and frequently to those of others.

[23] "N. B. To avoid any Hazard of the Small-Pox the Ship will not stop at Charleston, but proceed directly up Ashley River", the sale to be held at Ashley Ferry. This notice is affixed to the advertisements of the Speaker, Mary, Princess Caroline, Seaflower, and Mermaid.

[24] This cargo is also advertised on the same day by Messrs. Yeomans and Escott, who add to their note, "Proper care will be taken not to land them at the town". Injurious rumors were apparently afloat about this vessel, for in the same number of the Gazette appeared the following: "As has been reported about Town that the Ships Crew and Cargo on board the Ship Princess Caroline, Capt. Johnson Commander to Mr. Hill and Guerard, are very sickly, and as I visited the Ship very carefully in Rebellion Road, am oblig'd thus to satisfy that I found no room for any such Report. JOHN MOULTRIE." The next voyage of this vessel was a melancholy one. In November, 1739, William Watson, mate of the Princess Caroline, arrived in Newport with the story. The ship, owned by Mr. Goding of London, had sailed from Charleston to the Gambia where it had taken on board 116 slaves for a second Charleston venture. Here the captain died, and John Fumcan (?) took command. On Aug. 30 the slaves rose against the ship's company, killed three, and obliged the remaining eight to take to the long boat. After fourteen days they reached Marie Galante in a half-starved condition. The fate of the negroes is unknown. Boston

Sir Wm. Chapman, Mr. Wragg, Mr. Harris and Several other Merchants Trading to South Carolina attending, as they had been desired with Mr. Paxton their Solicitor, as also Mr. Wood in behalf of the Merchants of Bristol, and Mr. Hume late Speaker of the Assembly of that Province against two Acts passed there Entituled An Act for Appropriating the Sum of 104,725 li. 1 s. 3¼ d. towards the payment of the publick Debts passed in 1731 And An Act for the better encouragemt. of the Settlement of South Carolina pass'd in 1696. And Mr. Fury Agent for the Province with Mr. Young one of the Council there, attending likewise with Mr. Sharpe their Solicitor in behalf of the Sd. Laws. Their Lordsps took again into consideration the two Orders of the Committee read the 18th of the last Month [2] referring to this Board the Petitions of the Merchants of London and Bristol against Some Acts of South Carolina for continuing Duties on Negroes, Issuing of Paper Mony and protecting of Debtors: Their Lordsps then Heard what the Merchants and Mr. Hume had to offer against the first of these Laws for Appropriating the Sum of 104,725 li. 1 s. 3¼ d. etc. as being contrary to His Majesty's Instructions to his Governor of South Carolina not only on Account of the Duty on Negroes thereby continued but as the Fund for Sinking the Paper Currency of that Province was apply'd to different purposes than those appointed by His Majesty's Instructions. . . .

Mr. Wood then presented to the Board An Affidavit of two Bristol Merchants proving the Mischiefs attending the Trade to Carolina by the Acts for Screening Debtors, and Laying Duties on Negroes Imported there which was read; And their Lordsps resolved to hear what the Agent had to Offer in behalf of these Acts tomorrow Morning.

January 10th 1733/4.

Trans., XVI. 27). Omissions are not indicated throughout these minutes since it is to be understood that only those portions of the minutes are presented which deal with South Carolina duties. *B. T. Lordsps heard what they had to Offer in Support of the Said Laws, by representing that the Duty on Negroes complain'd of by the Merchants as contrary to the Governors Instructions was rather allow'd by the Governrs. Instructions than contrary thereto, His Majesty having thereby allow'd the Duties which were to Sink the Paper Currency of this Province to be Suspended from that purpose for Seven Years, and to be apply'd to other Uses; That the whole Sinking Fund of which the Duty on Negroes was part had not been apply'd according to the Letter of the Instructions there had not been a Demand for it, but as the remainder was appropriated to the Payment of the Province Debts, and as the Merchants were the Chief Creditors they Seem'd to have the least reason to complain.

WHITEHALL Jany. 24th 1733/4.

Present: Earl of Westmorland, Mr. Bladen, Mr. Docminique, Sr. O. Bridgman, Sir Arch Croft.

Their Lordsps taking again into consideration the Orders of the Committee mentioned in the Minutes of the 9th Instant upon the Petitions of the Merchants of London and Bristol against Some Acts of South Carolina protecting Debtors, Issuing and Appropriating Paper Mony Laying Duties on Negroes etc. and gave Directions for preparing the Draught of a Representation for Repealing the Act passed there in 1731 for Appropriating the Sum of 104,725 li. 1 s. 3¼ d. towards payment of the publick Debts.[3]

[Petition of Bristol Merchants.]

To the King's most Excellent Majesty in Council The humble Petition of several Merchants and others of the City of Bristol Trading to Your Majesty's Province of South Carolina.[4]

Sheweth, That by an Act of the General Assembly of Your said Majestys Province Ratifyed the 20th August 1731 and sent over for Your Majestys Approbation the Funds (which were Settled for calling in and Sinking the one hundred and Six thousand pounds paper Money formerly Issued in the said Province) are otherwise applyed and a further Sum of one hundred and four Thousand Seven hundred and twenty five pounds one Shilling and three pence farthing of paper Credit is imposed on Your Majestys Subjects contrary to the Publick faith and Credit of said Province And there has been an Attempt lately to raise a further Sum of £250 000 in paper Money the Consequence of all such imaginary Value will be greatly prejudicial to the propertys of Your Majestys Subjects and as we most humbly conceive contrary to Your Majestys Royal Instructions to the Governor of that Province.

That by the said Act an Exorbitant Duty of ten pounds per Head is imposed and continued on all Negroes imported by Your Majestys Subjects into the said Province to the very great discouragement of the Trade and Exportation of the Manufactures of Great Britain. . . .[5]

Your Petitioners therefore most humbly Request Your Majesty to take the Premises into Your Royal Consideration to repeal those two Laws and to prevent any Duty on Negroes Imported so pernicious to the British Trade and that they may be heard by their Council or to grant such other Relief as in Your great Wisdom shall seem most proper.

And your Petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray etc.

[Petition of London Merchants.]

To the Kings most Excellent Majesty in Council The humble Petition of several Merchants and others of the City of London trading to Your Majestys Province of South Carolina.[6]

Sheweth, That an Act of the General Assembly of Your Majestys said Province entitled an Act for appropriating the Sum of One hundred and four thousand Seven hundred and twenty five pounds one Shilling and three pence farthing towards payment of the Publick Debts was passed with the Assent of his Excellency Robert Johnson Esqr. Your Majestys present Governor of the said Province on the 20th day of August Anno Dom 1731 Which Act was since transmitted under the Broad Seal of the said Province unto Your Majestys Commissioners for Trade and Plantations.

That by Virtue of the said Act the Funds which were Settled for calling in and Sinking the paper Bills of Credit formerly issued in the said Province (being One Hundred and Six thousand pounds) are diverted and misapplyed and a further Sum of one hundred and four thousand pounds and upwards of Paper Credit is imposed on Your Majestys Subjects contrary to the publick Faith and Credit of the said Province and an Attempt hath been likewise lately made to raise a further Sum of two hundred and fifty thousand pounds in paper Credit all which tend to the great detriment of Trade and are highly injurious to the propertys of Your Majestys British Subjects and expressly repugnant to several of Your Majestys Royal Instructions to Your Majestys Governor there.

Your Petitioners humbly beg leave further to lay before Your Majesty that by the said Act an exorbitant Duty of ten pounds per Head is imposed and continued on Negroes imported into the said Province by Your Majestys British Subjects to the great Damage of the Manufactures and Trade of this Kingdom.

Wherefore Your Petitioners most humbly beseech that Your Majesty would be graciously pleased to allow Your Petitioners to be heared by their Council against the said Act and that the said Act may be repealed and that no Dutys may be imposed for the future on any Negroes imported into the said Province and that Your Petrs. may have such further and other Relief in the Premises as to Your Majesty in Your great Wisdom and goodness shall seem meet.

And your Petrs. will ever pray.

To the Kings most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Remonstrance of Your Majesty's Governor, Council and Assembly of Your Majesty's Province of South Carolina.[7]

The former Calamitys of this Province on Account of the Spanish and French Invasions, and the Wars of Indians, which they promoted against it, having about eighteen years ago obliged Your Majestys Subjects of this Province to contract so large a Debt in supporting of Garrisons, and forming Expeditions both by Land and Sea, for many Years together, that there was no other Expedient then to be used immediately and effectually to provide for the same, but by Paper Bills of Credit, for which the publick became indebted; a great part of which have since been cancelld, partly by a Tax levyed on the Inhabitants, and partly by Dutys which arose heretofore from the Importation of Goods and Negroes. The Residue your Majesty was graciously pleased to admit us to continue as Currency, that Your Majestys Province might not be wholly destitute of Money that being the only legal Currency which we have since had in use among us:

[7] C. O. 5: 363, E 28. This is probably the answer to the remarks of the merchants which Mr. Fury presented to the board on Dec. 10, 1734. Br. Trans., XVI. 245.

And though the Quantity remaining is very insufficient to Answer the Exigencys of our present Traffick we are surprized to hear, that a Petition was lately preferred to Your Majesty said to be, "The Petition of several Merchants and others of the City of London trading to Your Majestys Province of South Carolina. . . .[8]

All which Allegations of the said Petitioners We must beg leave to say, are very unfairly stated to Your Majesty for that the said Appropriation Law (which the said Petitioners so greatly complain of) took its use from Your Majestys Royall Instructions to Your Majestys present Governour here, allowing him to assent to a Law that the Duty upon Negroes might for seven Years be continued, and the Application thereof suspended from calling in and sinking the remaining part of the Paper Currency, and the same be appropriated to pay for the surveying Your Majesty's Townships, and to pay for the Passage Provisions and Tools of poor protestant Families, that shoud. come here to settle for the Defence and Improvement of Your Majestys Province. All which the said Law provided by appropriating the Sum of Five thousand pounds Currency per Annum for the purposes specifyed in Your Majestys said Royall Instruction, which Sum was then deem'd an Annual Sufficiency to accommodate any number of poor Protestants that we coud. expect here, and if a greater Supply shoud. be wanting. It was agreed by the General Assembly of this Province that from time to time suitable Provision shoud be made for the same which has been actually fulfilled there being no more than the Sum of five Thousand Pounds Currency per Annum, which has since been applied for that good Purpose and has proved an inviting Engagement to a considerable Number of poor Protestant people to come over from Europe and settle among us who are thereby now comfortably accommodated in several of Your Majestys Townships, and many more upon that Encouragement, are now engaged and daily Expected here from Switzerland. As the rest of the Fund woud. but lye dead unless the same was immediately appropriated: We therefore thought it a becoming Oeconomy to apply the Residue towards the Discharge of a Debt which heretofore became due from the publick on Account of Indian presents, Inland Forts, Scouts, Garrisons and Rangers, which before Your Majesty's Purchase we were and still are under a Necessity peculiar to this Province unknown to any other part of America in a time of Peace to keep in pay for the ordinary Defence of the Country. Which relief to the old Inhabitants has since enabled them to assist new Comers in furtherance of Your Majestys Royall Intention; which they have liberally shewn by lately raising two Thousand Pounds for the Use of Georgia; and also further affording them Guards and Rangers at the annual Expence of five Thousand five hundred Pounds per Annum levied by a Tax on the Inhabitants of this Province. But the incurr'd Charge we were not in a Condition then to provide for by levying of Taxes over and above the common Contingences without driving away many of the old Inhabitants at a time Your Majesty was graciously pleased by Your said Royall Instruction so liberally and charitably to provide for new ones. We were therefore obliged to issue Orders upon Interest on the Credit of that Duty, as well to provide for the Expected arrival of poor Protestant Settlers as to preserve the faith of the Publick which was so necessarily before engaged for the Defence and care of the Province. Those Orders the Petitioners are pleased to call a further Sum of one hundred and four thousand seven hundred and twenty five Pounds of Paper Credit, imposed on Your Majestys British Subjects twenty seven thousand Pounds of which were immediately Sealed up in the Treasury, were never issued but faithfully cancell'd by a Committee of both houses, and the rest are not in the least enforced by way of payment only in case of the Merchants are made receivable by the Treasurer for the better discharge of the Dutys, and are all to be duly sunk as they come into our Treasury in a Course of Payment, which must all be done within the Space of four Years more, at which time by their very tenor they will totally expire.

We are at a Loss to know upon what foundation the Petitioners shoud. so confidently Complain to Your Majesty against the Continuance of the Negroe Duty, and the Paper Currency in use among us, when some of these very Petitioners, with several other Merchants of the City of London did heretofore Petition to the Right Honoble the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations in Great Britain to recommend to Your Majesty that you woud. be graciously pleased to allow the General Assembly of this Province to pass a Law, that the Law for sinking the Paper Currency might for seven Years be suspended. Which your most sacred Majesty was graciously pleased by your Royal Instruction to your present Gouvernour to admit accordingly on the earnest request of many Planters and Merchants in that particular Which very Law the Petitioners now oppose, and endeavour to get disannull'd by your Majesty, We are in these circumstances very unfortunate, to be under a Necessity of answering Complaints against a Law, which took its rise from the said Merchants Representation and Request as is set forth in Your Majesty's said gracious Instruction. The Petitioners had a little reason to charge the Assembly of this Province with an Attempt lately made to raise a further Sum on Paper Credits by cavilling at a Scheme which was lately here on Foot to give our Currency a Value, and to establish the same on a better Basis; which we were not in a Condition then to accomplish, but hope its practicable, that still we may with due conformity to Your Majestys Royall Instruction and with equal Convenience, as well to the Trading as the Planting Interest; For since Your Majestys Subjects of this Province have had the Happiness of being under the immediate Care and Protection of Your most sacred Majesty a very sensible Increase of our Trade naturally requires an Increase of our Currency, our Yearly Exports are hardly short of one hundred and ten thousand Pounds Sterling, and not above one hundred and five thousand Pounds left of a Wasting Paper Currency for the Use of our Inland Traffick which in the whole does not exceed the Sum of Fifteen Thousand Pounds Sterling.

We therefore hope Your Majesty, will be graciously pleased to reject the said Petition; and not be deprived of the many Advantages accruing to Your Majestys Service from the Continuance of the Duty on Negroes imported, which is only to continue about four Years longer: And what the petitioners call an Exorbitant Duty of ten Pounds per head is only equal to twenty eight Shillings and six pence Sterling. For shoud. Your Majesty be pleased to comply with the Request of the Petitioners some of whom, are utter Strangers as well to the Proceedings, as to the Condition of this Province. By your Majestys disannulling those Laws for establishing the Negroe Duty for seven Years, and for appropriating the same which now lye before Your Majesty for Your Royall Assent and Approbation; It woud not only be impossible for Your Majestys Subjects of this Province at this Critical Juncture to raise by any extraordinary Taxes so large a Sum as that fund would require, over and above the necessary Charges which we already find so burthensome; and in case of a War must (we fear) be very grievous; but the poor Protestant Families must go back disappointed who came here in Expectation of the Bounty designed by Your Majestys Royall Instruction and the whole Country must inevitably be put into the utmost Confusion by annihilating those Orders, which principally depend on the Duty upon Negroes. The sudden Distruction of which before they are legally paid in, and cancelled woud. at this time prove an irreparable Loss to many British Merchants trading to this Province, in the Hands of whose Factors the greatest part of those Orders are Center'd.

The Importation of Negroes, We crave leave to inform Your Majesty is a Species of Trade, that has exceedingly increased of late in this Province where many Negroes are now train'd up to be Handicraft Tradesmen, to the great discouragement of Your Majestys white Subjects, who come here to settle with a View of Employment in their several Occupations, but must often give way to a People in Slavery: which we daily discover to be a great Obstruction to the Settlement of this Frontier with white People.

So, that we must most humbly suggest to Your Majesty, the said Petition was never duly weighed by the Persons that Subscribed it, who trade to this Province in British Manufactures, but was rather Projected by a few Negroe Merchants and some other designing Persons, who have several Debts of that Paper Credit, now outstanding; upon Mortgages, Judgments and other good Securitys; who by destroying the Currency must unquestionably procure Possession of the greatest part of the Estates Real and personal in this Province. And the Merchants that deal in British Manufactures prove at Length the final Sufferers whose Debts are outstanding on the weaker Foundation of Book Accounts and Personal Promises.

[Petition of John Peter Purry to the King.]

To the King's most Excellent Majesty in Council The humble Petition of Colonel John Peter Purry.[9]

Sheweth, That Your Majestys Governor of South Carolina in Pursuance of your Majestys Royall Instructions passed an Act of Assembly in that Province for appropriating a Certain Sum to be applied to the buying Tools, and other Necessaries and Provisions for any poor Protestants, that shall go and be willing to Settle there.

That the petitioner propos'd and agreed with the said Governor and Council to transport and carry Over a Number of Swiss, and other protestants, and having fixed on a Place for a Township on the Savannah River. He has accordingly already landed some hundreds there who have in part settled the said Township, and have received, and daily do receive from the Province the Necessaries and Provisions promised and agreed for and which was raised by and Out of the Aforesaid Sum so appropriated.

That your Petitioner has now actually on the Road, and which he proposes to Embark in three Weeks for the said Province, near four hundred more Swiss to settle and Inhabit the said Township but is informed that the said Law for appropriating the said certain Sum has been disapproved of by the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations who have therefore reported the said Law not proper for Your Majestys Allowance and Approbation, but advised it may be repealed; And the Petitioner being well assured, that if the said Law should be repealed accordingly, Not Only his People now there but those also he is going to transport thither will be deprived of the necessary aid and Assistance provided for them by the said Act, and be rendered utterly unable to subsist, and settle themselves, the said Province having positively declared that in that Case they were not able to keep their faith, and Promise with the Petitioner to the utter Ruin of his People, and the said Settlement.

Your Petitioner therefore, most humbly prays Your Majesty will be graciously pleased not to repeal the said Act on which the prosperity of the said People intirely depends, or that Your Majesty Grant him such other Relief as Your Majesty shall think necessary and proper.

And Your Petitioner as in Duty bound shall ever pray etc.

[Minutes of a Committee of the Privy Council.]

At the Council Chamber
WHITEHALL the 23d of July 1734.

By the Right Honourable the Lords of the Committee of Council for Plantation Affairs.[10]

The Lords of the Committee this day took into their Consideration a Report made by the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations dated the 22d of March last upon An Act past in the Province of South Carolina on the twentieth day of August 1731 Entituled "An Act for appropriating the Sum of 104725 li. 1 s. 3¼ d. towards paymt., of the Publick Debts", and also upon two Petitions preferred by the Merchants of London and Bristol trading to that Province against the said Act: And their Lordships likewise took into their Consideration a Remonstrance from the Governor Council and Assembly of the said Province and a Petition from Colonel John Peter Purry both of them in Support of the said Act and which were lately referred by His Majesty to this Committee. And their Lordships are thereupon pleased to Order as it is hereby Ordered that the said Report be referred back to the said Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations. Who are to reconsider thereof and at the same time to Examine into the said Remonstrance from Carolina and Petition of Colonel Purry (Copys whereof are hereunto annexed) And the said Lords Commissioners are to Report their Opinion upon the whole matter to this Committee.[11]

[11] A reply from the merchants of Bristol and Liverpool to the South Carolina Remonstrance was transmitted to the board Sept. 10, 1734. In this they stated that they had complained of the duty in 1729 and had ever since been hoping to be relieved of the

. . . About ten days since arrived a Ship from Angola with 318 Slaves and divers other vessels are expected from Guinea so that tis probable we shall this year Import a great Number of Negroes and we ought to have a good number of whites to balance them. The Duty whereof is appropriated for encouraging of the Importation of white People into Georgia, Purrysburg and several other Townships in this province.

An Assembly has past a Bill for Appropriating all the Money that arises by the Duty on Negros to the Incouragement of the Importation of Strangers and for raising of a Tax for sinking of the Orders, which Bill would soon have been confirmed into a Law, was it not the Governor was so extremely ill, in fact so bad, that his life was despaired of.[2]

The duty on Negros will this year I believe be very considerable. There is one Vessell arrived already with 300 and odd Slaves and all sold off in Two days time and there are three more daily expected.

155. Communication to the South Carolina Gazette, 1738.

Mr. Timothy, I Was in hopes that the Complaint of bad Pay and Loss on Returns made for 2 years pass by the Gentlemen of London hardships it involved. If they were not at once freed from it they must drop the South Carolina trade. As for the training of negroes to handicrafts, that the colonists themselves could stop if they wished to. The charge that they did not know the conditions in Carolina was false as many of them had lived there for a number of years (Br. Trans., XVII. 32-37). In the report to the House of Lords made by the board Jan. 23, 1734, the statement was made that the complaint of the merchants was not of the amount of the Carolina duty but of the method of collection (Add. MSS. 33028, p. 251). An item in the records of the board for Oct. 23, 1734, indicates that the law was still under consideration: "A Memorial from the Merchants Trading to South Carolina, relating to the Act passed in that Province in 1731 for appropriating the Sum of 104,725 li. 1 s. 3¼ d. complaining of a Duty Imposed on the Importation of Negroes by the Sd. Act was read; And the Secretary Acquainting the Board, that the Agents had had a Copy of the Said Memorial in Order to prepare their Answer; Ordered that a Letter be wrote to the Said Agents to know when they will be ready with their Answer accordingly." C. O. 391: 43; B. T. Jour., 1728-1734, p. 416.

[154] [1] Br. Trans., XVII. 339. The letter was transmitted to the Board of Trade by Mr. Fury, agent of the colony, on July 4.

[2] Act of June 17, 1735 (Cooper, III. 409). The controversy over the duty act was still being continued before the Board of Trade. On July 3, 1735, William Wood, who represented the merchants of Bristol, reported to the Board of Trade that he understood from a letter from South Carolina that a bill was to be passed for laying a duty of £7. 10 s. per head, to be paid by the purchaser, in addition to the customary duty of £10. The next day he presented a protest from the Bristol traders, who emphasized their importance in the trade and asked that duties be abolished. On July 11 the board, having listened to the arguments on both sides, agreed to give its consent to the bill. Br. Trans., XVII. 265, 272, 333-334, 347, 360, 394, 395.

and Bristol, who are concerned in the Negro Trade to this Province, would have prevented so great an Importation for some Years to come, and the early Advices of our Crops being lost this Year, I also imagined would have induced those Gentlemen to have sent Orders to the West Indies for the Masters adressed for this Province with such Slaves, not to proceed. But the Arrival of Capt Power with above 300 Slaves, and by him Advice that several others may be expected, make me imagine, that either the former Complaints were groundless, or, that there must be an Extravagant Profit on that Trade in this Province, by selling the Negroes at a much greater Price here than in any other Part of America. The last Reason seems to be likeliest, for I have known many Slaves bought in the Barbadoes, etc. and sent here for sale, which have been sold with good Profit.

I cannot avoid observing on this Occasion, that altho' a few Negroes annually imported into this Province might be of advantage to most People; yet such large Importations of 2600 or 2800 Negroes every Year is not only a Loss to many, but in the end may prove the Ruin of the Province, as it most certainly does that of many poor industrious Planters, who unwarily engage in buying more than they have Occasion for, or are able to pay. It is for their Sakes only, I now take the trouble of writing this, that they may not further involve themselves in utter Ruin.

Negroes may be said to be the Bait proper for catching a Carolina Planter, as certain as Beef to catch a Shark. How many under the Notion Of 18 Months Credit, have been tempted to buy more Negroes than they could Possibly expect to pay in 3 Years! This is so notorious, that few Inhabitants I believe will doubt it. I have hear'd many declare their own Folly in this particular, with a Resolution never to do so again: Yet so great is the Infatuation, that the many Examples of their Neighbours Misfortunes and Danger by such Purchases do not hinder new Fools from bringing themselves into the same Difficulty.

Until about the Year 1733, the common Method of selling Negroes in this Province was, to be paid in Rice, whereby the Sellers knew to make above 10 per Cent per Annum Profits, by a Forbearance of Payment under the Title of commuting their Bonds. The Rice valued at about 37 s. 6 d. per C. and the Casks given for nothing: The Factors here were in general under no other Contract with their Employers at Home, than to remit the Rice when they had receiv'd it from the Planter. But now the Case is alter'd, the Sales and Contracts being now upon a new and quite different Footing, which I believe will in the End prove not only worse for the Merchants at Home, but also for the Factor Seller, and Planter Buyer here.

If I am rightly inform'd, the Negroes that are now sold in this Province are sent upon those Terms, viz. The Factors here to make good all bad Debts, to remit 2 thirds of the Value in 12 Months, the other one third in 2 Years after the Day of Sale. Now as they give Security in Great Britain to perform their Contracts, and as their further Business depends upon the doing thereof, it is no surprize to find them now more exact in requiring their Payments when it becomes due than they did 6 Years ago; and as our Currency is every Year decreasing in Value,[1] so all others who have Remittances to make to Great Britain in Money, will be the more urgent to have their Payments.

It is so common for many Planters to buy Negroes and dry Goods for more Value than they can possibly expect to be able to pay for when due, that it may be called a general Distemper, which of late has very much encreased, by the two last bad Crops. In Case of failure of Payment they think they make full Satisfaction by giving Bond payable next Year, bearing 10 per Cent Interest. This is Sufficient, I must own, to those who lend Money at Interest, or who are only concern'd in our In-land Trade; but will not answer to those who must turn the Currency into Sterling. For suppose I had a Man's Bond for 700 £ two Years ago, that Money then would have purchase 100 £ Sterling, whereas I now give 770 £ for 100 £ Sterling. Now if the Debtor pays me with 10 per Cent Interest it is 840, so that altho' he pays me at the Rate of 10 per Cent. per Annum, yet I really receive but 5 per Cent: For the 840 £. he pays me, will only purchase 110 £. Sterling, which is but 10 £. upon the 100 £. for two Years. It's worse in Rice, for two Years ago 700 £. would have bought 65 or 70 Barrels of Rice, and now it won't buy above 40 Barrels, as Rice was then 40 s. and is now 71 s.

Those Reasons may be sufficient to excuse any trading Man for insisting upon punctual Payment, and also to warn those in Debt not to depend so much upon the Lenity of the Merchants in Town, besides as their is not one in 50 of those who sell Rice that will give 10 Days Credit, how can they expect the Buyers should be putt off with the Notion of paying Interest? Which it's well known will buy nothing at any Market, and Merchants can't support their Credit, or carry on Trade, without buying Produce.

My whole Design of this is only to warn the unthinking Part of our Planters against falling into the same Misfortunes next Year they have met with in this, viz being unable to pay their Debts. The common excuse is the Loss of Crop: But let many of those in Debts look into their Affairs, and they will find a good crop of Rice even sup-[155] [1] The rate in 1738 was 8 to 1; in 1737, 7.4 to 1. Wallace, Laurens, p. 53.

pos'd at 60 s. per C: not sufficient to pay all their Debts, nor will a good Crop next Year pay half the Debts now due to the trading Men in Town; and in Case a general good Crop should be made, depend upon, Rice will be under 40 s. per C.

If I may be so bold as to give my Advice in the Affair of Negroes, it would be this, that before any Planter offer to buy one more, or even to venture into a Negro Yard, he should first make up an Account of all he owes now to every Person, and then make a Calculation of what he may reasonably expect to make this Year. The most certain way to know this is, to sum up the Amounts of his last 4 Years Produce of the same Number of Hands a fourth Part of which he may expect to have this Year: For a wild Expectation of 10 Barrels per Negro only brings a Disappointment to the Owner, and in Time may prove his Ruin.

Suppose a Man has 20 Negroes, and for these 4 Years past has made in all 240 Barrels of Rice, he may expect to have 60 Barrels next Year, which at a Medium of Price will be about 700 £ Currency, now if that Person finds that he is in Debt 1000 £ or only 700 £ how can he engage for any further Payments Next Year, without exposing himself at the Mercy of his Creditors? But if the same Man finds he owes only 100 £ he may safely buy 2 Negroes and have a common Chance [to] pay [for] them besides his annual Charges. Would People take this prudent Method to think before they buy Negroes, it would in the End prove better for them. If they complain of the Merchants being pressing for Payments this Year, depend on it they will be worse next Year. Besides this Caution of those who are in Debt would make fewer Buyers and of Course cheaper Negroes, so that in Time they might be had here as cheap as in other Parts of America. But if any Person who can't pay his Debts now, encreases them by buying more Negroes, how can he desire any Person to have Patience 'till next Year? If his Slaves are then seized for Debt, who is to Blame? Is it not his own Act and Deed? Could he not have lived without these new Negroes? Buying the needful Apparel, Meat or Drink pleads for itself, as Mankind can't live without some Necessaries. Can any Man be certain of a better Crop next Year than he had last? If they can't they should not increase their Debts beyond absolute Necessity.

Were it possible to prevent any Negroes to be imported for 3 Years to come, I am persuaded it would be for the general Advantage of all the Inhabitants in this Province, and the only means to relieve us of the Load of Debts we are now owing to Great Britain, which I believe is equal to the Amount of 3 Years Produce.

156. News Items relating to Slave Trade, 1738.

May 4, 1738.

Several of the Negroes imported in the Ship London Frigate, which arrived here the 13th April last, have been since discovered to have the small Pox, there are few of them in Town but more in the Country and several were sent on board again, the ship having been ordered to fall down to the Fort to perform Quarentine.[1]

June 1, 1738.

On the 25th May last, two of the Sailors late on board the London Frigate, John Pickett Commander, appear'd before Maurice Lewis Esq., Judge of his Majesty's Court of Vice Admiralty, and made Oath, That they were on board said Vessel from her first setting out from England to her Arrival in Africa, and from thence to her Arrival at Charleston, and that during that time no Persons whatsoever were thrown over board, except about 14 Slaves, who died, as they believ'd of Fevers and Fluxes, and that, to the best of their Knowledge, no Person on board said Ship was taken ill of or discovered any symptoms of the Small-pox during the Voyage, nor till after the Day of Sale of the Negroes. N. B. The principal Depositions may be seen in the Records of the said Court of Vice-Admiralty.

157. William Wood to Thomas Hill, 1738.[1]

July 11, 1738.

. . . Nor do I know any one Person, either at London, Bristol, or Liverpool, Trading on his own Account to Carolina, either directly or by the Way of Africa, that is not an humble Suitor to his Majesty not only that Mr. Horsey[2] may be Instructed Not to pass any Law . . . for the Continuance of any Duties on the Importation of Negroes into Carolina.

[156] [1] The Gazette of May 11 contains a proclamation, signed by Joseph Wragg, declaring quarantine and ordering all slaves with the disease to be placed on board the London frigate. The first steps toward establishing a quarantine system were taken in 1698, when vessels were forbidden to pass a point one mile east of Sullivans Island until the pilot had ascertained from the captain whether there were contagious diseases on board (Cooper, II. 152). In the year 1712 a more determined effort to check the spread of disease was made: "Whereas great numbers of the inhabitants of this Province have been destroyed by malignant, contagious diseases, brought from Africa and other parts of America", a health officer was appointed who visited all vessels before anyone else was allowed on board, ordered masters to send their sick to the pest-house, and held vessels in quarantine for twenty days if anyone on board had died of a contagious disease. Ibid., II. 382-385.

[157] [1] Br. Trans., XIX. 218. The act of 1731 was to expire in August, 1738, and the indefatigable William Wood was early engaged in preventing its continuance. On Feb. 7 he wrote the board, urging it to see that the governor be instructed to prevent the passage of a similar law. South Carolina had no mind to give up the duty and on Mar. 25 the president of the council intimated that the assembly considered the act necessary and wished the governor to be so instructed. Ibid., pp. 3, 36, 56, 217.

[2] Col. Samuel Horsey was nominated for governor of South Carolina in 1727 and 1728. He was actually appointed governor in 1738, but died before he left England for the colony. McCrady, Royal Government, p. 178.

The Negroes will be kept at the House built by the late Charles Hill Esq; about a Mile up the broad Path, until the Morning of the Sale. And very great Regard will be had to ready Pay."

[6] "The Ship Mary Galley, Capt Robert —, belonging to Mr. Samuel Wragg, of London, was on the 4th Day of September, 1742 drove ashore, plundered, and destroy'd in the River Gambia, by the Natives; of which she had a Cargo on board. The Slaves rose, in the most barbarous Manner murdered the Ship's Crew, and obliged the said Captain and the Mate, Mr. David Donahew, to confine themselves in the Cabin for 27 Days, whence they at last made their Escape, by the Help of a Stage, to the French Island Senegale. This Advice was first brought from thence to Newfoundland, etc. and a Certificate thereof sent here, sign'd by the Commander in Chief and other Officers at Fort Louis in Senegale" (S. C. Gazette, Oct. 24, 1743). This news was copied by the Boston Gazette, Dec. 20, 1743, and the Boston News Letter, Dec. 22, 1743.

[7] Negroes seem not to have sold well this year, for the advertisements are frequently repeated after the date of sale has passed. As a result of the insurrection of slaves in 1739 an act was passed on Apr. 5, 1740, placing a tax of £10 current money on all those over 4 feet, 2 inches tall, £5 on those over 3 feet, 2 inches, and £2.10 on all others except "sucking children", the tax to be paid by the first purchaser and to be in force fifteen months, after which it was to be increased to £100, £50, and £25. Because of this prohibitive imposition there were no importations in 1741, 1742, 1743 (Cooper, III. 556). For an account of the negro insurrection, which may have caused the slow sales as well as the duty, see McCrady, Royal Government, pp. 185-187; Gentleman's Magazine, X. 127-129.

[8] "The extream cold Weather having obstructed the Sale of the Negroes on board the Ship Griffin as advertis'd to be sold the 17th Instant; This is to give Notice that there still remains a parcel of very healthy Negroes to be sold, on board said Ship lying at Mr. Motte's Wharff, where daily Attendance will be given till all are sold, by WILLIAM WALLACE and Comp. and PRINGLE and REID." S. C. Gazette, Dec. 25, 1740, Jan. 1, 8, 1741.

[9] The prohibitive tax imposed by the act of Apr. 5, 1740, went into effect July, 1741, and cut off all importation for three years. The appearance of Malachy Postlethwayte's The African Slave Trade the Great Pillar and Support of the British Plantation Trade in America was attributed to the effect which this act had on the business of the Bristol merchants. The adverse opinions of these merchants were by no means the only opinions which found expression in England: "It is very certain that South Carolina is overstock'd with blacks, in proportion to the number of white people: because it appears by the customhouse entries at Charles Town that there were imported from two to three thousand annually, before the temporary prohibition (now expired). Therefore it must be allow'd that three independent companies may and will be serviceable to awe and terrify the slaves. But then, to all disinterested men, it must appear more reasonable for the governor, council, and general assembly of that province to make proper laws and regulations to restrain the rich planters from keeping dangerous number of negroes, and to promote the increase of industrious and useful inhabitants than [that] the mother country should be at the expence of paying a standing force to keep them in obedience." Gentleman's Magazine, XV. 29, January, 1745.

[10] The Jason was a Bristol ship. At this time a drawback was allowed on negroes imported and within six months re-exported. Edmond Aitken, in a petition to the assembly, stated that he had bought twelve negroes from the ship Jason, and sent them by land to North Carolina for Nathaniel Rice. Rice had also purchased five from the Africa, Captain Hunt, sold by John Savage, that had been sent to North Carolina in the same way. He asked that the drawback be allowed him as if the negroes had been exported by water. The assembly assented and resolved that it should be the general rule that "negroes carried hence by land" should be granted the drawback ("Journal of Assembly," 1744, pp. 64-67). A further reference to the purchases of Rice is to be found in 1745. John Tinker, the governor of the Bahamas, sent a negro to Rice who had to be landed in South Carolina. On Jan. 26, 1745, John Reid's petition to cancel the bond given at the time the negro was landed was granted. Ibid., 1745, pp. 146-147, 153-154.

[11] A news item in the Gazette of May 18, 1745, reported the snow Tryall, William Jefferies, seized and sold in Havana.

159. Act for establishing Quarantine, 1744.[1]

An Act for the Further Preventing the Spreading of Contagious or Malignant Distempers in this Province.

Whereas, it hath been found by experience, that since the importation of negroes and slaves from the coasts of Africa into this Province, hath been prohibited, this Province in general and Charlestown in particular, hath been much more healthy than heretofore it hath been: and whereas, a sum of one thousand pounds current money hath been resolved to be provided for the building a pest house on Sullivan's Island, near the entrance into the port and harbour of Charlestown, for the reception of all infected or distempered persons which shall be brought into this Province; we humbly pray his most sacred Majesty that it may be enacted.

And be it enacted, by his Excellency James Glen, Esq., Governor-in-chief and Captain General in and over his Majesty's Plantations of South Carolina, by and with the advice and consent of his Majesty's Honorable Council and the Assembly of this Province, and by the authority of the same, That no ship or vessel which after the fifth day of July next after the passing of this Act, shall arrive or come into this Province over the bar of the harbour of Charlestown, with negroes from the coasts of Africa or elsewhere, shall be permitted upon any pretence whatsoever to come above Johnson's fort into Cooper or Ashley river, in this Province, before all the negroes imported or brought in such ship or vessell shall have been landed and put on shore on Sullivan's Island aforesaid, and there shall have remained for the space of ten days, or have been carried on shore five days in the said space of ten days, and shall remain on shore six hours in each of the said days in the summer, and five hours in the winter, that they shall be so on shore in, as the party's own election, for the better purifying and cleansing the said slaves and vessel from any infectious distemper; any law, usage or custom to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

And in case any negroes or slaves so imported and brought into this Province, over the bar of the harbor of Charlestown, shall be sold, landed or put on shore in any part of this Province, before such negroes or slaves have been landed and remained by the space of ten days, or carried and remained on shore five days, on Sullivan's Island, as aforesaid, (unless such negroes and slaves, upon apprehension of the dangers of a hurricane, or other imminent danger, shall be ordered by his Excellency the Governor or the [159] [1] Cooper, III. 773-774; see III. 643, for title of an act to prevent the spread of distempers.

Commander-in-chief for the time being, to be removed from thence to some other place in this Province, without the limits of Charlestown) all such negroes and slaves shall and they are hereby declared to be forfeited, the one half to his Majesty, for the use of the Government of this Province, to be applied as the General Assembly from time to time shall direct, and the other half to him or them that will inform and sue for the same, to be recovered in any court of record in this Province, wherein no essoign, protection, priviledge or wager of law shall be admitted or allowed, nor any more than one imparlance.

II. And be it further enacted, by the authority aforesaid, That in case any person or persons whoever, not having the permission of the Governor or Commander-in-chief for so doing, shall go on board any such ship or vessel, or to Sullivan's Island, while such negroes or slaves are there, such person and persons shall be obliged to remain on board such ship or vessel or at Sullivan's Island till the time which such negroes shall be obliged to remain at Sullivan's Island shall be expired, under the penalty of one hundred pounds proclamation money, to be recovered and applied as is above directed. And in case such person or persons shall not be able to pay the said penalty, it shall and may be lawful for any two justices of the peace, and they are hereby required and authorized, to order such corporal punishment to be inflicted on such person or persons, not extending to life or limb, and not exceeding thirty-nine stripes, as they shall judge proper.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no mariner or seaman whatever, arriving in any such ship or vessel, shall be permitted on any account or pretence whatever to come to Charlestown till the time directed for such negroes to continue at Sullivan's Island shall be expired, under the penalty of one hundred pounds proclamation money, to be recovered and applied as aforesaid.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the masters or commanders of every ship or vessel that shall arrive with negroes as aforesaid, before such ship or vessel be permitted to pass Johnson's Fort, shall be and they are hereby obliged and required to make oath before the commander of the said fort that they have complied with the directions of this Act, which oath the commander of the said fort is hereby required and impowered to administer.

V. Provided always, That nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to extend to any negroes brought into this Province from any English colony, not for sale, but for the use of the importers only. Provided also that this Act shall only continue to be in force for the term of three years from the passing thereof, and from thence to the end of the next session of the General Assembly, and no longer.[2]

160. Henry Laurens to George Austin, 1748.[1]

London, 17 December, 1748.

George Austin, Charles Town [2]

Dear Sir, . . . I am a Little at a loss who to propose for Security in case of any offer of Negro Consignments as it has been hinted to me that Messrs. Shubrick's are getting into that Branch, however I shall take an opportunity to ask Mr. R S.[3] if he'll be your Security and then on my Account I have some reason to believe Mr. Crokatt [4] would stand my friend but I can't say I am at present inclined to ask so great a favour. on this head I shall better determine when at Liverpool or Bristol and in the mean time hope the pleasure of a few Lines from you in which perhaps you may say more on this subject.

[2] On May 11, 1754, an act was passed setting aside one-fifth of the duty paid by the first purchasers of negroes for the building of the pest-house (Cooper, IV. 11). In 1759 there was passed a law, containing provisions probably more drastic than those enforced by any other colony, certainly more drastic than those of the West Indies, by which any vessel having on board ten negroes was obliged to lie in the harbor ten days, to be visited by a physician on the ninth day, who should certify that there was no cause for its further detention. Ibid., IV. 78-86.

[160] [1] Laurens Letter-Book. The collection of Laurens papers, invaluable for its contribution to the economic history of South Carolina, is in the possession of the South Carolina Historical Society, which is publishing it in its quarterly Bulletin. For those letters or parts of letters which appear in this volume the editor is indebted to the generosity of that society. Unless otherwise noted, reference to the Laurens Letter-Books is always to the South Carolina collection. The material possessed by the Brooklyn Historical Society yielded nothing pertinent to the subject of the slave trade, and the provenance of those letters which come from the Pennsylvania Historical Society is always stated. From this point the history of the Carolina trade is largely to be written from the Laurens letters. Laurens had, in September, 1748, gone to England to make the necessary business connections for the new firm, Austin and Laurens. It is to be remembered that these are Laurens's copies of the letters, not the originals.

[2] It was Laurens's custom, in copying his letters into the letter-book, to add to the date the place in which his correspondent lived. These place-names have been transferred, to follow the name of the correspondent, and have been italicized, to distinguish them from the names of those places from which Laurens was writing. When the letter is written in Charleston the place does not appear in the Letter-Books.

[3] On Dec. 24 Laurens wrote, "Mr Richd Shubrick has promised if needfull to become your Security". No advertisements for the sale of negro cargoes by Messrs. Shubrick and Co. appear until 1755. S. C. Gazette, July 17, 1755.

[4] James Crokatt, who had been for a number of years in business in Charleston, but had in 1739 returned to London. In 1741, as a Carolina merchant and member of the council, he appeared before the Board of Trustees of Georgia to answer the questions of the Earl of Egmont (post, no. 399, Mar. 19). For an account of the relations between Laurens and Crokatt see Wallace, Laurens, pp. 15-19.

[161] [1] Here arises one of the puzzles in the South Carolina legislation. In April, 1746, the legislature revived the act of 1740 for five years (Cooper, III. 670). On the face of it this seems to prohibit importation until 1751, yet the trade was obviously renewed in 1749.

Wallace attempts to solve the difficulty by concluding that the act was to be in effect but three years and that it was imposed in 1745 not 1746. Wallace, Laurens, p. 83; post, no. 163, n. 2.

The Gazette of Dec. 8, 1759, gives the arrivals for 1749 as 72, all of whom are assigned to June 24. The Reverend John Newton was mate on a vessel which sold slaves in Charleston in 1749. Newton, Life, p. 103.

[2] "June 5th, 1749. This Day arrived from the Windward Coast of Africa, the Bill. Hector, Capt. Peter Bostock, with a choice Parcel of young healthy Slaves: To be sold by the Subscribers, in Charles-Town, the 20th Instant, Credit will be given 'till the first of January next, giving Security if required. JOHN MACKENZIE [and] KEN. and BENJ. MICHIE. Great Abatement will be made for ready Money." S. C. Gazette, June 12, 1749.

[3] To be sold "at private sale".

[4] "A Computation of Negroes required for the use of the American Plantations. As no Gold Coast Slaves are required for North America, we distinguish the following Seperately. . . . Carolina, Some Years ago used to take about 1000 but now they take very few, occastion'd by a high Duty laid, which in effect answered the End of a prohibition but suppose the demand revives 1000." C. O. 388: 45, B. T. Commercial, ser. I., b 7.

[5] The slaves were to be sold "at the house of Mrs. Mary Sureau up the path". "The Condition of Sale is, Credit to the first of January next, without Interest, giving Security, if required by WILLIAM GLEN. N. B. Five per cent Discount will be allowed on all Sums paid down. The Sale to begin at eleven in the forenoon precisely." S. C. Gazette, July 2, 1750.

[6] The Amoretta, Samuel Timberman, the property of Joseph Ives and Company, had delivered 185 negroes in Virginia in 1749.

[7] On Nov. 5 the following notice appeared: "About One Hundred choice healthy Negroes, most of them Gambia and Gold Coast Slaves, just imported from Barbadoes, by ROBERT PRINGLE and Comp." The only vessel entered from Barbados was the Charles. The Gazette of Dec. 8, 1759, records the arrival of 140 on or before Sept. 29, and 302 Dec. 25, 1750, giving the sum of these two items (442) as the importation for the year.

[8] The Gazette of Dec. 8, 1759, gives arrivals as 535 for Sept. 29, and 296 up to Dec. 25, a total of 831 for the year.

[9] The advertisement reads: "Just imported, and to be sold in Charles-Town, on Wednesday the first of May, about seventy choice healthy Negroes from the West Indies, mostly of the Gold Coast and were the choice of two cargoes, by JOSEPH PICKERING. N. B. None will be sold 'till the first of May as above."

[10] "Just Imported in the Brigantine Orrel, Samuel Lacer Commander directly from Gambia, in a Passage of Seven Weeks, a Cargo of healthy fine Slaves, to be sold on Wednesday the 7th Day of August, by AUSTIN and LAURENS" (S. C. Gazette, July 29, Aug. 5, 1751). The Orrel, a Liverpool vessel, was reported as having arrived there Nov. 17. Ibid., Jan. 27, 1752.

[11] This cargo was evidently sold on board the snow and at any time, as no date of sale was announced: "A Parcel of new Negro Men, The choice of a large cargo lately arrived at Antigua". By Dec. 20 Oates had ceased to advertise negroes, though he was still offering other imported articles for sale.

162. Governor James Glen's Description of South Carolina, 1749.[1]

. . . And the Importation of Negroe Slaves which formerly was a considerable article of expense to us, hath not only been saved for a time, but is likely to continue so for the future, a law having been made in this Province whereby a duty was laid on Negroes import'd here, that it amounted to a prohibition:[2] and though since the expiration of that Law,[3] the war hath hitherto prevented any from being imported, I do not find that in about nine years time, our number of negroes is diminished, but on the contrary, increased: so that from all appearances the negroes bred from our own Stock, will continually recruit and keep it up, if not enable us to supply the sugar Colonies with a small number of Negroes. . . .

163. Henry Laurens to Foster Cunliffe, 1749.[1]

Liverpoole 20th Janry. 1748[9].

Foster Cunliffe Esqr. Liverpool

. . . I can venture to assure you there is a Prospect of good Sales for Negroes in that Province [Carolina] as Rice promises fair to be a good Commodity, the Quantity heretofore exported being greatly reduc'd by our attention to the Indigo . . . and we have good reason to hope for success in this Last article and that it will make a very considerable addition in our remittances to Great Brittain. If you should do anything in this Branch I beg Leave to offer our service on the following terms To Load the Ship which imports the Slaves with such produce as can be had at the Season, pay Coast Commission there, make good all debts and remitt the Amount according to the times of Payment if freight can be obtain'd and as much in Bill as we may procure with Cash arising from the Sales, our Commission 10 per Ct. and if Requir'd we are ready to give Security in England in any reasonable sum for remitting the Proceeds.

[162] [1] "Glen's Description of South Carolina", Carroll, Collections, II. 224.

[2] About the date or approximate date of expiration of this troublesome act there can be no question. Colonel Vanderdusen had written on May 25, 1748, "that the Importation of Slaves had been greatly interrupted by an Act passed there some Years ago laying a Duty upon them but that the Act had expired or was near it" (Br. Trans., XXIII. 13). In June, 1748, Governor Glen was gently warned against allowing the duty to be continued by another act. Ibid., p. 124.

[3] The description as printed in Weston's Documents connected with the History of South Carolina (p. 92) reads, "and tho the law expired some time since".

[163] [1] Foster, Ellis, and Robert Cunliffe soon after this time became Liverpool members of the newly created Company of Merchants trading to Africa, as were Edward Traford, John Knight, and James Pardoe, to whom Laurens wrote similar letters (Laurens Letter-Book; Gomer Williams, Liverpool Privateers, p. 674). Cunliffe shipped negroes to Virginia as well as to Charleston, and, since he was a dealer in Maryland tobacco, it is reasonable to surmise that he may have sold negroes in that province also, but no trace of such sales has been discovered in the letter-book of his Maryland agent Henry Callister.

Our House at Charles Town will be under the name of George Austin and Henry Laurens. we shall be very Glad of oppertunity to open a Correspondance with your good self or your friends and shall endeavour to act so as may increase the same to mutual Interest.

164. Henry Laurens to George Austin, 1749.

George Austin, Chas Town

. . . Mr. Lewis introduced me to Sir Hugh Briggs who was so kind to give me Letters of recommendation to Mr. Foster Cunliffe, Mr. Edward Traford and Mr. John Knight, very considerable Merchants in Leverpool. those Gentlemen received me with great [blank] of respect and have promis'd to do us all the service in their Power. I have made each of them offers in the Guinea Business agreeable to your Standard and hope in a few days to hear further from some of them. at Leverpool I met with Mr. Pardoe of Worcesster who is now fitting out the Pardoe, Galter, and Lamb, [illegible],[1] for Gambia and Carolina and has promis'd to address them both to us in case of the miscarriage of Messrs. Perry and Taylors lately gone to establish a House at Carolina and has given me direction agreeably dated 23 Ulto. . . . I shall now embrace the first good Opportunity and return to Charles Town but can't determine if I shall ship any goods from London or this place till I have further discourse with some Gentlemen on the African Trade. I forgot to mention that Capt. Whitfield yesterday introduced me to Mr. Farr [2] and some other Gentlemen who are now about sending a Ship for Negroes and I believe not fix'd on a House at Carolina to address them to.

165. Henry Laurens to James Pardoe, 1749.

Bristol 21st Febry. 1748[9].

James Pardoe, Leverpool

Sir, . . . I have one Letter which says Negroes would sell at a monstrous price and I can't learn of any Ships from this Port gone with Slaves yet 'tho some Gentn. talk of being soon con-

[164] [1] The cargo of the Pardoe is announced for private sale by Messrs. Perry and Taylor in the Gazette, Oct. 30, 1749. This is the only negro cargo handled by this house which the editor has found, though the next year Ralph Taylor, possibly one of the partners, sold that of the Telemachus. There seems to be no evidence that the Lamb ever arrived in Charleston. Galter was in 1751 master of the Penelope, belonging to Pardoe. See ante p. 222.

[2] Richard Farr of Bristol, to whom Laurens wrote Feb. 18 giving him the terms on which the new firm expected to handle the African trade and setting forth his reasons for believing it to be a favorable time for Guinea cargoes.

cern'd that way, if your Pardoe and Lamb arrive in common time I imagine their Cargoes will meet with a very profittable Sale. . . .

166. Henry Laurens to Isaac Hobhouse, 1749.[1]

London 16th March 1748[9].

Isaac Hobhouse, Bristol

. . . I have ask'd Mr. James Crokatt if he would hold a concern in a Guinea Vessel with Slaves to Carolina which he declines saying that he is fully employ'd with Business on Commission and chuses to be confin'd in that way. if your good self or friends should do any thing in that Branch of Trade or any other to Carolina I beg leave to repeat the offer of service from Geo. Austin and Henry Laurens assuring you that any concerns you may be pleas'd to put under our direction we shall be carefull to conduct with integrity and in the best manner for your advantage. . . .

[166] [1] Hobhouse was probably entirely familiar with the Carolina trade (see ante, no. 152, n. 11). Laurens follows the paragraph here printed with a statement of terms as given to Cunliffe (ante, no. 163). There is no indication in these letters that Laurens considered conditions in South Carolina so depressing as they seemed to a writer in the Gentleman's Magazine (XXI. 39-40), who wrote of 200 insolvent debtors who had petitioned for relief. The frequent failures in the colony this author attributed to lack of sufficient currency and the undue amount of credit which had been extended.

[167] [1] Only those items relating to the negro trade have been extracted from the somewhat haphazard accounts of the miscellaneous business carried on by Austin and Laurens, as well as by other Charleston merchants. Most, if not all, of the merchants who advertised negroes in the Gazette were doing a general business, of which their trade in negroes was but a part.

[168] [1]For this year the Gazette provides figures more complete than can be derived from the advertisements of the merchants, as each issue reports the number of importations since Nov. 1, 1751.

Feb. 1, 327	Apr. 13, 420	Aug. 10, 1405	Nov. 6, 1572
Feb. 8, 355	Apr. 27, 650	Oct. 3, 1490	Dec. 25, 1865
Feb. 22, 403	May 18, 1066	Oct. 9, 1491
Mar. 16, 411	May 28, 1071	Oct. 16, 1512

This makes the monthly importation about as follows: February 76, March 8, April 239, May 421, June, July, and ten days of August 334, September 85, October 82, November and December 293. At Beaufort 19 are reported between Nov. 12, 1752, and Jan. 1, 1753 (S. C. Gazette, Jan. 1, 1753). These figures bear no relation whatsoever to those reported in the Gazette of Dec. 8, 1759, for 1752. For the quarter ending Mar. 25 the number given is 33; June 24, 50, Sept. 29, 212; and Dec. 25, 16—a total of but 311.

[2] "Just Imported in the Ship Emperor, Charles Gwin Commander, about Two Hundred and Fifty fine healthy Slaves directly from Africa; to be sold on Wednesday the 29th Instant, and none will be sold before that day, by AUSTIN and LAURENS" (S. C. Gazette, Apr. 20, 27, 1752); "To be sold to the highest Bidder, on Tuesday the 12th Instant, at the Vendue-House in Charles Town, A Parcel of healthy Congo Slaves, Chiefly Men and Women, Just imported by the Emperor, Capt. Gwynn, directly from the Coast. Credit will be given till the first of January next, giving Security if required, by AUSTIN and LAURENS." Ibid., May 4, 1752.

[3] "On Thursday the 9th Day of November next, will be sold at Auction at the usual Place in Charles-Town, about Sixty very likely new Negro Men, Women, Boys and Girls, just imported in the Brigantine Two Friends, Abraham Hammett Master, from Barbados. Credit will be given 'till the first Day of March next, giving Security if required, and a Discount will be allowed for prompt Payment, by GLENN and COOPER. N. B. The Treasurer's Certificates issued before the Year 1752, will be taken in Payment." S. C. Gazette, Oct. 30, Nov. 6, 1752.

[4] "To be Sold, on Wednesday the 29th Instant, a very healthy fine Cargo of Slaves, imported directly from the Coast of Guiney, in the Eugene, Capt. Merrick. Great encouragement will be given to such as pay ready Money or the present Crop, by AUSTIN and LAURENS. N. B. The Treasurer's Certificates issued before the Year 1752, will be taken in Payment" (S. C. Gazette, Nov. 13, 20, 1752). The note was added to the advertisement on its second appearance.

[5] The Boston News Letter, Nov. 23, 1752, announced that the Vine, Robert Rantin, of Liverpool, bound from Barbados for Charleston with slaves, had been driven ashore. The cargo was saved. This vessel is not listed among the Liverpool slavers of 1752 (this work, II. 496-498). Indeed none of the vessels arriving in Charleston in 1752 or 1753 is to be found in the Liverpool list.

[6] The Gazette's cumulative returns of negroes imported since Nov. 1, 1752, are as follows:

Jan. 15, 305	Feb. 19, 351	June 4, 511	Sept. 10, 1345
Jan. 22, 326	Mar. 19, 399	Aug. 15, 511	Sept. 17, 1615
Jan. 29, 333	Apr. 2, 403	Aug. 27, 781	Oct. 15, 1665
Feb. 5, 349	May 28, 414	Sept. 3, 929

Of the 305 on Jan. 15, 293 were reported on Dec. 25, 1752. The agreement between this list and the cargoes advertised is sufficiently close to give assurance that few vessels are missing. Of the nine cargoes during the year, Austin and Laurens received three, two of these very considerable ones, the third probably smaller, as it came in the Orrel, which had brought but 86 on her previous voyage. The report in the Gazette of Dec. 8, 1759, is not given for the calendar year but estimated for that period it is roughly 1787.

[7] The Thomas, capacity 200 negroes, was owned by G. Campbell and Co., Liverpool. Williams, Liverpool Privateers, p. 677.

[8] "On Wednesday the 5th of September next, Will be sold An exceedingly fine Cargo of 350 Healthy Negroes, just imported in the Ship Emperor, Captain Charles Gwynn, directly from Angola, by AUSTIN and LAURENS."

"Also, on the same Day as above, will be sold, A Cargo of exceeding fine Healthy Slaves, just imported in the Brigantine Orrel, Capt. Bennet, directly from the River Gambia, by AUSTIN and LAURENS." S. C. Gazette, Aug. 27, Sept. 3, 1753.

[9] In 1754 Peter Bostock reported to the Board of Trade that in December, 1752, he had been driven from Shallis in the Kingdom of Dowell [Damel] by the arrival of the French. Here he had found the finest trade he had ever seen and natives who wondered why the English never sent vessels there. C. O. 388: 46 Ee 18; T 70: 143, p. 307. See C. O. 388: 44 Cc 73, for an earlier reference to Captain Bostock.

[10] The importations reported in the Gazette after Nov. 1, 1753, were as follows:

Jan. 1	17	Mar. 19	175	May 28	1169	July 18	1645
" 15	87	" 26	175	June 4	1169	" 25	1739
" 22	111	Apr. 2	175	" 11	1321	Aug. 15	1928
" 29	117	" 16	246	" 20	1321	Sept. 5	2206
Feb. 19	128	May 14	402	July 4	1494	Nov. 7	2330
" 26	165	" 21	402	" 11	1504

No figures are given after those of Nov. 7. This makes the importation for the year 2313. It is reported in the Gazette of Dec. 9, 1759, as 3648, though the figures given total but 2648.

[11] "To be Sold, on Tuesday the 26th Instant, by Thomas Smith on the Bay in Charles-Town, Twenty four new Gold Coast Negroes, viz. 15 men, 6 women, 2 boys, and 1 girl, just imported in the ship Molly and Sally, from Barbados." S. C. Gazette, Feb. 19, 26, 1754.

[12] In the midst of a list of miscellaneous goods this firm inserted in its advertisement of Jan. 22, 1754, "Also imported, in the last vessels from the West Indies, N-England, and N-York About Thirty healthy and likely Negro Men and Women, mostly Gambia's and Coromantees".

[13] "Capt. Thomas Betson, late Master of a Snow belonging to London, which was run ashore and lost on the Coast of Africa about 2 Years ago, by the Negroes she had on board, is arrived here in Capt. Colquhoun, from Siera Leon." S. C. Gazette, Sept. 5, 1754.

[14] "To be Sold, on Thursday the 5th of September next, a Cargo Of fine Healthy Slaves Of the same Countries as come from the River Gambia: Imported in the Snow Africa, William Mason Commander, directly from Siera Leon. AUSTIN and LAURENS." Ibid., Aug. 29, 1754.

[15] The colorless announcement of the sale of Captain Ross's negroes gives no notion of the adventures he had encountered before he reached Charleston with this cargo. The story begins with Captain Peter Bostock, of the Prince George, who when he reached Charleston in 1752 had reported a number of French men-of-war on the coast and preparations for an expansion of French trade in territory which the English had come to regard as their own. In a skirmish in which he, the natives, and perhaps the French were involved, he had seized and carried off several free natives (S. C. Gazette, May 11, 1752; C. O. 388: 46, 1754, May 9, Ee 18, 23). In retaliation the natives seized Captain Ross, who was also accused of stealing blacks (C. O. 388: 46 Ee 31; Admiralty Papers, I., Feb. 28, Mar. 12, 1754). The items in the Gazette concerning the Young Prince George report part of this to Charleston readers:

May 3, 1754, "Arrived from this or other Ports . . . The Young Prince George, Rosse, in the River Gambia".

July 11, "By Capt. Hunt, from Gambia, we learn, that the Sloop Young Prince-George, of this Port, which has been some Time expected from thence, was lately taken by the French, near Senegal".

July 18, "The Account in our last of the Young Prince-George Sloop's being taken by the French, was premature. The Captain (Rosse) had been to trade at a Place call'd Port Dallia, and was made Prisoner with his People, by the Natives, but made his Escape; and his Sloop was safe in Gambia River, when the last Vessel came away. Capt. Rosse writes, that a Sloop from London, one Trumbull [Turnbull?] Master, had been taken at Port Dallia, and plundered of her Cargo, Sails and Rigging and the Captain with all his Crew carried off by the Natives, but that the Vessel was retaken by a London Snow passing that Way" (also in Boston News Letter, Aug. 22, 1754).

Sept. 19, "We hear, that the Young Prince George, of and for this Port, from Gambia, John Rosse Master, was spoke with a few days ago, to the Southward, and had 50 or 60 Slaves on board".

The presence of the French in the Gambia River and their capture of a sloop from Liverpool was referred to in the Gazette of May 14.

169. Governor James Glen to the Board of Trade, 1754.[1]

August 26, 1754.

. . . There have been already Imported since the 1st of November upwards of 2000 Negroes, and there are some Ships that are still expected from Africa with more, they have all been readily sold and at great Prices, the men for 250, 260, and 270 Pounds Currency and the Women for 200, the Boys and Girls for little less; Some years agoe the usual prices were 170 or 180 pounds for the best picked men to be paid in Rice the following Crop, but they are now all purchased for ready money or with bonds bearing Interest, which are really as good as ready money, for I know of few or no Planters whose Credit is suspected. As Negroes are sold at higher Prices here than in any part of the King's Dominions we have them sent from Barbadoes, the Leeward Islands, Jamaica, Virginia and New York, this I think is a plain proof that this Province is in a flourishing condition, for these Importations are not to supply the place of Negroes worn out with hard work or lost by Mortallity which is the case in our Islands where were it not for an annual accretion they could not keep up their stock, but our number encreases even without such yearly supply. I presume tis Indigo that puts all in such high Spirits. . . .

[170] [1] The Gazette, on Dec. 8, 1759, gave 1305 as the total importation for 1755. Of the sixteen cargoes advertised in the Gazette Laurens in his letters mentioned eleven, giving the numbers in the cargoes of seven, the total of his figures amounting to 1264. If the cargoes of those not specified averaged as much we should have an importation of over 2000, but it is probable that Laurens named the larger cargoes. The Gazette of Oct. 16, 1755, gave 1275 as the number imported since the preceding Nov. 1. Four cargoes were advertised after that date. Eleven firms advertised newly arrived slaves during the year, Austin and Laurens announcing cargoes which amounted to 383 negroes.

[2] The owners of the Hare were Samuel and William Vernon of Newport, R. I. See this work, III. 146, 149-164, 166-173.

[3] The co-operation of two well-established houses in selling these negroes leads to the conjecture that the cargo was a large one, which the sellers feared that they might have difficulty in disposing of.

171. Instructions to Governor William Lyttleton, 1755.[1]

§29. Whereas Acts have been passed in some of our Plantations in America, for laying Duties on the Importation and Exportation of Negroes, to the great discouragement of the Merchants trading thither from the Coast of Africa.[2] . . . It is Our Will and Pleasure, that you do not give your assent to or pass any Law imposing Duties upon Negroes imported into Our Province of South Carolina, payable by the Importer or upon any Slaves Exported, that have not been sold in Our said Province and continued for the space of twelve months.

172. Henry Laurens to William Whaley, 1755.[1]

12th May 1755.

William Whaley, Liverpool

Sir, . . . We have had no arrivals yet this Year from Africa save a Rhode Island Sloop[2] from Serralione wth 70 Slaves and another of New York[3] with about 40 now under Quarantine from Gambia. this Vessell brings an acct. that Slaves were very scarce in that River but we presume She came away before the usual season of their Comeing down as she has now been from there Eight Weeks. She says there was 4 or 5 Sail of Vessells just arriv'd in the River when she came away, one of them from your Port which by the [171] [1] Br. Trans., XXVI. 291. William Lyttleton was governor from 1756 to 1760. Similar instructions were given to Thomas Boone when he became governor in 1761. McCrady, Royal Government, p. 378.

[2] South Carolina had passed a duty act in 1751, the preamble of which stated the reason for the tax to be the intention to provide a fund for the settling of the province with white inhabitants. A duty of £10 was laid on all negroes over four feet two inches, £5 on those between that and three feet two inches, for all under three feet two inches, £2 10 s. Notice must be given of the importation and sale, the importer must give security for the payment of the duties, and the purchaser must pay the duty before he removed the negro. In case a slave was re-exported within six months of his arrival the exporter received a drawback of three-fourths of the duty. The additional tax on slaves from other plantations was £50 unless it could be certified that the slave had not been in the colony six months. Cooper, III. 739-743.

[172] [1] Laurens Letter-Book. William Whaley (or Whalley, as the name appears in Williams, Liverpool Privateers) was a Liverpool member of the newly created Company of Merchants trading to Africa. He and his house were owners of the Ann, a Guineaman which in 1753 carried 340 slaves from Calabar. Ibid., pp. 674-675.

For the years 1755 and 1756 we have an opportunity to follow the progress of the trade from day to day. Not only is it unusual to gain so close a view of the slave trade, it is seldom that any aspect of the economic life of the past can be viewed in such detail. For this reason a large number of letters for these years is published. The same is true for the year 1764. It might be added that an equally large number of letters has been omitted.

[2] The Hare, Caleb Godfrey. On the next voyage of the Hare her cargo was assigned to Austin and Laurens.

description of the Master must be Capt. Bennett.[4] we are alarmd here with the expectation of a Sudden Warr with France. if the Reports prove true the Rice Planter will have but little encouragement to purchase Slaves but those who run upon Indigo which are no inconsiderable Number wont be at all discourag'd.[5] We have a large share of these Chaps always apply to us when we are posses'd of Slaves so that we shoud not fear of makeing as speedy and Good Sales as any body can here if a Warr shoud alter the present System of things. the Rhode Island Mans Slaves avarag'd upwards of £29. Sterling and those of the New Yorker will go of[f] as well. indeed a good Cargo just now we judge would sell as well as at any time Precedeing. . . .

173. Henry Laurens to Devonshire, Reeve, and Lloyd, 1755.

Devonsheir [1] Reeve and Lloyd, Bristol per Pearse

Gentn. . . . A fine Cargo of Slaves would do well just now, wish the Emperor [2] could find the way here with such a one but we can hear no Tidings of her 'tho we have Vessells lately arriv'd from most part of the West Indias, one from Barbadoes that has been now out but 17 days. We should begin to suspect the French had began a War by making a sweep of our Trade upon the Coast of Africa but that we have two Vessells arriv'd from thence that have not been out a great while, one a Sloop of New York from Gambia with about 40 Slaves the other, the Matilda of your place with near 200 both of these Vessells having the small Pox must perform a long Quarantine which will be a vast injury to the latter if any number should drop in before she sells because Callabar Slaves wont go

[4] Capt. James Bennett, Orrel, owner John Knight of Liverpool. The Orrel had made at least three previous voyages to Charleston with slaves. Austin and Laurens announce in the Gazette cargoes received by the Orrel, July 29, 1751, Aug. 27, 1753, and July 18, 1754. Bennett had been the master in the voyage of 1754, Samuel Lacer in the earlier voyages. On the 22d Laurens wrote to Whaley that he had heard from Bennett, who reported twelve vessels in the Gambia River and very dull trade.

[5] Since France and Spain were the most profitable markets for rice, war would destroy the rice trade, but would not so seriously affect that of indigo, which was rapidly developing in South Carolina. Also the rice planters were better supplied with negroes than were the indigo producers, whose industry was a new one.

[173] [1] This spelling of Devonshire is the one consistently used by Laurens.

We are now at the 26th May. since writing the Preceding We have a Letter from Mr. James Smith of St. Kitts dated the 2d Current in which he acknowledges the receipt of a Letter from us to be handed to Capt. Jefferis,[4] immediately goes on to tell us two Guinea Men had lately sold there one of them one Capt Rice from Angola. We naturally expected he was going to tell us in what situation Jefferis was in when Rice came away but says nothing more than that he shall deliver our Letter immediately on Jefferis arrival. We presume Jefferis must have been well for had it been otherways he would naturally have mentiond it. She will make a tedious Voyage we fear, wish it may end well.

per the Benjamin, Capt. Dickinson

Gentn., . . . We thank you for the care of our Letters to the Gentn. in your Neighbourhood and your intention of delivering that to the Captn. of the Pearl immediately on her arrival. It would have given us great pleasure to have heard through Capt. Rice how he left that Vessell as she has been out on the Voyage now near 12 months. from this we might have formed some judgment of the Emperor, Capt. Gwynn, a Ship we are largely concernd in. She saild from Cork for Malimba the 31st July and we can get no tidings of her further than that she had a short Passage to Angola. She had a Cargo out largely calculated for the purchase of 570 Slaves and we are told that one Capt. Carruthers of the Jesse that touchd at your place in his way to Jamaica should say that Gwynn would not be able to purchase more than 350 at which rate she must make but a ragged Voyage; her Cargo and Outset was above £7000 Sterling. was she to appear soon the prices with us might be some help as

[3] July 10, 1755, Laurens to John Knight, Liverpool, who was owner or part owner of the Knight, the Orrel, and the Thames: "We have nothing yet reachd us from Gambia nor any other part of the Coast later than the Pearl; on Wednesday next will be a Sale of 160 Callabars per the Matilda of Bristol who has lain 6 or 7 Weeks Quarantine on account of the small Pox, these Slaves will now sell well if no other Vessells pop in before the Sale but should that happen many that would buy these when none others can be had would forego the purchase for a Fortnight to get them of some other Country."

Sept. 6, 1755, Laurens to Peter Furnell, Jamaica: "stout healthy Fellows sell to most advantage with us, the Country not material if they are not from Callabar which Slaves are quite out of repute from numbers in every Cargo that have been sold with us destroying themselves."

[4] William Jefferies of the Pearl, owned by Thomas Easton and Co. of Bristol.

Slaves just now would sell very well. We have two Guinea Vessells now in port and both under a Quarantine for the small Pox so they wont be allowd to sell in less than a month or two, between them they have not more than 240 Slaves which are but a trifle to the number wanted. could you have sent 60 or 70 fine Slaves in Compa. with Mr. Crooke as you proposd We think we must have rendered an agreeable Account of them but we cannot promise that will be the case a while hence as 'tis impossible to judge what number may arrive with us this Summer. If we see two or three months hence that our imports are but small it may be worth while to take a share with you in One or two hundred to be here in the months of October and November. our Common method of selling Slaves arrived at what time they will is for payment in January or March following, if they are a very fine parcel Purchasers often appear that will produce the ready money in order to command a preference. the engagements we enter into in the Slave Trade are these to load the Ship with such Produce as can be got, pay the Coast Commissions and Mens half Wages and to remit the remainder as the payments shall grow due. We sold three Cargo's last Year after the first of July [1] and every shilling was remitted for them by the 18th March and every preceding Year has been much the same. all our Remittances hitherto but trifles have been Bills of Exchange at 30 or 40 days sight, an entire parcel of fine negroes must enable us to remit quicker than we can for a Cargo which consists of a mixture of all sorts and sizes, for the ordinary and small Slaves we must sell on such terms of payment as we can, those which are prime enable us to pick our Customers. at some times of the Year we can advance for our Friends without any inconvenience at others when we have large orders for Produce it is very inconvenient as our Planters produce such as is fine always commands Cash down. thus we have given you the best Account we can of our African business if at any time you should be disposed to try it be assurd it shall be our endeavours to give you satisfaction. . . .[2]

If She [ship Sarah] Comes down the most Certain Article we can recommend to be Sent by her is a few fine Negro Men (not Callabars). We dont know how things are just now in Jamaica be them as they will there may be Strange alterations before the Sarah can return; which is the fullest and best reply we are able to give to your favour before us. . . .

[2] The paragraphs omitted deal with the general trade between South Carolina and the West Indies. Laurens reports that South Carolina will no longer have corn and peas to ship, as the planters who have hitherto raised them are devoting their efforts to the more profitable indigo. He also discourages the sending of rum and molasses to South Carolina as it is difficult to find sale for it.

Wells Wharton and Doran, St. Christophers
per the Benjamin, Capt Dickinson

Gentlemen, Your kind favour of the 28th Decem now before us did not reach us till 14th March, from which time we have had no oppertunity of replying to it, We are sorry Capt. Raite in the Earl of Radnor [1] brought down so sickly a Cargo that you could not Venture to Stop her at so low a limit as £21. per head, from this we conclude that She must have made the Gentlemen concern'd but a bad Voyage; are glad she did not Come here as a sickly Cargo from Callabar at that Season of the Year especially would have mov'd very heavily and very probably have been order'd a long Quarantine; had they been healthy and in good flesh we shoud. have been glad to have seen her as there never was a better opening for a Cargo of Calabar Slaves than in the Months of Octor, and Novem last oweing to a Number of Small Indigo Planters finding a ready sale for their Crops a 32/6 to 35/ per [?] which brought them in such large sums they were all mad for more Negroes, and gave for very ordinary Calabar Men £250. Cash; Our Imports this Year hitherto have been very small none yet sold but a few small Parcels from Barbadoes and a little Cargo of about 70 in a Sloop of Rhode Island Capt. Godfrey from Gambia; a few of the fine Men sold so high as £280. or £40. Sterling but our People will not Currently give that Price, they seem very content to give £260. for Men and a large Number would this day sell at that rate. We have two from Africa now under Quarantine on Acct of the small Pox One of them a Sloop of New York Griffith Master with abo't 40 Slaves from Gambia, the other the Matilda of Bristol from Calabar with 90, these we apprehend cant be sold this Month or two; many more Vessells are expected but if a Warr with France should take place which we seem to be at the 'Eve of we presume most of them will stop in the West Indias. such an event would give a sudden Check to the Rice Planters but not at all to those who go upon Indigo, so that we judge we may have vend for abo't half the Number in time of Warr that we have in Peace say from 12 to 1500 per Annum; We are sorry Capt. Darbyshires Tender brought no more than 60 Slaves as our Good Freind Mr. Knight promis'd himself 100 by her, but Mr. Furnell [2] advises us from Jamaica that he made a great sale of Darbyshires Cargo sold abo't 350 Slaves at upwards of £45 per head, that money which we think must make up for the defficiency of the other; We were empowr'd to order down here 100 of the Prime Men out of Darbyshires Cargo, but did not chuse to do it being of Opinion we could not for those Slaves exceed the Prices at Jamaica, Our People like the Gambia and Windward coast full as well or the Angola Men such as are larger. The Contracts we enter into for Slaves is to load the Ship wth Produce when it can be had, to pay coast Commission and Half Wages, to remit the remainder as Payments shall grow due; which makes that Business sufficiently heavy in this Country for in our small Business, w[h]ere we would not out of Choice receive above 700 Slaves per Annum,[3] we are often in advance more than £10,000 Sterling. we have hitherto always Balanc'd our Accot. by the Month of March succeeding the sale, but 'tis not to be done without a large advance of Money, indeed for this we have an Interest of 8 perCt. We have for 4 or 5 Years past had so great a Plenty of Bills that we have been at very little loss at any time to Gratify our Friends with a Remittance therein. . . .

Sir, We have before us your kind favour of 3d May from Jamaica the date would have pleasd us much better if it had been from Rebellion Rhoad,[2] however what cant be cur'd must be submitted to which we do on our parts as chearfully as can be expected on such an occasion and are thankfull that you are safe and that matters are no worse after such a trying Storm as you describe. to be sure if you had arrivd about the middle of April or any time since we should have made a glorious Sale of your Cargo, our Planters are in full spirits for purchasing Slaves and have almost all the money hoarded up for that purpose. Indigo has kept up at a most exhorbitant price in England so has Rice and in short every Article from our Colony sells mighty well. at home our Planters in general have bent their strength to Indigo and we verily believe that many of them have planted much more than they can reap and work without an augmentation of their Slaves, relying on the importation of this Summer. from hence we expect to make a fine Sale the 24th Inst of the Pearl's

[3] Austin and Laurens, if selling 700 slaves a year, must have been doing about one-fourth of the business carried on in Charleston at this time, though there were certainly a dozen firms in Charleston that handled slaves with more or less regularity.

[176] [1] On the same day Laurens wrote a letter similar to this to Peter Furnell. For an account of Captain Gwynn's misadventures see letters of June 26 and July 4, post, no. 178 and n. 2.

[2] Charleston harbor.

Cargo, Capt. Jefferies.[3] He arrivd here the 10th Inst with 251 pretty Slaves, we shall strain hard to get £40 Stg. per head for the best men 'tho we must be carefull not to break the Cord besides this Guinea Man here's only the Matilda from the Bight and a Sloop from Gambia both performing Quarantine for the small Pox. the latter indeed has gone through it. Our Accounts from Gambia are very bad, Slaves scarse, upward of 20 Sail in the River and the small Pox currant among them, we believe few Slaves will come from that Quarter. Capt. Timberman has lost his Ship [4] going over the Bar of Bonny and we judge no other Vessell will come here from Angola. from all this we are of opinion our importation will not be excessive and that barring a War with France the price of Slaves will hold up here thro this Summer, good prices and quick payments. . . .

Sir, We have before us your kind favour 3d Ulto and are glad to see our conduct in Mr. Chapones Affairs is pleasing to you. the two Negroes which he brought hither for Sale we sent to George Town where they have sold for £570. Nt and a great part of the money paid down, a price we think far above their real worth if we do not misjudge their Qualifications, but from this we entreat you will not be encouragd to send any more such, for altho we shall be always glad to render you our best services in any other matters we must make an absolute objection to the consignment of West India Slaves, besides they are subject to a duty of £50 per head [1] which we suppose Mr. Chapone escapd by importing them as his attendants . . . our Market keeps very high for the sale of Negroes and will continue so through the Year barring a French War. We have a Ship [2] on hand with 250 Angola Slaves and expect to put off a good many of the Men at near £40 Sterling per head. . . .

forms us that Slaves were very scarse in the River, the number of Purchasers so great that he shall think himself very well off to get 2/3rd of his Compliment. we wish he had been with us with that number two days ago when we made Sale of the Cargo of the Pearl, Jeffries, of Bristol from Angola which avarage £33.17. Sterling, her Cargo was 250. we had Chaps for more than double the number could we have furnishd them. There was in this parcell near 150 Men and large Boys, the Men all to a trifle brought 270 and £280. Five of them sold so high as £290 per head, a very great price we think for Angola Slaves. Our ready money upon the Sale does not exceed £1000 Stg. but scarsely one sold for longer Credit than January. Had we been confind to sell for ready money which Mr Mear[1] requires should be the case for the Cargo of Capt. Allen had we encouragd him to come down here, indeed by our Letters of the 10th January to meet him at St. Kitts we were far from discouraging him but in them told him on what Terms of Credit Slaves usually sell with us to make the most of a Sale. If matters are properly considerd it will appear the Owners of the Pearl wont be two months longer out of their money than if she had sold in the West Indias and we dare say we have raisd the Sale £1700 Sterling, say the Ship would have been dispatchd in Ten Weeks, that she carried 3/4 of the Produce in Bills at 3 months sight and the other 1/4 in 12 months after, with what we shall send in the Ship and the remainder in January dispatching the Ship in 30 days from arrival, were we Owners of the Vessell and Residents in England [we] do think we should like the Carolina Remittances full as well as the other. the Emperor Capt. Gwynn has made a sad piece of work of it this Voyage, purchasd only 390 Slaves, buried of them 120, met with a violent Gale of Wind off this Bar on the 8th of April which obligd him after lying too for seven days to bear away for Jamaica; Mr. Furnell advises us of the 3d May he had then sold 77 of his Slaves at about £20.10/ Stg. on an Average, a very poor affair indeed compard with our Market which will greatly agravate the loss upon a destructive Voyage.[2] all the Vessells that have reachd us from Africa since we last wrote you are a Sloop of New York from Gambia with 40 Slaves, the Matilda of Bristol from the Bight with 190 do. each of these Vessells brought the small Pox; the first was admitted to sell on the 19th after a Quarantine of 45 days, the other has now lain about a month and may continue a fortnight or three Weeks longer. . . .

[2] On July 4, 1755, Laurens wrote to Messrs. Devonshire, Reeve, and Lloyd: "We have before informd you of the Emperor being forced off our Coast and selling at Jamaica. We are of opinion that mishap alone will be £2000 Sterling out of the way of the Owners. We mean that her Slaves would have yielded so much more here than there but 'tis fruitless to think of what can't be remedied. We will call her a very unlucky Ship to the concernd."

Sir, . . . We fear your Snow the Mears Capt. Allen has misd a most charming Market with us if what we have heard of her be true that she was very forward in her Slaving the beginning of March, she must if well have reachd the West Indias long before this. We had no opportunity of forwarding Letters to meet him at Barbadoes 'till a Week ago when we thought it too late. some have been laying at St. Kitts for many months past in which we gave Capt Allen good encouragement to come down here if he could dispence with selling them on Credit as usual which if he was to come in so late in the Year as this would be nearly as expeditious as from the West Indias where for nine Cargoes out of ten they keep one fourth of the produce 12 months, delay your ship 8 or 10 Weeks with them and most of the Bills they send you are payable 3 mos. after sight. We sold a Cargo from Angola three days ago none on longer Credit than the Month of January. The bulk of the Men brought 280 and £270. Five of them £290. the Cargo avarages £33.17/ Stg. if we had stood out for ready money are of opinion the Sales would not have run so high by 6 or £7 Stg. We must stick to this modus to keep up our Sales, the Importer is extreamly well paid by laying 3 or 4 months out of their money. . . . We have very good prospects of Crops this Year both of Rice and Indigo, by our computation shall make at least 500,000 weight of the latter barring accidents. this spirits up our People to give good prices for Slaves, many having planted largely in expectation of buying new Negroes to give them a Lift in their Crops so that a Cargo or two more would just now do extreamly well but our People growl in the Gizard a good deal at paying more than £260, this price they would be contented with which is equal to £37.2.10 Stg. we wish you a successfull Voyage in the Mears wherever she sits down.

P. S. Since closing the foregoing it has occurd to us that if we have no War this Year and you could do any thing for the Austin to the West Indias there to take in a parcel of prime Slaves for this place if to be purchasd at a moderate price as things now appear to us there is a great probability that they would turn to Account, from this we form our opinion that as most of the Vessells expected here are from Gambia where Slaves are this Year very scarse, the small Pox in every part of the River and those which come down will be greatly short of their Compliment, Men Slaves from 18 to 25 Years of age turn to best Account, tall able People of any Country, but Callabars. If they come later than October they should have a warm Jacket and Breeches.[1]

Gentn. Your favour of the 5th of April reachd us yesterday advising of the Receipt of Sundry Bills, to the amount of £548.11.9½ Sterling the Ballance of the Fortune's Cargo. We are glad the Remittance was satisfactory wish the Sales had been so and really had the Cargo been tolerable We are sure it was in our power on that day to have made as good a Sale as any that preceeded it. We had as many Purchasers as we could have wishd, there were forty or fifty that came upwards of Seventy Miles distance most of which returnd without a Slave and these sort of People are the only ones to raise a Sale, for if they like the Slaves they wont go back empty handed so far for 10 or £20. in the prices. We had not in Capt. Jeffries Cargo the other day six Men so ordinary as the best of Capt. Bouchers. this Sale will show what might have been done with a Cargo of good Slaves. We need not tell Mr. Weave that this Cargo avarages £33.17/ Stg, as we see he is concernd in the Ship. Those of Boucher were sold every bit as well considering what a scabby Flock he brought. We sold of those Men from 240. to £260. that we would not have insurd to reach the Masters Plantation alive for £100. per head they were so very low. . . . the next Cargo of Slaves that sell with us must go off very well as we were unable to furnish one third part of the Purchasers that attended at the Sale of these last. Could your Fortune have the good luck to come down here this Summer with a healthy Cargo well assorted we dare say she would find a better Market with us than any where else, proviso we have no declaration of War as our Crops of Rice and Indigo are both thus far very promising.[2]

[179] [1] The next day Laurens, in a letter to Corsley Rogers and Son, repeats the suggestions made in this postscript, for their vessel, the Oldbury.

[180] [1] Messrs. Henry Weave and Co. were the owners of the Fortune, Edward Bouchier master, whose cargo of 180 negroes from the Windward and Gold coasts Austin and Laurens had sold on July 3, 1754. S. C. Gazette, June 20, 1754.

Gentn. . . . The Sale of Slaves having continued with us much the same as we advised you last, that is: have hitherto sold mighty well, all the Vessells arrivd with us this Year are two Sloops from Gambia who between them brought about 110 Slaves which avaragd something above £30. Sterling, a Snow from the Bight with 170 which has lain Quarantine for 5 or 6 Weeks having the small Pox, to be sold next Week, a Ship from Angola to our selves brought 243 very pretty Slaves on the general, these we sold on the 24th Ulto, a few of the finest Men at £290. many at £280. and very few under £270. this Cargo tho the Women were but midling avarages £33.17/ Stg. Had we had double the Number on that day we had had more than Purchasers enough for them and not one sold for longer Credit than the month of January. 'tis owing to our success last Year in Indigo and a very good prospect we have the present that People buy with this Spirit. The apparent prospect of sudden War has not as yet in the least discouragd them and if no Declaration is made this Summer we judge Negroes will continue to sell well through the Year as we are likely to be disappointed of a large part of those that were destin'd here the present Summer (vizt.) the Emperor Capt. Gwynn, a Ship we are pretty largely concernd in went to Angola for 570 Slaves, came off this Barr the 8th of April and was forced away to Jamaica by a violent Gale of Wind most of the others that were intended are from Gambia from whence we hear they wont be able to obtain half their Compliment and that the small Pox is so very rife in that River, we imagine some of our Vessels will stop in the West Indias to avoid a Quarantine with us, from these considerations 'tis our opinion if no War Breaks out Slaves will sell as well in October and November as at any time even to Xmas which we think it our duty to inform you. . . . We are now expecting the arrival of two Vessells from Gambia, the Mears and Orrel belonging to Liverpool. . . .

[181] [1] The cargo of the Africa, advertised as "slaves of the same countries as come from the River Gambia", had been sold by Austin and Laurens on Sept. 5, 1754. S. C. Gazette, Aug. 29, 1754.

So if you will be half concernd with us in a hundred Slaves proviso you can purchase that number of very likely healthy People, Two thirds at least Men from 18 to 25 Years old the other young Women from 14 to 18 the cost not to exceed Twenty five Pounds Sterling per head, you will please to Interest us the other Half and [draw] for the purchase of our moiety value on Mr. James Cowles £600 Stg. on Messrs. Devonsheir Reeve and Lloyd the remainder, advising the latter Gentlemen to insure for us. there must not be a Callabar amongst them. Gold Coast or Gambia's are best, next to them the Windward Coast are preferd to Angola's. We would not choose them sent in the Hurricane Season but rather to come in the Month of October or November. pray observe that our People like tall Slaves best for our Business and strong withall such as are small meagre or other ways ordinary wont sell better here than with you. the difference in price between Men and Women here is never less than £3 Stg. per head sometimes £6; for your government, young Lads from 13 to 15 Years of age wont bring so much as Men by 5 or £6 Stg. at that difference in price they are very saleable.

Dear Sir, . . . We imagine the Mears must have come off the Coast long ago, having been informed by the Master of a Sloop some time ago that she had Sixty Slaves on board at the middle of [182] [1] The paragraph recounting the familiar tale of the sale of the cargo of the Pearl, the disastrous voyage of the Emperor, and the conditions in the River Gambia is omitted. Captain Sinclair also carried a letter of July 17 to Messrs. Wells, Wharton, and Doran containing the same matter.

[183] [1] On July 21 Laurens wrote to Knight: "After confirming the foregoing Copy of our last We must take leave to inform you that a few of the Matilda's Men Slaves sold so high as £270, say the Privilidge, several brought £260 a very great price for Callabar Slaves, since which a Sloop of New York laden with Red Wood some Teeth and 30 Slaves is arrivd from the Camaroons and Bostock from the Windward Coast, last from Cape Mount. he has been attended with his usual good fortune. brought as much Cam Wood as he says will pay for his outward bound Cargo and 220 Slaves besides. the Ship has been out of London but Ten months. nothing yet appears with us from Gambia. We wish the Orrell may be the first and be a fortnight ahead of the rest as there are six or seven sail expected should they all drop in together it might lower the prices now given."

January. the small Pox we understand is very rife this Year in the River Gambia and possibly by having that disorder Capt. Allen may have gone to some other Market but we have not heard of his arrival at any of the Islands from which Quarter we have pretty late intelligence. We are mighty glad the Thomas [Thames?] makes you so pretty a Voyage. We fear it will be much otherways with the Orrel this Year unless Slaves should come down much faster than they did when our intelligence came away which was at the middle of March. We shall write by the very first opportunity that shall present both to Barbadoes and St. Kitts to meet Capt. Jenkinson of the Fanny [2] 'tho we are afraid We shant get any in time as we have no Vessells now with us for any part of the West Indias. should that Vessell come down we shall carefully adhere to your orders to hurry him away with all dispatch. . . .

We are sorry you have such a mighty poor Market for Rice that some of that of the Orrel should remain on hand in April. We really expected that you must have been in want of a little supply by that time as no one Vessell is gone for your place all this last Season. We wish you had told whether Naval Stores had not taken a rise upon the prospect of War as they have done in London or Bristol by way of Government to us in case any of your African Ships should come this way. We fear we shall not be able to load anything upon them but Rice or Naval Stores except some Indigo and a few Skins, as to the last Article it is so much now engrossed by Persons who ship them on their own Accounts that we dont think we shall be able to obtain 30 hogsheads in the whole Year. We lay out every way we can invent to get them and dont get a Tenth part of the Quantity we would purchase if the Cash would bring them. as to Indigo We shall have the first offer of a great deal and from such People as generally make the best. We expect to see some little parcells of this Years growth very soon at Market as half of our Planters are now cutting away and will bring it down as early as possible hoping the first that appears will bring the best price.

3 per 100 wont pay the Austin an extra freight. should hope the great appearance of War would give a fillup to the Portugal Markets as we find it has done to the prices at London and Cowes but we have latterly made too much Rice are in hopes through the Indigo we shall reduce the Quantity of Rice to 60 or 70,000 Barrels as we seldom fail of finding Markets for so much that will take it off to advantage.

We have this Year introduced a little Ancona Hemp seed which we flatter ourselves will become another valuable Export from this Province and be a means of dividing the labour of our hands so that we may not glut the Market with any one Article. We have had a very great plenty of Bills of Exchange all this Spring and from the fondness of People to buy Indigo are of opinion we shall be in no want of them to remit for Negroes at this next Season to such Gentlemen as shall prefer them.

We ought rather to be ashamd than you that we give you the trouble of striking off our Commission on the Coast Commission and disbursements for the Orrel. the money is a thing we dont in the least mind. We are only endeavouring to avoid the censure of our Neighbours that they should not charge us with making Innovations on the Commiss's they have been always accustomd to. . . .

Gentn., . . . We are now to present you with the Sale of your Slaves per the Pearl the Nt Proceed whereof being £52,294.17.9 Currency, we pass to your Credit in Account Current also inclosd which gives a Ballance now in your favour of £33,979.15.2 [1] which we shall remit as it grows due in Bills of Exchange if can obtain them unless you shall order us to invest it in something else, as 'tis possible a War may occasion a scarsity of Bills pray direct us in such case in what way else we shall remit relying upon our utmost endeavours to send you Bills if you prefer them for Remittance. . . . you will please to take notice at the foot of the Sales there is an abatement of £100 to Daniel Heyward and a memorandum that he demands £100 more. he lives near 100 miles distance and writes us there was a mistake of £200 in casting up the Sum total of his Slaves that is they were rated at five or six different prices. the paper on which it was done he took from us, now if upon returning that Paper it appears we are wrong We must abate him £100 more. this we shall know from him very soon when we shall regulate the Account accordingly and advise you how it stands.

Most People were of opinion the almost certainty of an immediate War with France must have given a damp to the Sale of a Cargo of Slaves of the Prince George, Bostock, which sold two days ago but 'twas so much the reverse that some of the Buyers went to collaring each other and would have come to blows had it not been prevented in contending for the choice, which gave the Seller an excellent opportunity to make them pay what price he pleasd and through this he got £300 for some. By the number of People that day in Town which seem'd to be in want we compute they would have taken off 1000 Slaves at a good round price so that we think the Vessells that are to follow this Year cannot fail of a good Market with us.[2] . . .

Sir, We have a Letter before us of the 17th March from our worthy good Friend Mr. Knight which did not reach us 'till the 24th Ulto. in this he directs us to meet you with Letters at Barbadoes and St. Kitts to inform you how the price of Slaves holds with us telling us you have orders to proceed down here if you cant obtain £30. Stg per head round for your Cargo at one of those Islands and that we dont discourage your coming, We are a little puzzeld what advice to give you as we seem to be at the very eve of a War with France, if none should be declared before the day of Sale we should hope to render a very pretty Account proviso your Cargo was healthy and well assorted as it does not appear to us we shall have so many come down here this Summer as our People are in want of, the best Cargoes for our Market are those that have most full grown Men, the Men generally bring with us from 3 to £6 Stg. more than the Women and 4 or £5. more than what you call Men Boys of 14 to 16 Years of Age. the last Cargo we sold was from Angola about six Weeks ago. it consisted of 116 Men 45 Women 49 Boys and 33 Girls, they were healthy and in good flesh, they sold upon an Avarage at £33.15.6 Stlg. since that about 250 Slaves have been sold in two Vessells from the Windward Coast, the able Men brought upwards of £40 Stlg. these were sold since the advice reach'd us of Mr. Boscowen having taken and sent into Hallifax some French Men of War which we here think in effect a declaration of War and there was notwithstanding Purchasers enough attended those Sales to have taken off

[2] In letters of July 31 to Devonshire, Reeve, and Lloyd, and of Aug. 1 and 6 to Messrs. Corsley Rogers and Son and Henry Weave and Co., all of Bristol, Laurens repeats his account of the feverish demand for slaves from the Prince George, but on Oct. 13 he wrote to Messrs. Easton, also of Bristol, that he had been mistaken in the price of Bostock's slaves, none of whom had sold for more than £290.

[185] [1] Gordon also carried letters to Smith and Clifton, and to Wells, Wharton, and Doran, of St. Christopher, giving much the same information.

1000 more Slaves than there was for them. all the Vessells that we now know of expected to reach us this Year are five or six Snows from Gambia which amongst them we dare say wont bring that number and tis highly probable as the small Pox is very rife in that River some of them will be infected and stop in the West Indias, the Vessells are the Mears, Allen, the Orrel, Bennet, the St. Paul, James, the Elizabeth, Hunt, the Nugent, Hutchinson and another Snow that is his Consort one Todd Master with a small Sloop calld the Prince George, Ross, you may possibly learn which of them have stopd in the West Indias and what luck has attended the Gambia Vessells this Year, We have reason to believe very indifferent; should they all come down here and no War there will be room enough for you, this is the best Account we are able to give you of the present state of our Market. we wish you may be able so to govern yourself as to sit down at the most advantageous Market for our Friend which will be much more agreeable to us than the Commission arising from the Sales.[2]

Sir, The above is Copy of our last. three days ago we got a Letter of the 1st Inst. from Capt. Bennet at St. Kitts advising that he should sail for this place in two days so that we are hourly expecting his appearance and endeavouring to provide a proper Cargo for him, what we intend if we can get it is about 200 Barrels Pitch, 100 Barrels Rice, 8 or 10 Hogsheads of Skins and a little Indigo if the purchase be not immoderate. the Rice and Skins we are pretty sure of but as to the Pitch believe shall be puzzeld to get it in which case must send more Rice rather than send the Vessell home empty.

Capt. Bennet advises us that he then had on board 140 Slaves, that his whole purchase was 167, Twenty seven of which he had buried and all of them except three before he left the River, that he had lost the major part of his Ships Company amongst them his Doctor which was a heavy misfortune. it appears to us that he made a better purchase than any other Vessell at Gambia and if he brings in 140 Slaves in good order and well assorted we shall hope that he will make no bad Voyage to the Owners. he does not say

[2] In the next letter, written on Aug. 15, Laurens announced the arrival of the Elizabeth with news of the Mears and the Orrel, and in a letter of Aug. 20 to Messrs. a Word of the Mears. the Captn. of the Sloop that brought his Letter tells us there was a Snow sold at St. Kitts that was intended for this place in which all the Officers were dead down to the Boatswain. We hope it wont prove to be Allen but indeed we think had it been he Capt. Bennet would not have omitted mentioning it, Please to make Insurance on Goods per the Orrel 1000 or £1200 Stlg, if any deficiency on that Sum the Premium to be returnd, We cannot pretend to ascertain the value we shall ship before we see how the price of Indigo will open. there are some parcells now ready for Market which the Makers declare they will ship themselves rather than sell it for less than 40/ per l. a very long price, before we give it must have more encouraging Lrs. Gentlemen, Since we wrote you last of which the above is triplicate we saw a Letter from Capt Easton to Messrs Middleton and Brailsford that did not surprise us a little,[1] it run thus, that Capt Tod at Gambia was to put his grown Slaves on board of Hutchinson and proceed himself with his small Slaves to Barbadoes for the Gentn. observd that small Slaves did not sell near so well with us as in the West Indias and as a proof of it mention the Fortune's Cargo[2] which they say Capt. Boucher was offerd £24 Stlg. per head for and here they did not bring £20. Capt. Boucher indeed said so to us but we thought him upon the banter as not being Strangers to the West Indias Prices, if Capt. Boucher had such an offer it must be from a person who had not seen them and that presumd they were a healthy well assorted Cargo of Slaves but we rather think it must have been £24 Barbadoes Money[3] per head which would have been

[186] [1] On the 26th Laurens wrote that the Orrel had arrived with 133 slaves and that the sale was announced for the first day on which the law allowed the slaves to be sold, the prescribed period of quarantine being ten days. a great price in the West Indias for such a Cargo. be pleasd to look in to your Sales and you will find there was 25 Men only and 22 Women, 70 Boys and 51 Girls it will appear by the duty[4] we paid that there was 92 under the height of 50 Inches a large part of them not 40 Inches, now can it be imagind that such a Cargo and the most mangey Creatures that ever were seen should bring £24. Stlg. round when the Prime Men from Gambia and the Windward Coast were bought at Barbadoes and shipt to this place at about £25. Stlg. which we dare say Messrs. D R and Lloyd can verify by some purchases made for them, the thing is absurd to the last degree. there never was a better sale made in this Province the condition of the Slaves considerd. you will find many of the Men sold for £250, at which time we must assure you no Man in the Province was more in want of Slaves than our G A. [George Austin] lost more than half his Crop for want of assistance, would have given any price for a few good ones but did not touch one fearing their disorder would have infected his Plantation assure yourselves they were very well sold and without vanity we will say none in this Country could have turnd them out so high. the reason was this, We had abundance of poor industrious People attended that Sale which came from 70 to 80 Miles distance who were forced to take such as we had because other People not knowing them and they making but a mean appearance 'tis rare they come down to look at any Slaves but those we have to sell, these are all facts and we hope such as must convince you that you lost nothing by your Vessell coming to this Market. We sincerely wish they had been better for your sake as well as for our own. People in our way must take Cargoes as they come or we would very gladly be excusd from having any concern with such a one as that for the reasons before assignd. We have not at this day receivd above 2/3 ds of the Payments.

This Letter has lain open to the 22d September for want of a conveyance. must inform you on the fifth we sold a Cargo of Slaves per the Orrel of Liverpoole from Gambia when the fine Men brought £300 and £290. the Women 260 and £250. as there was many very ordinary ones in this parcell the whole avarage but £33.14/ Stlg. We expect but very few more with us this Year so that our Market must be good in the Spring if a War does not intervene and alter the System.

Gentlemen, The first proceeding is a Copy of our last trouble the second of a few Lines committed to our Pilot on the evening of the Orrel's Sale but did not reach the Ship it was intended by. We miscast the Amot. of the Sales that night it was not so much as we then calld it.[1] We can now inform you that the number of the Cargo was 129 the Grose Sum sold for £30,445. Currency which upon an Avarage is £33.14/ Sterling per head at the present course of Exchange. there was in this Cargo one fourth of them in poor condition. had they been as good as those of the former Year they must have avaragd 40/ Stg. more but we are of opinion none have done better than Capt. Bennet at Gambia the present Year or perhaps not one so well.

Capt. Bennet would have been ready for the Sea by this time but has been embarrassd by a Man of War that's going to the No[rth] Ward and wanted hands, they were pressing Men for a whole Week during which the Orrels Men lay hid in the Country and the business was impeded. We now expect she will sail in 5 or 6 days. She now has in 200 Barrl. of Rice and Ten hogsds of Skins. We dont know that we shall ship any thing more in her, such a price is demanded for Indigo that we are afraid to venture upon it (vizt.) 40/ per l. for such as is fine,[2] here is now a great deal ready for Market which must come home soon either for Accot. of the Merchant or Planter, as the consumers on your side will be aware of this. We think it would not be right to purchase at so high a price, here are no more Slaves arrivd since the Orrels but 48 from Barbadoes which are to be sold the 25th.[3] We begin to think we shall have but very few more reach us this Year, if so our Market must be very good in the [188] [1] On the evening of Sept. 5 Laurens wrote to John Knight that they had sold that day from the 120 slaves brought on shore by Capt. Bennett, 101, for £27,125. Those remaining unsold were "all meagre or full of infirmitys". Eight of the cargo had been retained on board because of sore eyes. In a letter to Messrs. Devonshire, Reeve, and Lloyd of Sept. 22 he speaks of the Orrel's cargo as "a large proportion of them distempered".

As an illustration of the extent of Laurens's correspondence and of his belief in the general interest in the condition of the Charleston slave market, it is worth noting that, in letters here omitted, he described the sale of the Orrel's slaves to Peter Furnell of Jamaica, Walter Caddell and Gedney Clarke of Barbados, William Wells, jr., and Peter Caren of St. Christopher, to Devonshire, Reeve, and Lloyd of Bristol, Augustus and John Boyd and Co. of London, and Robert and John Thompson and Co. of Lancaster.

Sir, . . . Sale for it, the sellers want 30/ per l. and the Buyers offer only 22/6, a little has sold for 25/, should matters be accomodated between this and the Spring 'tis not improbable then the sale of Slaves may be good, but if a War we cannot as yet judge how that Trade may be affected. Gentn., Your kind favour of the 14th Ulto. per the Snow Gambia Capt. Dodson reach'd us last night and with it a Letter from Capt. Dodson desiring to know on what Terms we would take up his Slaves. We offerd to do it (tho they are come at a very poor time) on the Terms we have ever yet practisd (vizt.) to give the Vessell a Cargo of our Produce to pay the Capts. Coast Commission and Mens half Wages etc., and to remit the remainder at the time the payments shall become due. it is our Interest to sell for the shortest Cr[edit] possible, because the shorter the payments the less risque of bad debts. We have hitherto always compleated our Remittances by the month of January or March succeeding the Sale, but that cannot be hoped for just now unless they should be sold very low as the Spirits of our Planters are much lowrd within this month or 6 Weeks that their Produce is considerably falln in value from the great probability of a sudden War on which Insurance from this to Brittain is got up to 15 or 16 per Cent, this has made a great alteration in the price of Slaves, six or eight Weeks ago some fine Men were sold so high as £330 per head, a month ago some of the same stamp at £275 and have been daily declining in price ever since that time. what these will avarage we really cannot judge but we fear they must go a good deal lower than any preceeding especially if the Captn. insists as he does at present to have them sold so as to carry the whole produce home with him, which is not to be done from this Country at the best of times without selling to great disadvantage. he has offerd them to several Houses whether yet agreed or not we cannot say.[2]

[191] [1] On Nov. 1 Laurens wrote to Smith and Clifton that the planters had grown very cool toward buying negroes. According to the Gazette two cargoes had arrived since that of the George was sold: on Oct. 15 the slaves of the ship America, Benjamin Jefferson, master, were sold by Solomon Isaacs, who advertised them as "Windward Coast Slaves"; on Oct. 29 Glen, Cooper, and Co. sold the slaves brought from Gambia by the sloop Prince George, John Rosse master. S. C. Gazette, Oct. 9, 23, 1755.

[192] [1] The night before this letter was written Laurens wrote to Satterthwaite, Inman, and Co. of Liverpool, owners of the Gambia, telling them of the arrival of their vessel and of Captain Dodson's request that he, Laurens, look at the cargo. The Gambia, it may be inferred from this letter, had stopped at Barbados and had there taken on fifteen negroes from Law, Satterthwaite, and Jones, who were obviously connected with the Liverpool house.

We are sorry to inform you that two of your Slaves are dead, most of the others very low in Flesh, you dont mention in your Bill of Loading of what Species they were, those that the Captn. says belong to you are 6 Men, 5 Women, and 2 Girls, two or three of them old. We shall put them off for you at the best rate we possibly can and remit the produce as you direct to Mr. Touchett.[3]

Our unlucky Ship the Emperor by missing this place made a most sad Voyage when had she come in here she had made a saving one, the difference we compute full £3000 Stlg. by a Sale we made of the Pearls Cargo soon after from Malimba, which avaragd £33.15/ Stg. these Incidents are very common in the African business, against which every one that enters upon it should fortify themselves. . . .

Sir, . . . We are very sorry for your sake more than for our own that the Mears did not reach us with a good Cargo of Slaves this Summer as we must in such case have given you a good Account of them. what Mr. Mears said in regard to the whole Remittance in the Bottom did not discourage us from saying every thing we could with safety to invite Capt. Allen down here, as our Letter will appear when the Mears shall arrive with you, we dont now think it necessary to send you a Copy of it. We were told by Capt. Bennet that the Vessell would have been with us but that your Friends in St. Kitts on seeing in what a sickly condition her Slaves were recommended Jamaica as a much more proper place for her and they were right if she had the Small Pox or any thing that look'd like a malignant Fever as either of which our People are as much alarmd as you in England are at the approach of a plague. You really as we think suffer'd a loss in the death of Capt. Bennets Doctor, he was a mighty quiet good naturd young Man so well adapted to the Temper of his Commander that we fear poor Bennet may hunt a good while for his Fellow before he will be able to find him.[1]

[2] Charles Mayne announced them for sale on Dec. 31 (S. C. Gazette, Dec. 18, 25, 1755; see also post, no. 193). On Dec. 15 Laurens sent to John Hardman, M. P. for Liverpool, an account of Carolina prices and the effect of the threatened war. For Hardman see this work, vol. II., index.

We observe your kind offer of admitting us into a share in the Orrel if you can but gentilely drop some that are now concernd, which we take very kindly as there is not a Person goes to Africa that we know, we should be better pleasd to take a concern with than Bennet under your direction but in the uncertain state of things we are in at present, We really dont know what to say, our payments this Year are likely to be very bad as we see no prospect just now of half our Crop selling and this is the Fund from whence Money principally blows to us. We luckily have a good deal on your side towards our Remitts. this Year but fear the whole will be required. in about a month more we shall see more clearly into Affairs and be better enabled to conclude than we are just now, We expect on the meeting of the Brittish Parliamt shall be put on an absolute certainty as to peace or War, that if the latter be determind such small Vessells as the Orrel can stand no chance on the Coast of Africa nor can that Trade be attempted immediately from this consideration that Slaves have latterly sold high upon the Coast and they will so continue 'tho it be War if any number of Vessells go there at the usual Season and two Sloops now here are bound soon to Gambia,[2] their Cargoes cheifly Rum. we mention these things as a reason that we think a month hence we shall be early enouth to conclude.

We are very glad to hear Mr. Guichard was able to do so well for you at St. Kitts with your two small Vessells, £30 Stg. per head with a full Remittance in the Bottom may be full as well as we could have done but this we cannot possibly judge of unless we knew the sorts and condition of their Cargoes. We really think we have seen one Cargo from the Coast here that would have avaragd had they been here in the month of Octo. last full £40 Stlg. but our People now begin to pause and we expect a Cargo that is to be sold in Wednesday the 31st Inst. by the Snow Gambia of Lancaster from Gambia will not bring any extraordinary price, this Vessell was offerd to us and out of regard to some Friends we have in that City we would have taken her on such Terms as formerly, but the Master demanded the whole in the Bottom in Bills, all to a trifle, a thing we could by no means agree to, he now sits down with Mr. Mayne but what the conditions we know not. We should be very much pleasd we are acquitted from her but that we could wish her into the hands of Persons more experienced in that branch than he. We shall really have more Money lying out for Negroes this Year than we could choose in time of War, did we know how to keep ourselves without making any addition to it, for should any material alteration happen in our Exchange before our money comes in we shall have been working for a dead Horse for a Year or two past. You need not have been at all afraid of the Knights Cargo being too many to reach us in one bottom, the Purchasers generally come down in proportion to the Numbers to sell and we generally find the larger is the Cargo the better they sell, but if the knights Cargo with that of the Enterprize included brings £20,000 Jamaica Money, its £34 Stg. round, supposing the whole Number to be about 420, which we judge it was from what Mr. Furnell writes to us, this is a pretty good price considering the circumstance of things in America, by our latest Letters from every one of the Islands the price of Slaves is declining very fast with them as both the French and Spanish Markett are now shut up to us. . . .

. . . We are now indebted to your kind favour of the 12th Ulto. handed to us yesterday by Capt. Moses who is come on shore in a poor state of health owing as he tells us to Capt Lightbourns Vessell [2] being much out of kelter, her Decks and all her upper works in want of Caulking whereby both he and the Slaves have sufferd very greatly. this induced them to put into Anguilla at which they tarried nine days, have lost six of the Slaves he reckons through this and have six or seven more very low and weak which we have sent a Doctor on board to visit and a carefull Woman as a nurse to them. We have said so much in our former Letter as to our present Market for Slaves that we have but little to add to it except that some other Vessells are since arrivd with parcells from Antigua and that here are half that were in Town before still on hand. We hope you have bought these very low or we fear shall render you but a poor Account of them, our Planters being quite dispirited from the price of Rice now only 30/ per Cent. and at a Credit of six months, our Acquaintance with the Planters is prètty extensive and we shall take care to give them notice in every part of the Province of the day of Sale which we have fixed for Thursday the 22d.[2] which is as early as we can be permitted to land them and please to be assurd we shall leave no Stone unturnd to do every thing that is possible for your Interest both in the Sale and Remittance. they have reach'd us at the worst time could possibly have happend, many of our People dont choose to buy at this cold Season and they seeing parcell after reached us the Sale of Slaves has become wretched bad and we have no less than four Gambia Vessells now under Quarentine which must still reduce the prices a good deal"; and on Aug. 26, to Devonshire, Reeve, and Lloyd: "but the Quantity [of indigo] made will be greatly short of our expectations, a large part having been destroy'd by a long drought which has also ruined more than half of our Negro Provisions and from this cause the Sale of Slaves is almost as materially affected as by the declaration of War, our People can't think of buying Slaves when they don't know which way they shall get Provisions to feed them."

[195] [1] Gedney Clarke (this work, III. 457) was kept well informed of Carolina conditions by Laurens, who on Jan. 1 had written: "there is half a dozen little parcels of a dozen to twenty in different hands in Town which move extreamly heavy, such as would have sold very currently two months ago at £40 Stlg. and upwards." On Jan. 3 Laurens wrote to Knight: "The Slaves per the Gambia which were expos'd to Sale on Wednesday went off very dully 'tho there were a pretty many of our Planters came down who would have bought with a proper abatement in price in proportion to the circumstance of things. 'tis not a time just now to stand out for a largr price as every Vessell from the West Indias brings down parcells of prize Negroes which we presume are now bought there very low, now in the place half a dozen parcells of such which our People look coolly at and we believe the Sale wont amend whilst we remain in such an uncertain situation as to peace or War."

[2] "Just imported in the Relief, Capt. William Lightbourn, a Cargo of prime Angola Men and Women Slaves Chiefly young People and healthy, To be sold on very reasonable Terms, on Thursday the 22d of this Instant January, by Austin and Laurens." S. C. Gazette, Jan. 15, 1756.

parcell perpetually coming in at this unusual Season of the Year[3] makes them immagine that in a month or two more they shall get them for a Song, this makes many stand off that would otherways buy, Our good friend Commo. Frankland[4] we fear will make but a dull beginning in Merchantile business 'tho we hope our next may bring a more favourable Account of things wch it shall be our endeavour to accomplish.

We propose to Capt. Moses to have sent back the three Negroes with Capt. Hinson that you say were put on board to take care of the rest. he says he only brought one of them and that he chooses to keep him with him 'till he returns himself. . . . Our Pest House where the Slaves are to be placed during their Quarintine is in good order and they have a plenty of Wood at hand so that we hope the Cloathing they have will be sufficient but Capt. Moses informs us he was obligd to put their Cloaths on a few days after he left Barbadoes to preserve them from the Water that came down through the Deck, neither of the Capts. shall know from us that Mr. Frankland has any concern with the Slaves but we should immagine Lightbourn must know it, as the Bill of Loading expresses for whose Account they are.

Gentlemen, The above is Copy of our last trouble, since which have none of your favours. are sorry to inform you that we have now on hand Ten of your Slaves 'tho had numbers to look upon them which dont at all like them and several parcells have dropd in upon us since they arrivd. whilst prime People can be had our Planters will not touch such as are not so. We sold a Man at £280. and a Girl at £210. payable the 1st November next, and one other Man for £260. payable in 4 months, 'tis much more difficult to run off these small parcells than a Cargo of 3 or 400, when such a Number are for Sale it draws down the People from every part of the Province and one bids upon the other, very often they in their hurry take hold of very ordinary Slaves as prime, overlooking their imperfec-

Gilcrist, in 24 Days from Barbadoes, we learn, that Commodore Frankland's Squadron has sent in there a French Guineyman, with 160 slaves on Board"; and "His Majesty's Ships on that station [Jamaica] had then [Jan. 2] carried in there 23 French Vessels, (four of them Guineymen)" (S. C. Gazette, Dec. 25, 1755, Jan. 29, 1756). "Thomas Frankland Esq., Commodore. . . . Sent into this Island [Antigua] by his Squadron, 1 Ship and a Snow with upwards of 700 Slaves on board. . . . tions which in a small parcell scarce ever escapes notice, Capt. Dodson put his Slaves into the hands of Mr. Charles Mayne. we believe near half of them are unsold, how the others have sold we cant pretend to say as it would not become us to make enquiry. We are told there is to be a largr Remittance for them in the Bottom such a one as (if true) Mr. Mayne will have good luck if he is not a loser by this concern. our Planters are much discouragd just now from buying Slaves through the low price of Rice which sells with us at 30/ per Ct. some of it on so long a Cr. at [as] six months. whilst things remain so a few Negroes will suffice and we have had for a month past a very extrordinary number for this Season of the Year, yesterday a Brigt. arrivd to us with 140 from your Island which will bring down our friends from the remote parts of the Country and enable us to run off yours if they are not disposd of before, it will give us great pleasure to furnish you with an agreeable Account and a quick Remittance.

per Hall.

Sir, We have before us a Letter from our Friends and your Owners Messrs. Robert and John Thompson dated 8th of November which reachd us two days ago in which is this paragraft, (vizt.) We desire you will write Capt Simondson of the Concord to be left with Andrew Lessley Esq. at Antigua the State of your Market for Negroes in January, February, or March next. Please to observe that Slaves all this last Summer sold here extreamly high the prime Men from £40. to £47 Stlg. within these ten or twelve weeks past the price has been declining partly from numbers being sent here from the West Indias[2] but principally on Account of a great probabillity of a sudden War with France which has reduced the price of the Produce of this Country near 30 per Ct. this has stopt the Career of our Planters so effectually that we cant get more than 30 to 32 and £33. per head for such as would have brought £40. but a little while ago. if we should have War we are of opinion the price can't amend but if matters should be accomodated 'tis not unlikely that the Spring Sale of Slaves with us may be good. this is all the information we at present are able to give you as 'tis impossible in the present situation of things to forsee what may happen upon any certainty. we wish you a successfull Voyage and that you may hit [197] [1] A similar letter was sent to Capt. Samuel Sandys, Duke of Cumberland, at the request of Capt. Thomas Hinde; and on Feb. 5 to Capt. Thomas Whiteside, Willy, in care of Thomas Duberry of Montserrat, at the request of John Knight.

Gentlemen, We have now chiefly to confirm the foregoing Copy of our last and to inform you of the further progress we have made in the Sale of your Slaves which stands as below. We have two still remaining on hand a Man and a Woman, the Man extreamly low in flesh and we fear wont bring more than £100, the Woman 'tho able not one seems to like her so that to this day we have not had an offer for her. We had but very few come to our Sale of the 140 Slaves per the Relief, indeed it unluckily happened that a Parapneumonia [?] prevaild at that time and does so still amongst the Slaves in many parts of the Province which sweeps off great numbers and is a great discouragement to such as would now otherways buy. We have however put off all to about ten that were able to appear in the Yard which have sold much better than we at first hoped for as they were a mighty small People such as our Planters dont at all like. We see clearly Slaves will not ma[i]ntain a price with us whilst our Planters Produce continues so low and it cannot amend if we should be involvd in a War.

Foot Note:
We have just now sold the Negro Woman. the Acct. stands as under:

1	Man—Paybl 1 Novr.	£280

1	Woman—in a month	220
1	Girl—1 Novr.	210

[3] On the 24th Laurens wrote to the Thompsons, expressing his regret that their ship, the Africa, Captain Saul, had not come to Charleston the preceding summer, and telling them of the advice which he had sent to Captain Simondson. On the same day he acknowledged a plantation certificate for Captain Nash's cargo and a bill of lading for eight Gold Coast negroes. The plantation certificate was the sworn statement that the negroes had been less than six months in the colony from which they came and were therefore free from the £50 duty imposed on colonial negroes.

Gidney Clarke Esq., Barbadoes

. . . Permit us now to inform you what progress we have made in the Sale of your Slaves addressd to us which we have taken every measure in our power to put off to advantage but with poor success. our People thought them a very indifferent parcell, that they were much too small a People for the business of this Country and on this Account many went away empty handed that would otherways have purchasd. another grand impediment to the Sale was a Parapneumonia breaking out in many parts of the Province and sweeping off great numbers of Negroes a little before the day of Sale, which prevented a great many from attending and the success of a Sale much depends on the Numbers that attend. in short every thing contributed to induce us to think we must inevitably make a very poor Sale and what added greatly to it was that we could only bring into the Yard 105, the rest that remaind alive were in a bad condition with the Flux from which disorder there are dead to this time 13 and we are sorry to say several more in great danger. What we have sold at this day are 102, the Amount £21,291.10/ Currency. We have 14 more that are able to come abroad and 11 sick in the Hospital. those which are well are a very dimunitive parcell of Mortalls, Children in size but at their full growth, so that upon the whole we fear you must make a very indifferent Voyage and what will add to it is that the major part of those sold are on Credit to January next. the monstrous prices given for a few Slaves in the month of October has produced all this Evil, brought down parcell after parcell from the West Indias incessantly all this Winter, which has put it in the power of the Planter to play upon the Sellers their own Game. this we can safely assert, that yours are sold for better prices than any since they arrivd, as a proof of it we ourselves purchasd four Angola Men the prime of a parcell and not to be equald by any four of yours for £212.10/ per head and we obtain'd for some of yours £240 per head. We see clearly whilst our Planters produce continues so low they will not buy Slaves unless at a price proportionably to that of their Goods, they paid very little regard to the prospect of a War untill they sensibly felt the consequences by the Sale of their Produce.[1] . . .

[199] [1] On Feb. 7 Laurens reported the facts of this sale to Commodore Frankland. By this time 113 had been sold; the gross returns now were £23,376. 10. No more had died, though a few were not yet out of danger.

. . . the Slaves per Lightbourne as before advisd sufferd greatly by the Seams of his upper works wanting caulking. when they arrivd here found the most favourable Weather that could be wishd for at that Season of the Year or their mortallity must have been much more considerable. We are sorry 'tis not in our power to give you the Sales, have 10 on hand most of them in a thriving way but cant meet with a tolerable offer for them or should not keep them upon a prospect of their improving, the Number sold is 116 the Gross Amount £24006.10/ Currency. We observe that you cannot reconcile it to your self that the price of Slaves must fall with us in time of War, on considering that Freight Insurance Mens Wages etc must greatly advance and inhance the price of them when they come to Market. these Matters are not all considered by our Planters, the only point with them is what price the Value of their Produce will enable them to give, and a very just consideration this, for many Rice Plantations that clear to the proprietors from 500 to £1000. Sterling per Annum in times of Peace will scarsely defray their own expenses in time of War, the price of that Commodity being so much affected by the high Freights and Insurance its clodg with, which the produce of your islands being of abundantly more Value is not proportionably affected by, on the contrary the frugal industrious Man must in the worst of Markets have more from his Plantation than will defray his ordinary Expence which the generallity of the American Planters choose to invest in Slaves, preferably to any thing else, so dull is the present prospect of things that we have wrote to meet every Guinea Vessell, orderd to our House the approaching Summer recommending to them to stop in the West Indias if they can find a tolerable Market unless the contest between Great Brittain and France should be made up in such case it is possible our Market may amend.

Gentlemen, We gave you the trouble of a few lines under the 23d of last month advising that we had receivd a small Cargo of Slaves

[2] A description of the state of the Carolina market follows.

[202] [1] Here follows Laurens's usual description of the state of the market. Part of the significance of these letters on Carolina conditions lies in their number. Between Jan. 1 and May 1 he thought it worth while to inform at least twelve business houses of the over supply of negroes and the dull trade. To some of his correspondents he wrote six times during these weeks. If other Charleston merchants were similarly assiduous a knowledge of Carolina conditions must have been widely disseminated both in the West Indies and in England.

[203] [1] Lascelles and Maxwell did an extensive West India business, and their letter-books, which have been preserved, may yield some information on the slave trade. The editor has not examined them. Some evidence of their interest in trade to the Continental colonies is to be found in the Letter-Book of John Watts (N. Y. Hist. Soc., Collections, LXI.)

from Thomas Frankland and Gidney Clarke Esq. with orders to remit the proceeds of them to you as the Money should become due.[2] please to receive inclosd James Irvings Bill on Samuel Touchett Esq. and Co. payable to Thomas Middleton Esq. or order for £239.16.6 Sterling and pass it to the Ct. [credit] of the said Gentlemen. We shall remit you further on this Account as soon as we can pick up some more Bills who are [blank]. Upon reverting to Mr. Clarkes Letter he directs that one half may be passd to his Credt. the other to Mr. Franklands, which please to notice in all we remit. We shall not be able to send seperate Bills for each half without some delay to one or other of the Gentn. as we are glad to get hold of Bills just now in any manner the drawer pleases.

. . . We have not had any Slaves Brought this way for 6 or 8 weeks past and Indeed Our People seem to think very Little at [of] them, the low price of Rice and probability of its still declining makes them now begin to consider from what sourse their payments must arise, which scarsly Enterd into the heads of any of them be-fore the[y] felt where the Shoe pinch'd or it would have been better both for themselves and us that many of them had acted with more Caution some months sooner. this might not have been so good for Trade in General and therefore we must reconcile Ourselves to the perticular Inconveniencys we Ourselves may suffer by the fluctuation of Exchg.

206. HENRY LAURENS TO RICHARD OSWALD AND COMPANY, 1756.[1]

per Livingston.

. . . We are very much obligd to our worthy Friends Augustus and John Boyd Esqs. and Co. for the confidence they repose in us by becoming our Security for a punctual Remittance of the Produce of your Slaves intended us by the Carlisle. It would give us much pleasure to transact this Affair for you had we a prospect of doing it successfully but really the Scene is so much alterd for the worse within these last 3 or 4 months and which we hope cannot escape your knowledge that we sincerely wish you may order the Sloop to a much better Market than ours at present seems to promise and we think it cannot amend before a peace shall be established. our People bought Slaves with great spirit all the last Summer and even 'till the month of December (October) they gave so high as £330 for some very prime Gambia Men but as soon as they found the price of their produce faild through the high Freight and Insurance it was loaded with, the generallity of them resolvd to touch no more Negroes except they could have them at a price proportionatly low to the price of their Produce. just at this juncture several hundreds were brought down from the West Indias that were purchasd out of the French Ships stopd by Commodore Frankland and these falling into many hands, some of them quite unexperiencd in that branch of business, the price was reduced to 210 or £220. for prime Fellows, one of the latest parcells came to us being 140 Angola's we with much difficulty put off, some of the Men payable next Jany. at £240. and we were longer in running them off and met with more difficulties in effecting it than ten times that number would have occasiond three months before. Should Capt Osborn come here (which we truly hope he will not) please to be [206] [1] Richard Oswald, best known as one of the commissioners to negotiate peace with the United States in 1783, had been a merchant in America before he established himself in London. His marriage with a West India heiress brought to him large West India estates and he acquired by purchase many acres on the continent. For years he was the owner of a slave factory on Bance (Bence) Island, from which he sent numerous slave cargoes to America (see this work, II. 111n., 537n.). So uniformly is the spelling Bance used in the material of this volume that the editor has accepted it.

assurd that we shall do every thing in our power to promote your Interest and attentively adhere to your orders as far as is practicable, but as to the Article of Bills they are become very scarce with us and upon the rise must become more so if a War takes place or even if things remain in such a state of uncertainty as they have been for several months past, which gives such a general damp to Trade that there has not been half the Ships to load on Bill this Year as we usually have, by this we have been enabled for some Years past to remit for our Negro Sales totally in Bills almost, but this must cease in case of a War and the Sellers be obligd to ship produce or wait a great while for Bills. We wish we knew when to meet Capt. Osborn with a Letter in the West Indias to prevail upon him to stop there as are persuaded it would be most for your advantage. this we hope you have notice in time to do which will afford us great pleasure.[2]

207. Henry Laurens to Captain Samuel Linnecar, 1756.[1]

8th May 1756.

Capt. Samuel Linnecar or the Commander of the Ship Hopewell to the Care of Messrs Thomas Stephenson and Sons per Morrison

Sir, We are favourd with a Letter under the 1st January past from our mutual good Friends your Owners Messrs. Jona. Blundell and Co. advising they had orderd your Snow the Hopewell with a Cargo of Slaves from Bonny to our address at this Port, except you were stopd at Barbadoes which they doubt, because your Limitts are pretty high, and they direct us, to meet you there with the state of our Market for Slaves which we intend by this. The price of Slaves here while they are imported in moderate numbers is wholly influencd by the value of our Staples, Rice and Indigo, and as these have been depreciated much below the prices of last Year, so have the Planters slackend in the purchase of Slaves, lowerd the prices and lengthend out the Credit. We receivd a Cargo of 140 Slaves from Barbadoes in the month of January last which were indeed an ordinary slender People, 'tho chiefly Men and Women, were ten times as long selling them off as we have usually been selling twice the Number formerly, and avaragd only about £28.10/ Stlg and great part on Credit to 1st January next, but we must observe the same Negroes would sell much better at this Season of the Year and less Mortallity happen among them.

[2] Laurens had written a similar but briefer letter to Messrs. Thomas Mears and Co. on Feb. 25, urging them not to send the Mears to Charleston; in April he wrote in the same strain to Messrs. Smith and Clifton of St. Christopher.

[207] [1] This letter Laurens followed by one to Jonathan Blundell and Co. of Liverpool on May 16, in which he reported to them what information and advice he had given to Captain Linnecar.

The Snow Africa, Capt. Millar, who left you on the Coast arrivd here the 17th Ulto. and her Cargo has been selling off ever since the 27th and still a great many and those likely Slaves too remain on hand so the Avarage of the Sale is not yet known. the Gentn.[2] to whom she was addressd have kept up the prices bravely, sold a good many Men at £250 to £260 etc. and Women 200 to £220 and so in proportion for young ones, but we judge they have been under a necessity of giving long Credit for most of these prices. should a War be declard which we have the strongest reason to believe is done before this day, the price of Slaves will beyond all doubt be much worse and our Exchange rise which we should observe to you is now £712.10/ Currency per £100 Stlg and Bills become very scarce and we would in that case entreat you to stop at Barbadoes or find out some better Market, as this will by no means do for you, but if publick Affairs take an unexpected turn and a peace be establishd or a probabillity of it soon, we really believe this will be as good a Market as any in America for this Summer if no very extrordinary Number of Slaves is brought here. You will learn the state of Publick Affairs as soon at Barbadoes as any where and may in a great measure govern your proceedings thereby, tho' we must further observe that all Slaves from the Bite sell at £3 to £4 Stlg. per head less here than Gambias, Windward or Gold Coast, this is saying as much as we can on the Subject. We should rejoyce to have an opportunity of rendring our worthy friends in Liverpoole and your self our best services, and it would give us real concern to see you here at a dull and unprofitable Season. upon the whole we sincerely wish you may hit on the best Market and make a prosperous Voyage and we shall by all future opportunitys communicate our sentiments if any alteration with us.

P. S. if you should unfortunately have the small Pox or any contagious distemper in your Cargo, dont think of coming hither, let the times be as they may.[3]

. . . We are sorry to hear there are so many Ships intended this way with Slaves the present Year as the prospect of a sudden

[2] Messrs. Inglis, Pickering, and Wraxall. The Africa, a Bristol vessel, brought about 300 slaves, Calabars, and therefore especially difficult to sell. On May 18 Laurens wrote to Messrs. Devonshire, Reeve, and Lloyd, of this cargo, "there now remains on hand at least 40 and most of them pretty young People 'tho the Sale commenced three Weeks ago".

[3] There are in these letters frequent references to the greater severity of the South Carolina quarantine law.

War by which our Planters produce is much affected in price has so far reduced their Spirits that we clearly see they will not buy any large number of Negroes except they can have them at a very low rate. We thought the Sales were very good at Jamaica when Mr. Jere. Meyler [1] was here, by some Letters he receivd from Mr. Hall it appeard he had run off some Cargoes at £47 and upwards. We hope the Markets will hold good and carry down all or most of the Slaves intended this way. . . .

Gentlemen, The foregoing is a third recital of our last to your good selves. We have now before us your esteemd favour of the 5th of March advising of your intentions that your Ship the St. Andrew, Capt. Hood,[1] should proceed from Gambia to this place and that we may expect her the latter end of June, should she reach us the next Ship and with such a Cargo as were Shipd by your Friends in the St. Paul [2] two Years ago we might hope bad as things now appear to render you a pretty good Sale. but if any numbers should arrive before her our hopes may be defeated as there are not many of [our] People have Spirit just now to purchase, so that a few hundreds would supply all their wants. The Slaves from the River Gambia are preferrd to all others with us save from the Gold Coast and as we trust your Ships will leave the Coast much before the Traders which are obliged to go up the River 'tis highly probable she will be a head of all from that Quarter, indeed we do not immagine there will be many come from that River to this place the present Summer as we wrote early to our Friends at Bristol, Liverpoole and Lancaster not to have a thought of sending Slaves to our Market untill the differences should be adjusted between Great Brittain and France, this we have reason to believe will divert the Voyage of half a dozen Vessells that were intended this way. . . .

who between them have upwards of four hundred Slaves besides a parcel of coromentees [1] from the West Indies. One of these Vessels is the King George of yr. Port from Angola,[2] the Other a Sloop of N York from Gambia, the Sloop brings acct. of several Vessels being arrivd in the River that must come down here from whence we have a most shocking prospect of this Summers Sale more especialy for bite Slaves [3] which not one in ten of our People will Touch when Others can be had on Moderate terms. those which are now arrivd we think would be full sufficient to supply the present demand, therefore unless some thing should happen to alter the voyage of those which are behind we fear there will be destructive work with us, we have sent two Letters to St. Kitts to be forwarded to Barbado's for Capt. Linecer, and shall repeat them by every Vessel that shall go soon for that Quarter, as we hertily wish both for your sakes and our own the ship may stop in the West Indies, for Our Commissns do not by any means compensate for the pain we suffer when our friends make a bad Voyage, Whilst we are writing this are Informd the King Geo. aforementiond is from the bite which makes matters still worse as it will beat down the price lower than if they had been Angolas, we wrote Early in the year to all the Gentn. we annually have Negroes from to disire they would not send us any this present year unless Peace should be establishd and we fear we shall have at least six hundred Slaves from Gambia and the Windward Coast to Our House that we did not know of in time to prevent their Coming; thus Gentn. you see our present situation and we sincerely wish you may be relievd from the Inconveniencys attending it by a good markett in the West Indies.

. . . We have but a very dull appearance of the Africa business just now. the Snow Africa of Bristol from the bite reachd us about six weeks ago, and as there was not a negro in Other hands to Interfere in the Sale that Cargo Sold at pretty good prices tho they were a month about it. by that sale we discover that Our People had but little Inclination to Engage for Negroes as it was a most butiful Cargo of the sort, chiefly young People from 15 to 20 which are not accustomd to destroy themselves like those who are [3] Calabars. In a letter to Oswald, written May 26, Laurens stated that these two vessels brought between four and five hundred negroes.

Older. here are now arrivd a Ship of your place from the Bite Calld the King George, a New York Sloop from Gambia and ano'r parcell by a Brigantine from the West Indies, these amongst them have 400 Slaves which we doubt will give a settling blow to that business as Our planters that are able have not the least temptation just now to purchas, the Spring having been very dry, half the Indigo that was planted has perishd, at this wretched conjuncture we have reason to expect the arrival of a Ship of Messrs. Jona. Blundell and Co. from the Bite Every day, which gives us great pain. we were not apprisd of her Coming till about three Weeks ago when we wrote Immediately to the West Indies to meet her there if possible tho we have but little hopes of doing it. it is most Improbable but those Gentn may have communicated their Intentions to you Since they wrote us which was in January tho we did not receive it till the Other day, in which case we shall hope you have prevaild upon them to alter the Voyage as we think it moraly Impossible we should be able to give them any tollerable satisfaction. we have two Vessels coming to us besides that we would give a good deal to have it in Our power to stop, A Ship of Mr. Oswalds and Co. of London from Gambia which is to bring 250 Slaves, another from Bance Island belonging to Augustus and John Boyds Esq. with 170 Slaves.[1] tho these will be abundantly more saleable than those from the Bite we could very hertily wish they might direct their Course some Other way. A number cannot sell with us before the planters shall have a better prospect of a Saving price for their Commoditys than they at present have. some few unthinking People may buy but very few that it woud be our Interest to Trust.

The Sloop from Gambia has now been but six weeks from thence. the master Informs of the Arrival of several Vessels in the River but Capt. Bennet was not amongst those he mentions. Two of them we think must absolutly come down, Capt. Hunt[2] as being Chiefly Ownd here and the St. Andrew Capt. Hood, the Ship of Mr. Oswalds before mentioned. . . .

Sir, The last Letter we gave you the trouble of Was under the 17th April by the Capts. Gilberd and Dickinson. since it Our G. A.

[211] [1] A letter to Messrs. Augustus and John Boyd, of May 25, urged them to try some better market than Charleston.

gave you two Letters, the first of which inclosd Wellseysens bond which we hope would reach you in safety, since which we have not the pleasure of any of your faviours. We have just now got the Sale of Mr. Clarkes Negroes sent to Winyaw at which one died.[1] The Eight produced £1553.10 Currency which is more by £200 than we offerd them for here. this Sum added to £24,035, the Amount the Others sold for makes the total amount of the 125 sold £25,588.10 Currt. The Gros Amot. this upon an avarage at the present Course of Excha. 7⅛ for One is £29 Sterg. per head which we presume would have been no bad Voyage to Mr. Clarke and Co. had it not been for the mortality. We shall have the Sales ready to go to those Gentn. by the first good conveyance that shall offer. we are remitting the money to London as fast as we can possibly obtain bills which grow more and more scarce, at this day, the sum so remitted is £1016.13.4 Sterg. as we know you wish well to Mr. Clarke we are willing to tell you the fate of his adventure. Our Markett is now sadly overstockd from large numbers having lately arrived for which reason all that shall follow the present year must be sold very low. . . .

. . . We have now before us your kind favour of the 22d Ulto. to which permit us to reply that the Negroes per Lightbourn certainly sufferd very greatly from his Decks wanting Caulking, when we chargd him with that neglect he declard that it was his intention to have caulked them but you would not allow him time for it, to which we could make no reply. be pleasd now to receive the Sales of those Slaves, the produce of them carried to the proper Credit £22,470.16.11 Currency, how it will turn out to the Gentlemen concernd we cant pretend to judge not knowing the cost, but when we consider how small a People upon the whole and that many of them were reducd to a very low Ebb by Fluxes, that they also reachd us at an exceeding bad time in the Winter Season upon a Glutted Market We must think that £29. Stlg. per head was a great price for them all things consider'd, such small Negroes would not do very well in this Country at the best of times, our Planters almost to a Man are desirous of large strong People like the Gambias and will not touch small limbd People when such can be had. It was our intention to remit for these Slaves on the Terms as we do to Mr. Knight and others of our valuable Friends but the scarcity of Bills put it out of our power to do it with that dispatch we should otherways have done, that you might not lay out of your Money a great while we have applyd money of our own towards your Remittance as per particulars at foot hereof of the Bills now gone home and that we have ready for the next Ship that Sails for which we debit the proper Accot. Currt. with £12234.12.6 Currency. . . .

We have a Cargo of Slaves from Serralionee to Sell on the 29th, if Capt. Rash does not get away before that time we will Inform you how they moove.[1] Should it happen that most of the Vessels hereafter Expected should stop in the West Indias or come to any accident that may prevent their reaching of us it may possibly give an Opening towards the fall or in the Spring for a parcell to be brought down here to advantage in which case we Shall not fail to give you the most early advice but if the Majority should reach us that are Expected we must have a great many to[o] many for the demand tho we ourselves have stopt 6 or 8 Sail that were Absolutly Orderd here had we not forbid it.[2] . . .

Gentn., We must take Leave to advise you by way of Winyaw that Capt Osborn in the Sloop Carlisle arriv'd in Our Road last night. He advises us that he has on board 141 Slaves for yr. Accots. and Messrs. Oswald, Grant and Co.[1] and that he lost Five on the passage, that all that he has are in health but three which have Fluxes. he does not distinguish to which parcell those belongd that are dead. we find by Our Bill of Lading from Messrs. McLiesh and Stephens 120 of them were Shipd at Bance Island so there must have been 26 Only at Gambia. The Capt. Further informs us that he is [has] nine priviledge Slaves on board. . . . just now our visiting Doctor is come up from the vessel and tells us the men are a very fine parcell of Slaves the Women the reverse. if none Others shall arrive from this time to the day of Sale which we have ad-

[213] [1] True to his promise, Laurens wrote to Clarke on the 30th that a large number of purchasers gathered for this sale, but that the cargo itself was a "shocking" one. A few good men sold for £250 and £260.

[2] On the 19th Laurens wrote to Capt. John Holden of the snow Anson, in care of Messrs. Thomas Stephenson and Son, giving the reasons why it was not advisable for him to bring his negroes to the Charleston market. At the same time he sent a similar letter to the owners of the Anson, Messrs. Hulme and Fowler of Lancaster. Discouraging letters had also been sent to Capt. Samuel Sandys Jan. 22, to Capt. Thomas Whiteside Feb. 5, and to Capt. Samuel Linnecar May 8.

The Seasons for Our Crops now proaving Very Agreeable we hope will raise the Spirits of Our Planters, we are just now going to begin a Sale of a Cargo per the Sloop Hare, Capt. . . . We are pleasd that the Orrels last Voyage was so agreeable and should wish to see Capt. Bennet this Year in his new Ship [1] if we had any prospect of putting them off near the Mark of last Year but are persuaded it cannot be done now. We have had a good many Vessells arrive with us from Africa this Spring and every Sale has grown duller. When many of our People continued to flatter themselves there would be no War, such can now no longer doubt. We shall have an opportunity on the 8th Currt. to try how they stand affected having 150 fine Slaves to dispose of that day Shipd by the Fort at Gambia and the Factory at Bance Island. these are all grown Slaves to a small number, would have sold pretty well had not the Account of War reach'd us as many of our Customers waited to buy Slaves from us. We now fear they will be discouragd from coming to Town wherefore we wish very sincerely that Capt. Bennet may find a better Market. We shall write to meet him at Mountserrat if any opportunity shall present soon. If he should come down here we will load him as near as possible to your orders. . . . We judge Capt. Whitside must have sat down at Mountserrat where we have reason to expect he found a pretty good Market if our advices from the Leeward Islands may be depended upon. We wish as things have happend with us he had come down here, We might in the month of March or April have made a good Sale, pray what can be become of the Thomas.[2] We never have heard a Syllable of her in this Quarter, 'tis not improbable he may have met a Noser on the Coast at that Season and bore away to the West Indias. We hope nothing worse has befall'n her. We in our Letter to Capt. Whiteside which we suppose met him at Mountserrat told him such Slaves as had sold Currt. last Summer at £40 Stlg. would not then bring £30 which was really the case when we wrote but as the Weather became warm our People began to think of Negroes but soon became Shy again from the arrival of three or four Callabar Ships, one on the Heels of another. We made a Sale this last Week of about 70 Slaves from Sierraleon a wretched bad Cargo that one third remain still upon our hands, had they been good we had made as pretty a Sale as we could have wishd for having more purchasers than appeard at the three preceeding Sales put together. if half the number come down on Thursday next we shall do very well. these were two Vessells that came to us unexpectedly and we still look for a third, the St. Andrew, Hood, with 250 Slaves from Gambia. This and the Bance Island Man belong to Messrs. Richard Oswald and Co. whose business was wrested out of our hands by a bold pusher [3] who would do more in his Remittance than any prudent Man could think of, but these Gentlemen see that business done in the common way turns out in the end to most advantage. 'tis not an easy matter to alter a method of Trade long established in a Country and whenever 'tis attempted must be injurious to one side or the other. . . . Capt. Bennet is the first Man that goes to Africa we would wish to see here with a Cargo of Slaves upon the smallest hopes of success and we may possibly another Year when few will send their Ships this way encourage his coming but cant think of it this, our People must have time to recover from their panick the declaration of War has thrown them into before they will act with any Spirit, those who were in any pressing want are already supplyd this Year, therefore out of regard for our friends we would not receive another African Vessell this Year could we fall upon any way to stop them. We must be terribly out in our Judgement if that business does not flag immediately. . . .

Gentn., Our last Trouble was under the 29th June intended by a Ship from Winyaw but was not in time so comes with this. We then had hopes of a very pretty Sale, considering the times, for Capt. Osborns Slaves but Intelligence reachd us very unluckily for this concern on this day week that war was declard in London on the 18th of May which entirely discouragd Numbers from buying at any rate and none would go so high as what has been lately given. We did every thing that was in our power to promote the Sale to the utmost but it was not possible to work the purchasers up to any Spirit, at last were Oblig'd to accept of 225 to £235 for the best men and £200 for the women, at that rate they moavd but hevily. We have sold at this day 23 of the Gambias for £4825 Curry. and Only 68 of those from Bance Island to the amount of £13,580. what remains save a few wenches are Ordinary and too Old. Indeed there is two or three of them so Old that they wont bring with us much more than their Passages. Ours is a very bad Market for ordinary Slaves but more perticularly now that good Slaves flag. The others we cant get an offer for. there are now in this town of that Stamp the tails of several Cargos which can only be sold at Vendue where they yield but little.

We have now before us to reply to your kind faviour of the 18th Feby from Messrs. Rd. Oswald and Co. and Mr Richd. Oswald. we shall take due Care to keep the Accts. Seperate of the Slaves from Bance Island and Gambia, the Five Slaves that dy'd were all from Bance Island, another lies so very Ill there is very little Hopes of her and Eight more so mauger and sickly that they can't appear in the yard. Several have very bad sore Eyes, Others the Yaws,[1] upon the whole they were not a fine Cargo which at this Season we would perticulerly have wishd for. had the day of sale been but ten days sooner it would have been 10 per Cent in your Faviour and Considerably to our advantage on Acct. of the Remittance you Require. This Turn of affairs almost Compells us to sell for almost any Credit the buyers think propper to demand which was not the Case before. tis bad on both sides so we must hope the next concern will prove more successfull tho this cannot be if the St. Andrew should come down here. We fear every Sale hereafter this Summer will grow worse and worse therefore sincerely hope you may have been able to reach Capt. Hood with a Letter to alter his Voyage. . . . Capt. Osborn we believe has ten priviledge Slaves on board but this we shall have more Certainty of by and by. . . . in Consequence of Mr. Oswalds Letter we advertisd the Slaves to be the prime pickd out of a Large Number but we beleive your agent must have mistook you and thought the worst would be good enough for Our market. we are now at the eve of the day and have Only

Gentn., Our last trouble was under the 24th of Jany when we very candidly gave you Our Opinion of the prospect we then had of a Sale for Slaves this Summer. conformable to that Opinion we wrote of the 22d Jany by two or three Conveyances to meet Capt. Saml. Simondson of your Brigt. the Concord at the house of Andw. Lesley Esqr. in Antigua. these Letter we are pretty Sure went Safe and therefore we are in great hopes you would have been exempt from any concern with us during the bad Situation of things here, to our great concern we reced just now a Letter from the said Capt Simondson from Our road below that he was arrived in the Concord with 49 Slaves only, having buried 22 on his passage and that he had been buffeted on this Coast for five weeks past with Contrary Winds within 140 Leagues of the place, very unlucky indeed. had she reachd us so as to have made Sale of the Slaves before the 2d Instant when Accot. reachd us that War was declared in London the 18th of May it would have been at lest 25 per Cent in your faviour from what can be hoped for now, the advice of War Struck Our planters all of a heap and to this is now added Such a drought that Our Indigo and Negro provisions is almost totally demolished, which happens also at a time when the place is quite Chgd with Slaves, that god knows what we Shall do with them, we have on hand a parcell of able men and women of a Cargo Exposd to Sale the 8th Instant from the Factory at Bance Island. this we have try'd every Stratigem in Our power to get Rid of on tollerable terms without success. the Planters wont come near us unless they are nearly hauld along and then wont offer half the price given a few months ago, thus far we had advanced from the receipt of Capt. Simondson Letter and now our H Laurens who went down with the Visiting Doctor is returned we have informd Capt. Simondson how bad the present prospect is and desird him to Consider whether it would not be prudent to proceed with his Slaves to Virginia. he says no as he has been very Sickly and the disorder may possibly return upon him he will take his Chance here, therefore we have advertisd the Sale for the 4th day of Next Month.[1] Capt Simondsons mortality lay Chiefly Amongst his Grown Slaves so that those that remain are mostly boys and Girls, two or three of them so ill that there is no hopes of their recovery. We have a Spaniard amongst us that Seems to want Negroes if we can agree with him may help the Sale a good deal.[2] . . .

[2] On the 19th Laurens wrote that 22 able-bodied slaves were still on his hands, that two had died, and five were near death. He also sent an account of this sale to John Knight, to Gedney Clarke, to Captain Bennett, whom he hoped to reach at St. Christopher, and to Captain Hosden "or the Commander of the Snow Anson" by way of Barbados. On the 26th 100 Bance Island slaves and 24 Gambias had been sold for £18,515 and £4985, respectively.

[217] [1] "Just imported in the Concord, Capt. Simondson, from the Windward and Grain Coast, a Cargo of fine likely young Negroes, To be sold upon very easy terms, on Wednesday the 4th Day of August next by Austin and Laurens." S. C. Gazette, July 29, 1756.

. . . The Drought still continuing with us there is no amendment in the Sale of Slaves, those few that attended our last Sale of the 4th seemd to expect they should get them for little or nothing, that we have not yet sold above half the parcell, We have still remaining of yours Nine, Two of them Gambias which we would part with on very moderate Terms could we find the Person would make the offer, but nothing will tempt them but prime young People. We really think there never could be a worse time for the Sale of Slaves than now therefore most heartily wish your Ship the St. Andrew may receive your orders to proceed some way else which we have hopes she will from the information we have of her by one Capt Todd of Bristol who left the River Gambia between 6 and 7 Weeks ago. he says that Capt. Hood was then laying off the Fort with only Ninety Slaves, that every Vessell in the River had the Small pox on board except the St. Andrew and that Capt. Hood was so apprehensive of the bad consequencys must attend him if his Slaves should be seizd with that disorder, that Capt Todd immagines he would wait a considerable time to avoid that risque which we hope would enable you to reach him with a Letter. Capt. Todd has in 154 Slaves, about 100 of them stout Men, he made a very extrordinary purchase and the Voyage must have been so had our Sales been tolerable notwithstanding he has had the Small Pox and must perform a long Quarantine before he will be permitted to sell. . . .

[2] Laurens reverted to this possibility in a letter to Oswald of July 26, "they being pretty large boys and Girls which are the Sort those people like, but they being Chiefly Accustomd to Calabar Negroes, tis very difficult to bring them up to Such a price for Others as they richly deserve".

. . . These . . . went to advise of the arrivals of your Brigt. the Concord and the bad prospects we had before us of the Sale of your Slaves which is every day growing worse and worse from the Continuence of the drought. on the first day of the Sale we put off only 19 of them and yesterday but three. the men and Women that remain are but Ordinary and Older than Our People Choose Them, the Children too young by 3 or 4 years. none will now tempt Our People to open their purse Strings but very prime young folks of which Capt. Simondson brought none save a few Boys of about 11 or 12 years of age, that we shall be most sadly pushd how to get of[f] these that remain more especially as ano'r Vessel arrived a few days ago with 154 Slaves from Gambia and through her we hear of some Other Vessels may be daily Expected from the same River. wretched must be the Sales, indeed nothing now can possibly prevent it but an imediate plentifull Supply of Rain which may Raise the Spirits of Such as have not as yet quite lost their Crops.

We are now at the 9th and within these two days had Glorious Rain, Which will Save so much of Our Crops as were not before totally destroyd. We wish it may give Our Planters a little spirits to come and take of[f] those Slaves that Stick on hand. we have sold of your Parcell at this day thirty the Amount £4490 Currt, all of them Boys and Girls Except five men, the Men and Women that remain will hang Long unless the late Seasons Shall raise the Spirits of Our Planters as they are Very Ordinary. . . .

Bennit shall have had the disorder as favourably as Capt. Tod we are in hopes he must make you a very pretty Voyage. Tod has brought in 154 fine Slaves and his mortality has been very inconsiderable but how he may come off in a Long quarantine with us at this bad Season of the year we cant pretend to judge. The Rains that usually attend us in the Months of Augt. and Sepr. very Often make the place Sickly. Since Our former we have another little Vessel arrived to us with Slaves from the River Sherbro (viz.) the Concord, Capt. Simondson of Lancaster. we began the Sale on the 4th, at this day have about 1/3 left on hand. Our People are now become very delicate in what they buy, must have Such as dont Exceed the age of Twenty, those which are more go off Extreamly heavily, indeed Our People have another discouragement now attends them almost equal to the Accot. of War, which is a long drought we have had that has distroyd a large part of the Indigo and negro provisions. it goes very much against People to buy negroes when they are Obliged to pay for the provisions they are to Subsist upon and this has made our late Sales a good deal duller than they would Otherwise have been, for three days Past we have had Glorious Rains which may give some Spirits to a few that have not suffered very materially. . . .

[2] Accounts of the result of this sale were sent to Messrs. Devonshire, Reeve, and Lloyd Sept. 7, to Messrs. Robert and John Thompson Sept. 10, and to Gedney Clarke Sept. 13. In a later letter Laurens wrote that the sale averaged £25 stg.

[222] [1] On Sept. 11 Laurens wrote to Richard Nicholas and to Messrs. Foster Cunliffe and Sons, both of Liverpool. Nicholas had consigned to Laurens his snow Nicholas, Captain Jennings, from the Gold Coast, and Cunliffe had directed Capt. Henry Hayston to this merchant.

[2] Cargoes of the Success and of the Cavendish, in the hands of Middleton and Brailsford, and of the Molly, sold by John Guerard, were offered for sale on Sept. 14. S. C. Gazette, Sept. 2, 1756.

[3] Laurens's final statement concerning this cargo was sent on Dec. 16: "Net proceeds thereof to your Credit in Acco't Currt. £11,977.13.1 Currency, there was not men enough in this parcell in proportion to the Women or the sales would have averaged considerable more."

Sir, We have a letter before us of the 2d Septr. from Mr. Henry Bright informing us of your being on a Voyage in the Snow Molly for Angola and this place but to touch at Barbadoes to receive advice from us how far we can encourage or discourage your coming down here. this is a point of great uncertainty to be determined upon just now and puzzells us not a little what advice to give. the declaration of War gave a great damp to the Purchasers of Slaves but towards the latter end of Summer they began to recover from their first panick and gave better prices than they would at first do. now their Spirits seem again depressd from the bad aspect of publick Affairs, the loss of Mahone and the Fort of Oswego [1] seem to affect them sensibly and we really fear in the Spring the Sale of Slaves will be dull unless publick Affairs should take a favourable turn before that time. our last Sales have averagd, We mean since the Accot. of War, 25. to £29. Stlg. per head but it must be observed that these were all Gambia and Windward Coast Cargoes which are better esteemed by our People than Angolas. We shall if opportunity present hold you advisd of our sentiments on this matter until we expect you have reachd the West Indias that is shall inform you if the present prospect shall take any turn either for or against you but thus far may now say, that if you should have the Small Pox or any other disorder that shall much reduce your Slaves we must be of opinion they will do much better in the West Indias than here and we must further observe to you, that our Market requires two thirds as many Males as Females at least to enable us to render a speedy and agreeable Account. We wish you may hit on the most advantageous Market for our good Friends your Owners.[2]

The last Vessell that reachd us from Africa was the Sylvia whose Cargo went off something brisker than those that preceeded, our Planters began to recover their Spirits and in all probabillity would have bought briskly this next Spring had it not been for the late very disagreeable news that has reachd us, the Loss of Fort St. Philip and Oswego which again has a good deal depressd them. if any lucky turn should happen in publick Affairs soon we expect they will get the better of this last Alarm as their Indigo sells much better than they could reasonably hope for 25/ per pds. and they have a prospect of a much better price for their Rice than has been usual in time of War. these are the Funds on which they depend and by which their purchases are entirely influenced. We have received this day Letters from the Leeward Island, which inform us Slaves are very low in that Quarter and have been so for some time owing to a stop being put to the Trade from St. Eustatia and that it must continue untill The Trade shall be again opend which does not seem probable soon as some Dutch Vessells have been condemnd in our Islands. should you send any Slaves to the West Indias this next Summer it might be of service to inform us of their destination and that we should have power to send for them to come down here if our Market should prove good and those in the West Indias very dull. be assurd if you vest us with such authority we shall act entirely with a view to your Interest without the least deviation from it on Account of our Commission.[1]

. . . We are much pleasd to find that Mr. Blundells Ship[2] from Bonny stopd in the West Indias, as they are in extream bad sort of Slaves to come here on a falling Market, will only do when the Commodity, if we may so call them, is much wanted and if the Nicholas[3] Snow found a good Sale at Jamaica we shall be pleased she went there as the best of our Sales last Year could be calld but middling. we cant pretend to say with any certainty how it may be with us this ensuing Year but one good omen of a tolerable Sale for the first Cargoes that may arrive is that many of our customers have lately askd us if we expect any Slaves and entreated us to send for some. however we cant prevail on them to make an offer of any certain price, the plain English is they would be glad to have it in [224] [1] On Dec. 13 Laurens wrote to Clarke: "Several of our Customers have lately been asking us if we expect any Negroes in the spring which inclines us to believe the sales may prove tollerable especially if any vigorous measures shall be taken on our side to give a Check to the French armes in No. America, really the state of affairs are so fluctuating that we dont know what to say on this head with any certainty but as we hear from the Leeward Islands Slaves are become very low with them upon a stopage of the Trade to St Eustatia and which may possibly have the same effect at your market we have been induced to say as much as we can with safety on this head."

[225] [1] On Nov. 22 Laurens reported to Knight the improved price of Carolina products and the effect of this on the planters, and asked that he be notified of all African ventures due in America in the early spring.

their power to buy or let it alone just as the prospect of Affairs shall give them encouragement, We are glad the Willy and Thomas reachd the West Indias in safety. they must have done better than we think, all things considerd, than we could have done for you here nor do we believe we could have done better for our Friend Bennet upon the same consideration. it affords us great pleasure these several Vessells met with so much success in their Voyages, which we shall be glad to contribute to as often as our Market will permit, when we Slack in the encouragement we give you believe us it proceeds from pure Zeal for your Interest and that we dont dislike business when we can do it without prejudice to our Friend, what shall we say in regard to your Gambia concerns this next Year. We believe nothing more can be said than this that if you foresee that the West India Marketts must be dull order them down here, it will hardly do for them to call in the West Indias and from thence proceed in consequence of Letters from us because we judge the risque will be more than doubled by their taking that course and a Cargo is often injured by turning their back on the Islands, the Slaves grow dispirited and pine away for want of knowing the reason why they dont stop there. If you should incline to send one only pray let Capt Bennet be the Man, we should much rather choose to see our old Friend than any new face whatsoever. . . .

Gidney Clark Esqr., Barbadoes

Sir, Our last trouble was under the 13th ulto per Catling for your Island, a Copy of it went by Joseph Dickinson for St Kitts, since wch from the enquiry that has been made of us whether we expect any slaves in the spring we have great reason to believe we shall then have a brisk and good sale, we could [wish] that you may have it in your power to lay in a good Cargo to be with us early on moderate terms. we should not be at all afraid without some great alteration in affairs of rendering you an agreeable acct. of them, and suffer us to observe that Bills of exchange from our Indigo and Rice, being in great demand are become plenty at seven for one. Rice sells current at 35/ per 100 and we believe there has been 400,000 of Indigo sold by this day at 25/ to 30/ per c[w]t. and which has put our planters in high spirits, those who shall have early Cargoes of slaves must feel the good effect of it for our parts we dont expect any very early unless the Molly, Val'n Powell should proceed here from your Island which we can scarcely expect as our Letters hitherto to meet her have not been very encouraging. Please to observe that we have had the good fortune thus far, not to have one of the Enemies Privateers come near our Coast so that our trade is all safely arrived and our harbour so full of ships they may be had for any part of England at £4 per Ton. . . .

[227] [1] Laurens sent two letters to Captain Powell of the snow Molly, one "per Tucker of Antigua", one "per Mr. Perdrian", both in care of Messrs. Shepherd and Cooper, merchants of Barbados. On Jan. 7 he wrote: "many of our Chaps have lately desired us to Import some Slaves in the Spring. We must now recommend to you to come down here if you have a healthy and good Cargo and have not a satisfactory offer in the Islands. We have not had one Cruiser on this Coast as yet so that our Ships come in and go out in great safety. We should be glad to see you here in March or April." In the second letter, written Jan. 15, he added to his good opinion of the market, "we must note that many of our Planters are flush of Cash and that Bills of Exchange are very plenty".

Saml. and Willm. Vernon, Rhode Island

Gentn. Your kind favour of the 8th ulto.[1] reachd us the 28th Ditto. We wish the sale of Capt. Godfreys slaves had been more agreeable, tho really had you seen the condition they were in you must have thought them very well sold, our People latterly make as great a difference between prime slaves and such as are ordinary as in any place whatever and will continue to do so as long as our market shall be as well supplyed as it was last year. we could very heartily reccomend to you to order a Cargo here this Spring if they were young healthy People and could be here early, our planters have obtaind such prices for there Indigo 25/ to 30/ per ct. and this Rice finding a Current sale at 35/ per Cent, we shall be greatly mistaken if we find not a brisk sale for slaves, in the months of March, April, and May, perhaps later but tis highly probable we shall have a number of Gambia Vessels reach us at the proper Season as the markets in the West Indias are very low, and these slaves our People esteem equal to the gold Coast.

We remitted our own Bills to Messrs. Tomlinson, Trecothick and Co. on the 12th Currt for £568.7.5 Sterlg, the 5th of which Bills we now Inclose you and the 6th shall come per next, for the said Bills and our Commission we debit your Acct. Currt with £4177. 10 C. currency and this we judge will bring that Acct. nearly to a Close, which hitherto lies open with us on Account of that slave sold Benja Yarnold, who lingerd under the Docters hands for two or three months and then dyed, the poor man who could but illy afford such a loss thinks it very hard he should pay for her as she had the disorder unknown to him when he bought her, and the very day afterwards fell sick upon his hands, we think it the fairest way to have it adjusted by an arbitration which he has with much difficulty agreed to so that we shall now very soon have an end to it when we will close that Account.[2] . . .

[229] [1] See this work, III. 173. William Vernon had been trading with Charleston as early as 1746 (N. Y. Hist. Soc., Slavery MSS., box. VI). On Jan. 11 Laurens wrote concerning Godfrey's cargo to Thomlinson, Threcothick, and Co., who were the London agents of the Vernons. See this work, III. 147, 168, 170.

[2] Laurens had wished to refund to Yarnold a portion of the price of this negro, to which action the Vernons had objected (this work, III. 171). In 1807 a suit was brought to recover $200 paid for an African girl who died six weeks after her purchase. The judge charged the jury for the plaintiff and refused a request for a new trial. The argument for the defendant was that "the quality of the slave or his soundness of body or mind" was not warranted at the time of sale but that the purchaser chose among many, using his own judgment. Berryl at St. Kitts and others to be forwarded from thence to Barbadoes in which we encourage him by all means to come down if he can arrive here between this and the month of July and has got a healthy good Cargo but really we have very little hopes of seeing him the French Privateers are so numerous in the West Indias.[1] . . .

We continue to abound with Shipping and Freights very dull; as it may possibly be of some service to you to be informed that through the great prices our Planters have obtaind for their Rice and Indigo this Year they seem in great want of Slaves and from thence we believe will give great prices in the Spring. We take leave to mention it to you, upon which we must observe that our People dont like the Slaves of Callabar that are above 16 or 17 Years of Age, those of any other Country sell pretty much alike with them, proviso they are young robust People, the Males sell to much more advantage than the Females, the difference in price generally 5 or £6 Stlg. per head. please to observe that such as are old or ordinary wont bring more here than in the West Indias. If these hints shall prove serviceable to you it will afford us great pleasure.[1]

[230] [1] On the same day Laurens wrote to Capt. Christopher Berryl of the Mears, in care of Messrs. Carter and Hunter of Barbados, repeating the advice here given.

[231] [1] Similar letters had been sent to Meyler and Hall of Jamaica, James Smith of Barbados, and Francis Guichard and Thomas Duberry of St. Kitts and Montserrat.

[232] [1] The next day a similar letter was written to Messrs. Devonshire, Reeve, and Lloyd. On Mar. 14 and 21 statements of the conditions in Carolina were sent to John Boyd and Gedney Clarke. To the former Laurens predicted that Gambia slaves would bring £300.

in the purchase of slaves, whereby the price of the prime men was reduced to £230 and 40 but in having had a glorious Sale for their Indigo and Rice this year their drooping spirits are revivd as appeared by a sale last week of about 200 slaves that were purchased at Barbados, most of them Calabars for the Prime of whom they gave £280 Currency equal to £40 Sterg. and most of them sold for very short pay, a fine Gambia Cargo would just now furnish a very agreeble Accot. and in appearance will so continue this summer if the numbers Imported are moderate. . . .

233. Henry Laurens to Richard Oswald, 1757.

Richard Oswald, London

Sir, Permit us to trouble you with this per the Snow Planter Erasmus Rothmahler master, a Vessel in which we are two Ninths concernd and which may possibly suit you to make a trip to the Coast of Africa, as she was Originally built in France for that purpose, to us appears well calculated for it and that she will sail well to which we may add that the master is a sober active young fellow, has made two or three Voyages to the Coast, and as that is the business of all others he seems to prefer there is reason to believe that if he was employd he would assidiously endeavour to give satisfaction in hopes of being continued on the same Voyage. what induces us to mention this to you is that we imagine she may discharge at a proper Port for your purpose, that is in Holland or Hamburgh as she is ordered to stop at portsmouth and from thence proceed as shall be directed by Mr. John Nutt, who will be impowerd if such a Vessel should be usefull to you to execute a Charter. We have had only about 220 slaves reachd us as yet this year that were purchased at Barbadoes the major part of them Calabars, which sold as high as £40 Sterg, we mean the prime men, those of the other stamp in Proportion, we are of opinion slaves will continue to sell well with us this summer, if our Province shall remain in the present state of Tranquility and the Importation is not excessive, but we are told the Enemy [threatens] us a visit from the Missassippy, if it proves so our People will have a different employment to that of Planting and of course wont have Occasion to enlarge their number of slaves.[1]

[233] [1] Laurens also wrote to John Nutt: "We have recommended the Snow to our Worthy friend Mr. Richard Oswald in London who frequently hyres Vessels to go out to the River Gambia or Siralion River in Africa and 'tis probable you may make a freight for her in that way as she is extremely well calculated for the African business and Capt. Rothmahler much inclined and we believe well qualified of a young man for such a voyage, as she is fit for a Guiney man having a great height between decks and very airy."

Tuesday last arrived Capt. Holden from Gambia. . . . we have Advice by the same Vessel that the Snow Black Jake, Capt. Stubbs, of London, from Africa bound hither, was lately taken to Windward of Barbados.

Charles-Town, May 19.

Capt. Dickinson . . . . informs us that a Brigg. was arrived at Barbados, from the Coast of Africa, which had narrowly escaped being taken by a French Squadron of 2 74 Gun Ships, 1 60 Gun Ship, and 2 Frigates, who had cut off most of our Traders upon the Coast of Guiney. And that the Brigt. had on board 4 of the English Captains that had been taken by them.

235. Case of the Rainbow, 1758.[1]

[Captain Joseph Harrison to Thomas Rumbold and Company.]

[Barbados, February 28, 1758.]

We arrived here on the 25th inst. in company with Capt. Perkins from Bonny, and Capt. Forde from Angola, whom we fell in with at St. Thomas's. The packet arrived here from England the day after us. I expect to sail from hence for South Carolina in five days, having on board 225 slaves, all in good health except eight. On the 23rd of June last, I had the misfortune to fall in with a French brig privateer, of fourteen 6-pounders, to leeward of Popo.[2] . . . We were three days in repairing our rigging, etc. and on the 28th got over the Bar of Benin and found only one vessel there, viz. a Portuguese sloop at Warree. I purchased eight slaves on the windward coast, and 261 at Benin, besides 5400 weight of ivory. Leaving the river, Nov. 9th, we arrived at St. Thomas's Dec. 17th, from whence our three vessels sailed, Jan. 4th. I have buried all my officers, except my first and third mates and gunner. Having lost since left Liverpool, 25 white people and 44 negroes. The negroes rose on us after we left St. Thomas's; they killed my linguister whom I got at Benin, and we then secured them without farther loss. We have an account of five privateers being to windward of Barbadoes, by a retaken vessel brought in here this day, so that we shall run a great risk when we leave Barbadoes.

The Deposition of John Dawson Mate of the Snow "Rainbow", born at Preston in Lancashire Aged Forty Years touching the Suppos'd Murder of George Crawford and Comer late Mariner, belonging to said Snow "Rainbow". [3]

That on the high Seas in a voyage from the Coast of Africa to America in and with the Said Snow, at the places Call'd Benein and the Island of St. Thomas, George Crawford One of the Mariners on board the said Vessell, being Ordered to assist in hauling up the Treysail (Then standing on the Hen Coop) he then pull'd the rope Call'd the Foot Brail which gave way by means whereof he fell in a Violent Manner with his head upon the Deck, where he remain'd Stun'd and Speechless. That Capt. Harrison at that time having a Catt of Ninetails in his Hands.

And driving the Negroes off the Deck, and apprehending that the said George Crawford was Shamming, gave him a gentle blow with the Catt, such as woud. not have hurt a Child. And this Deponent declares that the said Joseph Harrison did not kick or Otherwise abuse the said George Crawford, but that when the Doctor had in vain apply'd some Salvolatile to the Nostrils of the Said George Crawford, the Said Captn. Harrison blew some Tobacco Smoke to his nose, in Order to recover him to his Senses, but the said George Crawford remain'd Still Speechless till he died.

And this Deponent further declares upon Oath that John Alexander late Gunner of the Said Snow, was not upon the Deck of the Said Snow At the time of the Accidents happening nor was it possible for him to see what then happened upon Deck. And the Deponent verily believes that the said George Crawford's falling as aforesaid on Deck was the Occasion of his Death and not from any ill usage he mett with from Captn. Harrison. And the Deponent further declares that he knew of no ill will subsisting between Captn. Harrison and the said Geo. Crawford at the time of his falling. The Deponent also Saith that he hath frequently heard John Alexander abuse and threaten the said Captn. Harrison, saying he would be reveng'd.

The Deponent further Says That Captn. Harrison at Benein, hired one Dick, a free negro man, as a Linguist between him and the Slaves to proceed on the Said Voyage, that his being on board the Said Snow was of great Consequence to the Interest of the Voyage. That Richard Kirkby commonly called Comer, had reported that the said Dick was bought as a Slave by Captn. Harrison and woud. be sold at the West Indies. That one of the Mariners told Dick he was no better than a Slave, and woud. be sold as such when they arriv'd at the West Indies, that thereupon Dick grew sulky, and that the Slaves on board refused their Victuals and woud. be under no Command as formerly, and in this humour they continued for two days; That Captn. Harrison having Observ'd an Alteration in Dick's behavior, ask'd him what was the matter, and with some reluctance Dick told him what he had heard, That Captn. Harrison thereupon enquir'd into the matter, and found that Comer was the Author of the said Reports. Whereupon the said Dick demanded Satisfaction of the Said Comer, but the Captain told him he coud. give him no Satisfaction having no power to beat any White Person on board, but Dick being Dissatisfied, and stormed and Raged upon Deck; and in the Deponents Opinion, the Captain apprehended danger from the Slaves, and therefore to prevent Insurrection Desir'd the said Dick to take Satisfaction of the said Comer,—which he did, by tying up the said Comer, and giving him at two different times, about three or four and twenty lashes in the whole. That the Deponent is of Opinion that the said Whipping was not the Occasion of his death but that he died of a Lethargick Disorder, with a flux and Dropsye. Now [nor] does he believe the whipping hastened his Death, because it was not severe or violent, and also declares that no blood issued from the Body of the said Comer, by the whipping given him as aforesaid. And the Deponent saith the said Comer had the Said disorder on him at the time of his being whip'd.

The Lievsley, Capt. Onslow, with 323 Slaves on board, and a Rhode-Island Sloop, one Johnson, Master, with 150 more, both from Africa, and designed for this Port, are taken by French Privateers to Windward of Antigua.[2]

At the same sessions capt. Wm. Lugen was tried for the murder of a Black infant: He had sailed upon the slaving trade from Bristol, and had taken in about 200 Blacks upon the Coast of Africa, and was carrying them to Carolina, among whom was a woman with a young child. The woman, in the voyage, happened to die of a flux, and the child being very ill of that distemper, the crew belonging to the ship very naturally committed the care of the poor infant to the people of its own colour: but they, like true savages, handed it upon deck, and refused to admit it amongst them; their reason was, because they believed the distemper to be infectious, and dreaded it as we do a plague. The infant, then, in a very miserable condition lying exposed to the broiling heat of the sun, and in the agonies of death (for the surgeon declared it could not live the day out) the capt. ordered it to be thrown overboard. The capt. appeared to be a man of great humanity in other respects, tho', in this instance, he seems to have forgot the tenderness of his nature, and, as the court very justly observed, took upon himself to determine upon a case of life, which Providence alone could decide. He was however acquitted, as there could be no premeditated malice in the case.

at Senegal, our two new Conquests on that Coast,[5] and that no Enemy had offered to give the least Interruption to our Trade.

July 7.

On Wednesday last put in here for a Supply of Water, the Ship Black-Prince, of Bristol, Capt. William Miller Commander, from the Coast of Angola, with 500 Negroes, bound for Virginia. Capt. Miller says, his was the only English Vessel that had been upon that Coast this Year, but he left 6 large Ships there under Dutch colours supposed to be bound for the French West India Islands. . . .

The Ship Polly, Capt. Hamilton, and the Ship Mercury, Capt. Ingledieu both of Bristol, were lately lost on the Coast of Africa. Capt. Hamilton was destined for this Port with a Cargo of Slaves. A Sloop commanded by a Brother of the above Capt. Ingledieu, slaving up the River Gambia, was attacked by a Number of the Natives, about the 27th of February last, and made a good Defence; but the Captain finding himself desperately wounded, and likely to be overcome, rather than fall into the Hands of such merciless Wretches, when about 80 Negroes had boarded his Vessel, discharged a Pistol into his Magazine, and blew her up; himself and every Soul on Board perished.

The Snow Perfect, Capt. William Potter, of Liverpool, bound for this Port, is also cut off by the Negroes in the River Gambia and every Man on board murdered; and the Vessel lost.

July 21.

According to some Accounts that have been received, there is Reason to fear, that the Ship Pearl, of and from Bristol, Henry Todd Master, bound for Gambia and this Port, was lost in coming out.

[238] [1] On Nov. 1, 1760, the Gazette reported the number of importations since Nov. 1, 1759, as 3573. The total number of negroes sold this year by Austin, Laurens, and Appleby must have been at least 1000; that by their closest competitor, Middleton and Brailsford, 900. The largest cargoes of the year were those of the Prince Tom and the Roebuck. It is noticeable that the advertisements for this year are more frequently repeated than they have heretofore been. Shirley's notice of the sale of the Anne appears in seven issues. In its last appearance it is specified that the sale of "200 Guiney Negroes" is to take place at Beaufort Port Royal.

[2] "Monday arrived here the Ship Keppel, Walter Kerrat present Master, with 50 Slaves from Senegal (our new Acquisition on the Coast of Africa). The late Captain, with all his Crew except two Mates and two Seamen died at Senegal, and the Vessel has been navigated from thence to this Port by these four, with the Negroes, who never once made an Attempt on the Lives of the Whites. By this Ship, we have Advice of the Arrival of the Ships that sailed from England with our last London Fleet at Goree and Senegal" (S. C. Gazette, Jan. 5, 1760). For an account of the English capture of Goree and Senegal see E. C. Martin, The British West African Settlements, 1750-1821, pp. 57-58.

[3] May 27, 1765, "Dined this day with Mr. Thomas Shirley, a very polite English Gent. residing here in very genteel fashion: is an ingenuous ready man: was bread a mercht., has travel'd much, understands several modern languages: pass'd the afternoon agreeably with him". Webster also dined with, and recommends in similar fashion, William Glen; Thomas, Thomas-Loughton, and Benjamin Smith; John Torrans; and John Head. "Journal of Pelatiah Webster's Voyage to Charleston, 1765" (ed. T. P. Harrison), Southern Hist. Assn., Publications, II. 137.

[4] One vessel intending to deliver a cargo in Charleston failed to do so: "The Snow Hannah, of Liverpool, Edward Prescott, Master, with 270 Slaves on board, from Serra-Leon for this Port, after beating four Weeks upon this Coast, has been obliged to put in to Okerecock, in North-Carolina, for a Supply of Provisions." S. C. Gazette, June 14, 1760.

[5] "The snow Race-Horse, of Bristol, John Barker master, from Africa, with slaves, bound for this port, after being three weeks in soundings, in constant thick foggy weather, on the 22d instant, about a quarter past eight at night, struck on the shoal called the Frying-Pan, off Cape-Fear; the next morning capt. Barker ordered his second mate ashore with six hands to get assistance, which having procured, he returned to where he left the snow, but could neither see nor hear anything of her, upon which the said mate is come hither by land. There were only six white hands besides the captain left on board the snow and the vessel lay in six feet of water" (ibid., July 5, 1760). Two weeks later the following notice appeared in the Gazette: "To be Sold by the Subscribers, at their Store at Stono Landing, on tuesday the 23d Instant, A Cargo consisting of about One Hundred and Sixty Healthy Young Negroes. Just arrived in the Snow Racehorse, John Barker, Master, directly from the Coast of Africa. INGLIS, LLOYD, and HALL." Ibid., July 19, 1760.

[6] Some notion of the competition in buying slaves may be gathered from a report made by Captain Wilkinson of the Jenny, with 370 slaves from Angola (ibid., June 14, 1760). When he left the Angola coast he left behind him:

"At Cabenda.	The Success, Piggot, of London
	The Kingston, Brown, of Bristol
	The Prince Tom, Chilcott, of Liverpool
At Melimba.	The Antelope, Hamilton, of Bristol
	The Eagle (late Jones) of Ditto

"The pernicious Consequences of too free an Importation of Negroes into this Province, having lately become the Subject of serious Consideration of some public-spirited Gentlemen, a Motion was lately made in the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly, for leave to bring in a Bill, 'laying an additional Duty on all Negroes and other Slaves thereafter imported,' and such a Bill has accordingly been brought in this Day. 241. News Item relating to Slave Trade, 1761.[1]

Charlestown, South Carolina, Sept. 12.

On thursday last arrived capt. Taylor and capt. Duncan, from Bance-Island on the Rice-Coast of Africa, by the former of whom we have the following information,[2] viz. That the Amethiste, the French frigate sometime since mentioned by capt. Dodson to have arrived on that coast, came out the 15th of June to the Banana's (some Islands to the southward of the river Sierra Leon) within which is a very good road, and where then lay the Flora of London, James Taylor master, with 200 slaves on board, and the Hare of Liverpool, capt. Colley with 500 more: but she arrived there too late to come within gun shot of the English Vessels: That capt. Taylor sent his boat to inquire who she was, when the commander of the frigate took two negroes out of her, and making sure of the ships, sent her back for the masters and their papers: That capt. Colley being on board the Flora when the boat returned, immediately went on board his own vessel, cut his cables in the night put to sea, and got safe off the Coast; but capt. Taylor finding it impossible to get away, put his slaves on shore, and set fire to his ship, so that Mons. was sadly disappointed in the morning of his booty: That about 40 leagues to the southward of Sierra Leon, the said frigate took a Brig belonging to Liverpool, Ray, master, with about 100 slaves on board, bound for Virginia: That she likewise took a sloop belonging to Rhode Island, as she was coming round the shoals of St. Anne's, one Ellick or Alleck master, with 50 more slaves, which she took out and burnt the vessel: And that she left the Banana's the 1st of July, proceeding further down the coast, where it is probable she has made a number of other captures.

[241] [1] S. C. Gazette, Sept. 12, 1761; see also Boston News Letter, Oct. 15, 1761.

[2] Earlier news of the depredations of the Amethiste was brought to Charleston by Robert Dodson of the Marquis of Granby, who arrived in Charleston about the first of August. Captain Dodson reported that in the beginning of May the Amethiste, commanded by M. Buxaulle, had captured the Lady Augusta, the Trial of London, the Friendship, and the Nancy, and had made an unsuccessful attempt to take James Fort. Boston News Letter, Sept. 17, 1761.

Various items in the Gazette indicate the interest of Charleston in the effect of the war on the African trade. In May the captures of the Kingston, William Brown, the Molly, William Denison, and the Prince Tom, Chilcott, were reported. In October, among the list of French captures appear two "Guiney-men bound for New York, one of them a brigt. with 80 slaves, John Nicoll master, the other a sloop with 128, called the Sally, commanded by Michael Molton; and a brigt. from Sierra-Leone to Charleston (no names mentioned) ransomed for 350 l. Sterling". *S. John Knight, Liverpoole

Dear Sir, . . . The acquisition of Havanna[1] will give great spirits to the Planters in Georgia and this province to purchase Negroes, a Cargo from Angola lately sold at higher prices than ever we knew considering the quality.[2] . . .

[242] [1] The imports for the year were 640. The cargo of the Neptune was sold at "the House of Mr. Thos. Nightingale on Charles Town Neck"; that of the Hope at the "House of Mr. John Poaug, near the New-England meeting house in Old Church Street" (S. C. Gazette, Feb. 27, Nov. 6, 1762). On Dec. 16 Laurens wrote to Oswald: "only three Cargoes of Negroes have arriv'd here this Year the last a very ordinary one from about Sierraleon which nevertheless sold at great prices rather higher considering the Quality than ever I knew, but some difficulty will attend the Remittances and perhaps an advanc'd Exchange as Bills are very scarce."

245. Henry Laurens to Richard Oswald and Company, 1763.

Richard Oswald and Compa. London

Gent. . . . as I formerly wrote you I would rather not pursue the African Trade yet if you should think proper to direct any of your Ships to my care I will either dispose of the Cargo or Cargoes myself or make a pains of puting them into such hands as will give you as much satisfaction as the times shall admit and give equal assistance in the Sale as if I was to be sole gainer by the Commission . . . less Capital than I have in possession have often been employ'd to wield more business than three or four Cargoes of Negroes per annum can create but I would in this uncertain Climate and for other considerations endeavour to avoid embarassment and I shall keep my affairs with in such a Compass as not to expose any of my friends to disappointment.

I do believe that the demand for Negroes all the ensuing Year will be very great in this Country and Georgia and that high prices will be obtain'd provided that not more than one or two Cargoes arrive at the same time.

I have observ'd that 1500 Negroes droping in by 4 or 5 Importations at a little distance of time from each other have always yielded a greater avarage than half the number arriv'd at the same juncture. We have now a large field for Trade opening in these Colonies and a vast number of people seting down upon our [blank] Lands and that with a little management will take off almost insensibly a Cargo by one or two in a Lot, and it has been from such folks that we have always obtain'd the highest prices and hitherto we have had no reason to be discouraged from dealing with them on account of bad debts, if I were to tell you the total loss that we have sustained in that way you would be pleas'd on our Acct. to find it so small. . . .

. . . One Cargo of negroes only sold this Season;[1] the best men yielded £320 per head which is more than ever was given and

Henry Bright, Esq. Bristol

. . . The Season for Negro Sales is over in the present Year the last Sales were beyond any former Vizt. Angola and Windward Coasts averaged from £32. 10/ to £34 and one Cargo of Gambia did really sell so high as £36.9/ round, but they were chiefly grown and the prosperity of our planters will in all probability open the next season as well as the late one has been concluded.[1] . . .

Per Capt. Brownett
John Knight, Liverpool

. . . The last subject I have to trouble you upon at present is your very affectionate manner of throwing further gain into my Lap in that advantagious branch the Guinea trade. I had well considerd what you said under the 25 Septembr. about the Pocock, which I know woud. be only a Leading String to other Vessels and after observing to a friend that you were resolved to make a Negro Merchant of me again I had come to this resolution to accept your kind offer provided you woud. gratify me so far as to be my Partner which of all right I thought you ought to be so far as concern'd the Commissions arriving from my Sales and agreeable hereto had notified to some of my old a[c]quaintances in the Country (who have as belonging to the preceding season. On July 15 he wrote to John Knight that the cargo brought by Captain Davis had averaged between £33 and £34, but that many remained unsold after the second day. On Aug. 25 he wrote to Smith and Baillies of St. Christopher: "Negroes have yielded great prices hitherto and will continue to do so thro the Year unless the Importations should be excessive, a Cargo of Angola's lately averaged £32 Sterlg. round and 50 prime Gold Coast Negroes bo't in Antigua at £34 per head sold in One Lot at £300, round."

[247] [1] On Oct. 19 Laurens wrote to Smith and Baillies that the remittances for the Gambia cargo were at "3, 6 and 9 months all in the Bottom", and added, "this cannot be expected every day but I do believe that great prices will continue to be given even all the ensuing Winter and until the importation shall become excessive, which may probably be the case early in next Summer from this great encouragement".

been often teasing me to import more Negroes) that I should have a Cargo of Slaves ready for them early in the Spring and perhaps a Second which I did purpose to ask you for, when just at the time your next favour of the 4 Novr. reach'd me and directed me in case of adhering to my former plan of Shunning the African Trade to signify the same [to] Messrs. Shirley and Martin to whom in such case you had order'd Captain Miller to deliver his Cargo upon my own Account. I most chearfully Aquiese in this alteration and have declared myself to that House accordingly and this you may depend upon Sir that whenever your Interest is concerned my good wishes will be there and my attention and assistance too as far as I dare with decency and good Manners extend them. Your remark upon Mr. Shirley's praises of me (which indeed he had better spared) do quite overwhelm me. I can only say again what I have wrote and said a thousand times that I shall as long as I live bear the most grateful remembrance of you . . .

P. S. In my declaration to Messrs. Shirley and Martin I did on your Account take the Liberty to reserve to myself the right to interfere in the Pocock's Cargo in case that by death or other accident in their House it should become necessary.

249. Henry Laurens to Joseph Brown, 1763.[1]

Joseph Brown, Geo. Town

Dear Sir, . . . The Request that you make for my assistance to procure you a Small Cargo of Negroes I shall most readily comply with as far as 'tis in my power if you yourself will lay down a plan to proceed upon which I am affraid you will find attended with some difficulty and not a little risque and danger to your own Interest; for the very reasons you assign will operate powerfully with the owners of Guinea Men against sending a Vessell to your Port without a warrantee both as to the price and remittances; as there never have been an attempt of that Kind made the first adventure must be tempted by some sure promises especially while there is so fine a Markett for slaves in the Center of the province and in the old beaten Track then the people that you quote being as you say in General poor their honesty allowing to be greater than other folks will be no inducement to the affrican Traders who love to go and allways seek for that Market where there is most money, stirring and where there are Men of Fortune who in Case of a Glutt will take of[f] a Cargo at some rate or other and pay for them. Now Sir the two points that you have to establish are assurance that in your new trade better prices than at Charles Town will be obtained and also better remittances and to give security for the performance of both for without something better offers you know that no Trade can be diverted from its' old Channel but wou'd you make such offers? I think not, I wou'd advise you as a friend not to do it; at least before you have well considered the nature of such an engagement, suppose you had a Cargo of Negroes arrived to you on one wing of the Province while there was another upon the right and two or three in the Center which in all probability will be the Case this year how would you be perplexd how embarrs'd? forced to sell for long Credit in order to m[a]intain the prices or to run off the Slaves very low for Money in order to comply with the terms of remittances; perhaps about the same juncture you may fall Sick and perhaps die —what a Situation would your widow and Children be in, more I cou'd say but may be I have said too much until I hear of or see your proposals which are always to be laid down as the first step and therefore I suspend the Subject untill I hear from you again. . . .

[250] [1] To this list many small cargoes from the West Indies should be added. The reiterated advice of the preceding year had taken effect and English merchants, not yet acquainted with the revival of the Charleston market, were not ordering cargoes to that port. Charleston prices were however known in the West Indies and many West India houses were sending small lots north, hoping to profit by the restored prices before the market was again glutted with African cargoes.

[2] Where no date appears under "Gazette", the date of "Sale" is that of the letter of Laurens in which occurs the first mention of the arrival of the vessel.

[3] On Dec. 15 Laurens wrote to John and Thomas Tipping of Barbados: "if Mr. Knight's Ship Hope brings any prime Slaves in her I expect to make a very great Sale of them I do think that a fine Cargo to arrive early in Feby or March will average £36 Stg. but the Coast is dangerous to encounter at that Season with a Live Cargo and I speak only of what may be done if every [thing] conspir'd in ones favour at the same time it is my opinion that Negroes will sell very well here all the Next Summer." If this is Knight's Hope, Laurens had apparently resigned the consignment.

[4] May 7, 1764, Laurens to John Knight: "Brewton and Smith averaged Capt. Bostock's Cargo of 410 Windward Slaves last week at £36. I never saw them But am told they were not a fine Cargo and many little ones—the average is just now sent to me by themselves. this is probably the flower of the Market and I wish your Factors had gathered it."

Per Capt. Nelme
Smith and Baillies, St. Christophers

. . . Of your five Negroes per the Sally, Capt. Floyd,[1] I have sold four and hope to sell the other tomorrow so as to average upwards of £41 Sterling which you will say is very great considering their Country and that two of them were little Boys, but let me beg of you not to be encouraged from this as to dabble to[o] freely for our high prices will probably occasion vast Importations and soon knock down the Market but If you do send any more let them be young Men, likely and healthy and none others, and to come early in the Year and to have some Clothing and great care taken of them in the passage.

You must know Gentlemen that I have in general declined the African business, altho I have had the most kind and friendly offers from my friends in London, Liverpool, and Bristol, and do believe that I might have sold 1000 or 1500 last Year and more the Year we are now in if I wou'd ask for them but having no Partner I do not chuse to embarrass and perhaps involve myself in concerns too unwieldly for a single Man both on his own and his friends Account, however a few more now and then of a good sort I can manage well enough for you while the prices keep up of which I shall keep you advised.[2]

. . . I have an Inclination to send a small Vessel to your Factory at Bance Island for Negros for my own use provided I coud Ship Some Articles from hence that woud assist in paying the pur-

[251] [1] This refers to an incalculable source of supply for Carolina: the cargoes of miscellaneous goods from the West Indies were often supplemented by half a dozen negroes. These would but rarely be advertised in the Gazette, nor would they be suggested by the custom-house returns there published and it is impossible to form any estimate of the number thus brought in during a year. These, it must be remembered, were new negroes, that is, negroes who had not been in the West Indies six months, otherwise the duty on them would have been prohibitive.

[2] On Mar. 1 Laurens reported the returns from these negroes as £1322, and the amount received for a single negro sold for James Smith, as £228.17.6. In the same letter he asked that whatever cash of his lay in the hands of this house be invested in new negroes, to be sent to him by a "carefull and humane" captain. On the same day he wrote to Martin and Stevens of Antigua: "I lately sold a few from the West Indies at an average of £37. 10 Sterg. Net Proceeds Duty and Freight etc. all paid but no doubt we shall be fully supply'd and great abatement of prices before the Summer is over."

chase and the remains in Bills of Exchange. I therefore beg the favour of your opinion of my scheme, and information of such Goods as will be acceptable at your Settlement and the Sterling price of prime Negroes delivered there, that if practicable I may provide in time for the next Season.

I shall have two Plantations to settle and think I may procure hands by this means on easier terms than purchasing here and this method of Selling Negroes if I remember right is most consistant with the plan laid down by yourselves. . . .

A Cargo of Negroes, about 120 Angolas from Antigua, sold a few days ago at an average of £43 Stg. but this cannot hold when the usual supplies arrive.[1]

. . . meantime I send you five fine Negroes for Sale each hath a Blanket and I hope will produce as much as the rest that I have sold here viz £330 to £320 payable in two Months and some for Cash and in my opinion these are equal to any of them save the difference that fancy may make. You will sell these and pass the proceeds after deducting your Commission to my Credit. . . .

. . . I should be glad for your sake that some of your African[s] would drop in. I sold as wretched a fifty Ebo Slaves[2] this week as ever I saw at £34. 6/ Stg. round. They were sent to me by a friend in the West Indies contrary to my will as well as expectation. had they been tolerable they would have yielded £8 or £10 more but there was no less than 31 scrawney females amongst them and none except 4 Boys that Could be called passible. . . .

[252] [1] On Feb. 24 Laurens wrote to John Knight: "a little Cargo unexpectedly sent to me from the West Indies avergd. £43 Sterling. I call it a Cargo tho there were only 14 in the number but being too old, two Swelled and Sick, and two Boys under Size the colection makes no bad epitom of a Cargo."

[253] [1] Pa. Hist. Soc., Laurens Letter-Book.

[254] [1] On Mar. 21 Laurens wrote to Capt. Henry Todd of the sloop John: "if you can purchase likely little Negro Boys either there or to Leeward not lower than 48 to 50 Inches high for about £16 to £20 Sterlg. per head you may lay out my Money in three or four such if it will extend so far."

[2] From Calabar. There is no record in the Gazette of this sale. In fact the Gazette announces no sales between Feb. 21 and Aug. 30, yet on July 6 Laurens wrote that about 2000 negroes had been received since February.

per Capt. Mitchell
Smith and Baillies, St. Kitts

Gentlemen, On the 6th Inst I recd. your favour of the 21st March per the Mary Ann Sloop with Bill of Loading for 50 New Negroes on Your Acct. which came in all alive but extreamly meagre and thin. I viewed them with great attention over and over again and likewise took the opinion of a Gentleman who had formerly lived with me and Assisted at the Sale of many Thousands, and upon the whole was convinced that the ordinary course of this Market would by no means turn them out to your advantage, and having that Solely in view I had project'd a voyage to George Town Winyaw in which I should have Subjected myself to no small risque, and had given Capt. Mitchel orders to deliver the Slaves on board a Schooner which I had engaged for that purpose but the Wind coming suddenly round to North and blew fresh and put an end to that Scheme. I then purposed to send them to Port Royal but could not agree upon terms to induce me as I do not so well like the payments in that quarter; and at length Mr. Francis Stuart of Beaufort made me an offer of £11,200 for the whole which I rejected, at the same time told him he might have them for £12,000, which after a day or two he agreed to give but then we parted on Acct. of the time of Payment which he would have to be 1st January next he went out of Charles Town and left directions with a House here to agree with me if I should come to his terms. And after placing your Negroes in the most advantageous light that I could

vizt. 5	Men not extraordinary at	£300—£1500
10	inferior 3 of them very ordinary	£280— 2800
15	Women cheifly small and very thin	245— 3675
16	Girls very thin and slender	£200— 3200
4	Boys small	£240— 960

and considering the very great probability of a large abatement from these prices by the arrival of African Ships I thought it most for your Interest to accept of Mr. Stuart's offer which with some difficulty I got the Gentlemen here who were grown very cool to confirm, and I think my self very Lucky in effecting the bargain, because I could not have sold upon so good terms above one half of them before the arrival of a Ship from the Windward Coast with 410 which would have knocked the Sale of the remainder on the head. upon the whole I have done the utmost in my power to make a good Account of them and should have been very glad to have got any body else to have accepted the sale upon the same conditions. the Credit that I have been obliged to give may pro[b]ably be attended with some inconvenien[c]e to you. its evedently so to me by the advance that I am oblidged to make for the Sloops Cargo and for the Duty which you are heartily welcome to. please now to receive Accts. sale of said Negroes Nt. proceed to the Credit of your Acct. £10,905—which Acct. is also charged for Amot. of 244 Barrels and 62 half Barrels of Rice and 5 M Shingles Shipped on your own Account per the Mary Ann and her disbursements £3536.1.7 as per Invoice Bill of Loading and one of Capt. A ship belonging to Mr. Knight in Liverpooll arrived yesterday with about 260 to 280 Slaves from Whyda [2] and orders to call on me and put the Cargo into my hands if I would undertake to dispose of it, this I am determined not to do unless I find it necessary for my friends Interest to interfere. I see the Captain has an alternative in case of my refusal; and the name of Your House Messrs. Shirley and Martin is Mentioned. he informs me that his orders are to have remittances for the whole Amount in the Bottom Vizt. a load of Rice and some Deer Skins and the remainder in Bills at 3 and 6 months. If you incline to take him up be pleased to inform me directly and take as soon as you can the necessary steps for making a good Sale. Let who will sell them, my regard to Mr. Knight will oblige me to offer my best services upon that occasion and the more as he seems to require it in very pressing terms.

Gent'n, I believe you have not been explicit with Capt. Capt. William Frierson, Williamsburgh

Dear Sir, The Cargo of Negroes for Sale as per inclosed Advertisements to be sold by Messrs. Brewton and Smith belongs to a particular friend of mine in England.

The Negroes are from that part of Africa which people in the West Indies esteem most for producing the best Slaves.

Please to disperse the Advertisements as quick and as generally as you can and I wish it may suit you and many others of my old friends in your Quarters to attend the Sales. . . .

Collo. Daniel Heyward, Indian Land

Dear Colonel, A Cargo of Negroes belonging to a very good friend of mine is offered to Sale by Messrs. Brewton and Smith as per inclosed Advertisement—which I take the Liberty to forward and recommend to your consideration. You have often complimented me with enquiries when I should have Negroes and promised of further favours which add to the obligations that I am under for all past ones. Now Sir your aid at this Sale of my friends will oblige me as much as if I made the Sale myself and if I can but win you to come and see them I am under no doubt that the Country will tempt you to make a small purchase.

. . . Last Saturday Morning the 19th [9th] Inst. your Ship Jenny, Capt. McKie, arrived here with 269 Slaves on the Ships Acct. and 23 upon Freight from Whydah, Capt. McKie wrote to me that he had orders to make an offer of his Cargo to me, for which Additional favour I beg leave to repeat my most grateful thanks; upon enquiry I found that you had given the Capt. an alternative in case of my refusal and named the Houses of Messrs. Shirley and Martin, Brewton and Smith or any other that I should recommend and that the terms in case I didnot take up the Ship were remittances for the whole per Bills in the bottom Payable at 3 and 6 Months save the Amount of a Cargo of Rice and some Deer skins, this I say was the information he gave me. My reply was that nothing should tempt me to touch her but an absolute necessity to serve you and therefore I desired him to apply without delay to those other Houses, he asked me which? and I could not help on your account recommending him to the latter for many evident reasons which I assigned to him and shall here repeat some of them vizt. the same objections lay against the other house that I make to myself, Mr. Martin is at present alone and consequently not so capable of going thro business of this importance as those two partners with the assistance of the Elder Mr. Smith [1] whose extensive acquaintance and ability in dispatch of business as well as influence with the Planters are at least equal to those of any other Man in the Province; Sudden Death or even a Sharp disorder to a single person would greatly injure your Interest for I am sure by experience that it cannot be so well taken Care of by any Subs[t]itute—again Mr Martin's acquaintance is not very extensive yet and indeed his name scarcely known by a great many very good customers for Negroes who are very cautious of bonding themselves to strangers and therefore he must be under some disadvantages in case of one or more competitors altho he might if there were no other Cargoes at Market do very well and here lay the weight of my argument. We had upon your Ship's arrival the Sally of Bristol with [blank] Slaves to Smith and Brewton, a small Cargo of 90 to Middleton, Liston, and Hope, the Sales of both to come on within these eight days, besides several Little scattered parcels from West Indies and more daily expected, as well as a Cargo of 500 from Angola which B and S have late advice of and hourly expect its arrival. these are too powerful opponents for a new House and must distress one greatly, besides on the other hand since it falls out so and there is really a demand for the whole, confining them to one House or nearly so, does undoubtedly enable that House to maintain its prices and I am morally sure it will have that effect in the present case. Capt. McKie hereupon wrote to those Gentlemen whose reply was that they would comply with his terms except in point of remittances which they could not make better than 3-6 and 12 Months, being the stated periods for other Cargoes sold by them. then I wrote to Mr. Martin but found that all my reasonings with the Capt. were unnecessary because Mr. Martin was out of Town and not to return before tomorrow, a delay which I could by no means subject your business to. Next I offered the Cargo to Mr. Thos. Savage, a Young Gentleman of exceeding good connexions here and for his encouragement told him he might depend upon my utmost assistance to make a good Sale; that I would undertake to procure him all the Bills wanted and he should have the whole Commission but he had not resolution to encounter the terms—in the meantime McKie became anxious to fix with B and S and to avoid further loss of time—nevertheless I made one effort more and that was with Messrs. Brailsford and Chapman, making them an offer of the Cargo upon the terms prescribed or I believe more properly squeezed by your Captain assuring them that I would make no further attempts if they would comply, but those Gentlemen would come no nearer than 3-6 and 9 Months, which made me turn once more to the Other House who at length agreed to remit in 3-6-9 and 12 Months, the difference here lays wholly in the Interest of the last paid portion which in my opinion is greatly overweighed by some of the considerations above mentioned, therefore I closed with them and your Cargo is advertized for sale on the 19th Inst. the same day with the Sally's.

I have wrote Letters to some of my old Friends and if needful my utmost services shall be exerted on the day of sale but I am very sure those Gentlemen will do everything in their power to serve you and that they can do much more that [than] I a single Hand could do even barring the accidents of Sickness etc. which are no small considerations in this Climate where one Man is obliged to bustle thro a great deal of business. I know these things very well from some experience and observations and must confess that, I have not resolution and avarice enough to endanger either my good Friends who would intrust me, on one hand—or my Family on the other to great disappointments and losses, upon the precarious tenure of my Life. . . .

I took notice just now of the probability of your Captains having squeesed the terms of 3 and 6 Months for I cannot think that a man of Mr. Knight's judgement and generosity would lay such heavy and unprecedented Bonds upon honest Men, nor expose himself on the other side to the danger of being made a dupe of his own Policey by the rapaciousness of designing Men who will Lick themselves whole under any terms; but Dear Sir I now talk of this, did you ever find any inconvenience attending the mode of remittances made by the Houses of A and L and A L and A—vizt. according to the times of payment set forth in the Sales? surely you did not or, if ever you did they were small in comparison of the difference of prices obtained for a few months Credit, but I believe upon the whole you had your remittances made in a shorter time than those Gentlemen who had tied up their Factors to certain Rules for remitting the whole in the bottom, and I have known the time when some of our Neighbours under those Limitations have pocketed by gain of Interest a Com-mision of 12 or 13 per Ct. when we have made barely 9 per Ct. averaged more Money upon the Cargo sold by us and remited the whole or within a trifle of the whole in the Course of 7 to 9 Months and the bulk of it in the bottom and in 3 to 6 Months of which I think I can produce more than two or three instances. now in the present case Your Negroes will all or almost all will be paid for in Cash or an Interest of 8 per Ct. running upon the deficiency within 4 or 5 Months of the Sale. this is a benefit which in my sense of things ought to be wholly yours but yet there is no prevailing upon Gentlemen tied down to remit in the bottom to give it, they argue and with great plausib[i]lity, the difficulty of purchasing Bills for the Amount of a whole Cargo of Negroes and the risque they take upon themselves in Shipping the produce of the Country to raise a Bank and make some compensation to their friends who in the mean time give Credit to their draughts by accepting them without effects in hand. If indeed the advantage of handling and negotiating those long sighted bills are more than adequate to those other considerations in moving the great wheel of unfathomable commerce round, which you know best, the case is greatly altered, upon the whole, I shall be as strenuous as I dare to be with these Gentlemen not to crimp the average merely for the sake of speedy payment. . . .

[2] Price and Hest had entered into partnership in Charleston in the spring of 1764. Laurens on May 9 wrote to Thomas Hartley and Son of Whitehaven that if they consigned negro cargoes to this new firm he would give to them his advice and be responsible for the performance of their obligations. his Friendship; this I would not forfeit for Twenty Pocock Cargoes but I cannot think that he will inflict so heavy a penalty upon me for continuing to refuse the consignment, when he hears my further reasons for doing so, the principal one I shall mention to you and is this; that after having made a full and clear surrender to your House as you Know I did some months ago of that Vessel, I would not upon any accot. (but such as I then reserved) deprive or baulk you of your expectations, which indeed may be more injurious to your credit than the loss of double the Amount of commission, arising by another Kind of misadventure for when tis given out that a House expects such a Cargo of Negroes and that same consignment is seen to go by to another House it must occasion whispers and conjectures amongst Trading Men to Lessen the reputation of the first.

And in order to give my very Kind friend all the satisfaction in my power I beg leave to offer in case your partner does not in the meantime arrive to lend you a helping hand—my utmost assistance to obtain good customers and to make a profitable Sale of the pocock's Cargo, and even after his arrival if he and you shall think that I can be of any service—I am not very well and therefore could not write this Letter through with my own hand which I beg you will excuse.

Joseph Brown, Geo. Town

Dear Sir, I herewith inclose you a Letter rece'd per Capt. White. I observe that you had not sold my three Negroes when you last wrote—that your Customers had greatly altered "their notions since last Winter". Let me take occasion from hence to remark how you would have been embarrassed and how I should have been put to the blush, if I had recommended and you had undertaken the Sale of a Cargo, for if the Sale of three proves so difficult how must a man be puzzled to sell and remit for 300, but by the by this is a Little strange too, because I see people come from all quarters and give £320-£325 per head for Negroes not superior to those you have and I did a few days ago put a small parcel of Ten into the hands of a young House here—they were Ebo two of them grey-headed and one Boy and they produced me £315 round pay'ble, in Cash for more than half and the remainder pay'ble in 60 days. if they remain unsold when this reaches you be so good as to deliver them to Mr. Price on my Accot. unless you can obtain about £320 per and I will thankfully repay all the expense you have been at on this Accot.

Sir, I reced. two days ago your favour of the 29th ulto which was the date of what I wrote last to you.

I now send you per the Schooner Susanna William Smart Master the consignment of thirteen Gold Coast Negroes just arrived from the West Indies, Vizt.

4 Men 1 Boy 7 Women 1 Girl	all in good health, tho' one of the Women has Guinea Worm in her Leg which is of no great injury I beg you will sell these as speedily as you can to good safe Men for ready money or produce of Pitch or Rice deliverable presently upon Bonds bearing Interest, the prices shall be left to you not doubting but you will do as much for me as your Market will admit of and transmit to me an Accot. of the Sale etc. as soon as you can.

If this consignment is not acceptable be pleased to transfer it to William Smith (but observe he knows nothing of it nor will without you inform him) with an extract of this Letter for his direction —but if you have no dislike to it I shall endeavour hereafter to make you some of the same Kind and perhaps more valuable.

P. S. Note these are really Gold Coast Negroes bought at Anamaboo and the little Boy a very fine one. I am expecting an answer to the Subject of mine the 29th Ulto. If you think it necessary please to give each of these a Blanket.[2]

D'r Sir, In answer to your favour of the 10th Inst. the short notice that is given of this opportunity will permit me only to say— that what Negroes may remain upon your hands when this reaches you I would sell them (if I was in your place) to good Men for a barely saving price rather than Keep them longer upon hand and next to that attempt in case it should fail I would bring them to Charles Town again rather than let designing people compass their ends of getting them at their own prices. this that you experience is always the case at little markets they must be fed sparingly and then they pay the dearer for their meat, but if you put any large quantities in their way they triumph and will not purchase even what they stand in need of unless at their own prices and terms. . . .

Just as I had subscribed to the foregoing Mr. Dickison brought me your favour of the 16th I have no more to add respecting the Negroes but that you may leave them in such hands as you like best I should certainly have sent the 13 Negroes that went to Mr. Wragg to your adress to avoid that clashing of Sale which you apprehend if I had not flattered myself with hopes of your being on the point of returning to Charles-Town—but be not discouraged and neither be talked out of reasonable demands by people who may design to tire you out.

266. Henry Laurens to Joseph Brown, 1764.[1]

21st July 1764.

Joseph Brown, George Town

Dear Sir, Having but very short notice of this opportunity I cannot be very full in reply to your favour of the 7th Inst. but shall endeavour to say the needful.

You have really mistaken my remarks upon the subject of Negroes for Sale at George Town, and from thence put your self into a very unnecessary heat I cannot see that there is one word cruel or hard or even inclining to either in my whole Letter, and I am sure there was nothing of that nature intended by me. What I suggested there; still appears to me to deserve attention; that if instead of a few prime Negroes you had had a mixed Cargo of good and bad old and young you would have been embarrassed and I should have been put to the blush if I had recommended such a Cargo to you and you had been as much puzzled to sell it as you were to dispose of the few that I troubled you with. You may say and insist upon what you please about peoples' notions that every Negroe's being a refuse that goes from Charles Town; but I am sure with submission to you that it is not invariably the case; and I need not go further than your own Letter for a proof. Is there a more wary Man in dealing than Mr. Davidson, has he not given me a very good price for those very Negroes wch you found unsaleable for so long a time? why did he as you say "go out of your House and somewhere into Town" and then return and take my Negroes? I am no conjurer but yet with the small share of penetration that is fallen to my Lot I will venture to answer that question. He delivered you my order to secure the preference of my Negroes to himself then he went some where into Town, that is to say to take a view of Mr. Prices Cargo or perhaps some others and when he had satisfied himself he returned and took those from you. Is not this a full proof that he could easily discern the difference between the negroes in one place and the other? 'tis too true that many refuse Slaves are sent to Geo. Town which no doubt does make people there abouts cautious of buying such as go in general from Charles Town and some times even shy of good Slaves, but that must be according to the experience and Knowledge of different Men as occasions offer; and sometimes the most Knowing are deceived or deceive themselves—but now Sir, what does all this prove but that you have not (being on one wing or in a corner of the Province) so good a chance of selling a Cargo (in which there is always some refuse and sometimes a good many) in Geo. Town as the merchants have in Charles Town the Centre of the Province and where purchasers for every sort and size are to be found and this you will be convinced of either to your own or the cost of your New-England freinds let the Cargo that you expect come when it will unless they happen to be all fine Slaves wch can hardly be suppos'd or expected and the less if they are to be purchased on the Coast in the manner you talk of—for let the Salem Gentlemen be never so sober or never so careful Rum and their Bar Iron will not command fine Slaves if any better Cargoes are in the way. I had nothing more in view when I first attempted to disuade you from interfering in the African Trade than your Interest—I am sure you have not a proper idea of the difficulties attending it, when a man acts in such a manner as not to injure himself and family and at the same time to preserve his reputation and do justice to his constituents, in wch there must always be a dash of generosity over and above bare starved justice and if you had not applied to me upon the occasion I should not have been so impertinent as to have troubled you with my opinion. You must Know from other parts of my conduct that it was not owing to a want of Friendship for or inclination to serve you that I declined giving that recommendation that you desired, and you will excuse me for saying that your neglect of answering what I kindly and candidly wrote up[on] that subject because I was not so happy as to chime into your sentiments, was neither, Mercantile, friendly nor Genteel and your applications to New England discovers too plainly that you were miffed with my candour and here I might very justly retort, that it is "cruel hard" to be thus treated in return for one's advice and opinion given to a friend in the most open and unreserved manner, and not without being first asked for them, but let me once more and for the last time recommend to you to forego the shew of profits in the African Trade rather than stake your peace perhaps your Character and fortune to attain to it, unless it be in the way that you talk of making a purchase now and then in Charles Town in which there may some times be profits made and the Basis upon which you deal is more certain and now drop this troublesome subject.

267. Henry Laurens to Richard Oswald and Company, 1764.

10th August, 1764.

Richd. Oswald and Co.

. . . The day before yesterday your Ship Queen Barra Capt. Taylor arrived here from Sierraleon with about 300 Slaves of which 106 were Shiped by Mr. Aird on your Account and the rest are upon Freight partly Shiped by that Gentleman and partly by Mr. James Tweed at £6 Sterling per head.

Mr. Aird in his Letter to me of the 11th of June desires me to recommend this concern to the care of some proper Person here. I have therefore agreed with Messrs. Brewton and Smith to sell your Negroes and those which he Shiped upon Freight, to remit the whole proceeds in the Bottom in Bills payable at three, Six and Nine Months, after deducting Charges and the Cost of a Cargo for the Ship, which I shall direct to be in such articles as may promise to pay the best Freight.[1] these in my oppinion are good terms and I am sure that House will make at least as good a Sale as any in Charles Town for it has undoubtedly the most extensive Corrispondence and is upon a par with any other in point of knowledge and application to Business. If I had thought it had been in my power without a partner to do so well for you I should not have let the Commissions pass by me. at present I have no other Interest or advantage therein but the pleasure of making a Greatfull acknowledgement for your repeated favours to me and which I shall continue to do as often as opportunity presents. Captain Taylor has been very sick the whole Voyage and is now in a very low state under my roof where I have obtained permission to lodge him while the Ship performs her Quarrentine Mr. James Tweed is well but necessarily confined on board, if Mr. Aird is in London be so good as to assure him that I shall have a friendly eye to his concerns and that I shall pay my respects to him in a few days.

268. Henry Laurens to Thomas Mears, 1764.

24th Augt. 1764.

Thomas Mears, Leverpool

. . . Our Crops of Rice are in exceeding fine order just now and if bad weather does not interupt the Harvest it will be very large and the grain early at Market; the Indigo Planters have also tolerably good prospects being greatly favoured by Latter Season and in general our Planters are in a state of prosperity wch was pretty clearly evinced by their purchase at a Sale of Negroes this Week, where the first 230 of the Cargo averaged £41 Stg. and the whole will turn out near £40 remitted for in the bottom at 3-6 and 9 Months. . . .

[267] [1] On Aug. 13 Laurens wrote to Henry Bright of Bristol that Brewton and Smith had disposed of one cargo of 300 from Whydah, which he transferred to them, at £36 per head.

269. Henry Laurens to John Knight, 1764.

John Knight, Leverpool

. . . permit me to return you my thanks again for the repeated offer of the Pococks Cargo of Slaves. I would not forfeit your friendship for a great deal more than the Value of the whole, but I will not suffer such a thought in my breast, as that you will inflict so heavy a penalty upon me, for acting according to the dictates of reason and principles of generosity wch now oblige me to adhere to my first resolution of not selling that Cargo; I had with your permission resigned it to Messrs. Shirly and Martin, they no doubt had fixed some dependance upon that and have talked among their friends of their expectations, after that to be disappointed I should think would not only be galling to them but might create injurious whispers from some people whose envy might lead them to mischief whereever they have opportunity, from this consideration I have told those Gentlemen again that I should not deprive them of the benefit of that Sale, and assured them of my best services in every respect to make a good one, wch they have excepted and were so genteel as to offer me a share of the Commission wch I declined with a hint of the impropriety of making Sale of my Friends favours and that as they would have the trouble and risque attending that transaction, I thought they were intitled to all the benefit arising from it, and I indeed would by all means hold myself detached and indepentant that I may do you in case of need the more effectual service. I am sorry that or some other of your Ships do not appear. I resigned a Cargo from Bance Island this Week of wch about 230 are sold at upwards of £40 Stg. and the general average will be within a few shillings of that Sum. If Mr. Austin's Black Joke comes here, as her Cargo will not embarass me much, I shall take proper Care of it and hope to render him a satisfactory Acct. if the Negroes are well chosen and healthy. . . .

Having now run thro all private concerns that have occured as needful to mention at this time; I must beg your patience while I detain you with an Acct. of a Law just passed in this Province wch I think is of importance to the Public both on your side and on this side of the Water, regarding it either as a Salutary or a pernicious Act. The Law that I mean is one that has passed three Readings in both Houses of Assembly, laying an additional Duty or Tax upon all Negroes imported into this province for the term of three Years from the 1st January 1766 of One hundred Pounds Currt. money wch Amounts to a prohibition;[1] you will receive with this a Copy of the Bill with some remarks upon it to which I refer. it stuck some time with the Council of Carolina House of Lords and would have remained there I do believe til dooms day if it had not been a necessary instrument to save appearences and take off the imputation of outragiousness in a quarrel that the two Houses are unhappily engaged in and wch I fear will be attended with many disadvantages to those whom we represent. as it now stands it awaits only for the Governor's assent wch there is no doubt of, and therefore receiving it as a Law I think it my duty to apprize yourself and other Gentlemen in the African Trade of the Tenour of it as well as to trouble you with my opinion of it, wch I have Sketched upon the Bill and under those heads I took up the time of the House both at the second and 3d readings with many arguments, wch with myself were honest and of great weight, and I made some converts but we were outvoted by four voices, tho none of my arguments were answered. We have only two Merchts beside myself in the House, Mr. Benja. Smith and Mr. Brailsford, from neither of whom I received any assistance. the former had said out of Doors that he was against the importation of more Negroes and he uniformly voted for the Bill. the other Gentleman who countinanced it with his voice at the Second reading, but as if his conceince and his Interest were at variance he would vote on neither side at the third, but retired when the question was going to be put. I think it necessary to say so much to you upon this occasion because if the Law is (as I apprehend it to be) unnecessary with regard to the Local circumstances of the Country in wch it is intended to Operate and at the same time a stroke at the Trade of his Majestys British Subjects, you might otherwise wonder [269] [1] The committee which brought in this bill consisted of Messrs. Smith, Manigault, Lynch, Gadsden, and Thomas Smith. It was read the first time on Aug. 14, the second time on Aug. 15, and was passed by the lower house and sent to the council on the 24th. Governor Boone had returned to England and Lieutenant Governor Bull gave his assent to the bill on the 25th (Columbia, S. C., MSS. Journals of the House, Aug. 14, 15, 24, 25, 1764). On Sept. 4, 1764, Laurens wrote to Rossel and Gervais: "An impolitic partial act which has been for some time in agitation and is at length passed into a law to prohibit the importation of negroes has made me the more indifferent about that matter in the present juncture [the taking up of land in the Ninety-Six Country] for I am almost certain that if that law is approved of or not repealed in Britain, vacant lands will abound in the year 1767 more than they do in the current year" (Pa. Hist. Soc., Laurens Letter-Book; quoted by Wallace, p. 84, n. 2). For the act see Cooper, IV. 187-189.

how such a Law could pass in a Town abounding with commercial Men; but indeed as the generality of them alledge that their own respective branches of Trade are injured by the free importation of Slaves, wch to me is a meer Chimera, so you may be assured very few of them were Enemies to this new and extraordinary measure. . . .

270. Henry Laurens to Thomas Farr, jr., 1764.[1]

1st Septemr. 1764.

Thomas Farr Junr., Charles Town

Sir, I informed Mr. Decosta yesterday as the eldest Partner of the late House of Decosta and Farr that I was directed to call upon the said House for the net proceed of Nine Negroes received by them from on board the Greyhound Capt. Pinnegar Shiped at Cape Coast by Mr. Mutter on Accot. of Nassau Senior Esqr.[2]

Mr. Decosta sent me a Verbal answer that he would speak to me before Sunset but I suppose something hindered him from coming aboard for I have neither seen nor heard from him since. This is his Sabbath and therefore I must not obtrude business upon him on this day, but as I am writing to London by a Vessel that will Sail tomorrow or on Monday, I beg the favour of you Sir to inform me what is the Amount of said Nt. Proceed and what expectations I may give Mr. Senior of remitting him his Value for the same.

271. Henry Laurens to Day and Welch, 1764.

10th Septembr. 1764.

Capt. Stafford Dickenson
Day and Welch, St. Kitts

Gentlemen, With your favour of the 23d June per the Manchester Capt. Livingston I Received fifteen Negroes Vizt. seven Males and Eight females,[1] which came in most wretched plight, they were in general Aged, some quite Gray others maimed, but you know better than I do what they were when they were Shiped at St. Kitts and you may imagine how much they were improved by a long Voyage and very short provisions, for the Captn. of the Manchester alledgd

[270] [1] Pa. Hist. Soc., Laurens Letter-Book.

[2] Nassau Senior was governor of Cape Coast Castle from 1757 to 1761, William Mutter from 1763 to 1766. The latter was dismissed from office by the Committee of the Company of Merchants trading to Africa for exporting slaves from the coast contrary to regulation: "It is our desire that all persons in our service should thrive but they ought to keep within the bounds prescribed." Martin, British West African Settlements, p. 40.

[271] [1] The arrival of these negroes had been acknowledged by Laurens in a letter of Aug. 7 to Arnold, Albert, and Alexander Nesbitt, of London, to whom the proceeds were to be sent.

that the provision you had laid in was exhausted in a few days and that he had spared to them as much as he could of his own for which he made a small charge in addition to his Freight. Such Negroes as those will not sell here upon the best terms nor can it be expected I think I have been exceedingly lucky in what is already done and I hope soon to close the Sale and transmit to you, Vizt. I have sold three Men and three Women at £280. per head and one Boy very ill made at £262. 10/ the whole to be paid in a few days or Weeks; but the first lot gave such dissatisfaction to the purchaser after viewing them deliberately at home that he returnd or rather attempted to return two of them upon my hands and I declare upon my Honor if I had been dealing for myself I would have received them but I did not think myself at liberty to use the same freedom with your Interest, however it will still occasion me some trouble and perhaps the loss of an acquaintance merely because he has made a bad bargain for I practice no artifice.

As to the other eight I could not get them off here at any rate, at any tolerable rate, one of them is deaf and dumb and truly they all seem to be proper subjects for an Alms House I have sent them a little way in the Country where I think there is a better chance of Selling them than here and I expect an Accont. of the Sale every day for it can answer no good end to keep such goods on hand, and therefore I have given proper orders to end the Sale without much delay, and you may depend upon it that I shall forward your Money into the hands of Messrs Nesbitt as speedily as possible to whome I have wrote upon this occasion and given them reason to expect a remittance from me on your Accont.[2]

Negroes have sold extremely high even to an Average of £40 Stg. for a Cargo of 320 and £36. for another of about the same number but inferior in Quality and I do believe that prime Negroes will yield a great price thro the ensuing winter but refuse Slaves will not yield any satisfaction.[3]

272. Henry Laurens to Henry Bright, 1764.

12th Sept. 1764.

Henry Bright Esqr., Bristol

. . . The Cargo of Negroes from Bance Island mentioned in my last has netted £39. 19/ Stg. but this branch of Trade, if you

[2] On Dec. 17 Laurens reported to Day and Welch the net proceeds of this sale as £3098. 8. 10, which sum was to be remitted about Jan. 10.

[3] Isaac Da Costa wrote to Aaron Lopez on July 19, 1764, that men were bringing from £270 to £320, women from £200 to £280, and boys and girls from £200 to £280, the boys being worth from £30 to £40 more than the girls. Newport Hist. Soc., Lopez Letter-Book, no. 622, p. 30.

Gentlemen are content,[1] will cease in a few Months and be prohibited for three Years by a law lately passed in our Assembly. It was introduced and hurried through in a manner uncommon, unexpected and without argument to support it. I strove hard to have it deferred until the meeting in December that in the mean time the general Voice of our constituents might be heard but the Junto by which it was planned and introduced knew that would not countenance their designs and so depending upon a Majority in a thin House they pushed it forward and succeeded. I transmit you a copy of the Law with a few Notes on the back of it and leave it to your disposal.

273. Henry Laurens to Samuel Wragg, 1764.[1]

19th Sept. 1764.

Samuel Wragg, George Town

Sir, . . . and now that I mention this Vessel let me inform you she is a Guinea Man and may bring 80 to 120 Gambia Negroes, which for some very particular considerations I shall dispose of. do you think Sir, from the experience that you have had that I might expect any advantage by removing such a Cargo to Geo. Town, I mean as well in payments as prices? Your sentiments hereon may induce me to ask your assistance in the Sale if you encourage it to be made there.

I am quite satisfied with the Sales that you have made of the Negroes so far as you have informed me and I do think you have bid full enough for the quiet Woman,[2] was she your [my] own I would surely make you an abatement but it being your own offer and the property a third person's I dare not pay you such a compliment. Please now to close and forward the Sale of those and if you can of the former parcel also that I may Enter them accordingly.

274. Henry Laurens to George Appleby, 1764.

per Capt. Moth

. . . As to the affairs of Capt. Stephens, and other Guinea concerns mentioned in both your Letters, I'll tell you what I have [272] [1] Laurens apparently believed the power of the merchants sufficient to cause a repeal of the act if they chose to exert it. The measure was reported to the Board of Trade by Lt. Gov. William Bull on Sept. 13, 1764; the board asked the opinion of the attorney general, who reported on Nov. 20, 1765, that, since the act placed the duty on the first purchaser and not on the importer, there was no legal objection to it. The size of the duty (£14. 6 stg.) he left to the board (Br. Trans., XXX. 196, 290). The statute was allowed to stand but was not re-enacted at its expiration three years later.

[273] [1] Pa. Hist. Soc., Laurens Letter-Book. On Aug. 21 Laurens wrote that the negroes sent to Wragg were "refuse", which he was to sell upon the best terms which he could get, to "safe" men. On the 30th he again wrote to Wragg concerning this consignment, since "the Gentlemen who own those Negroes are very anxious to have their money reallized in London". Ibid.

[2] Probably the deaf and dumb negro mentioned in the letter of Sept. 10.

done this Summer and what I may possible do in future. when Mr. Knight's Jenny arrived here it was really not in my power to do him justice in the Sale of her Cargo. I was wholly unprepared and so unwell that I could not have exerted my self to my own wishes for his Interest; Brewton and Smith undertook the Sale upon good terms somewhat the better by the falling under my disposal. Capt. McKie complaind a little of their remittances but I am sure they were just, tho I might allow there was some room to be generous; but that is a principle whose legitimate issue freeborn only is valueable in my eye and therefore I cannot go about to extort its effects.

another Cargo from Bance Island belonging to Mr. Oswald and Co., Mr. Tweed, and others they sold too under my direction, and in both they certainly have made better averages than any other House—they have as great advantages as any and greater than almost every other in the Town—Mr. Oswald writes that Capt. Stephens will come here, if his or any other Cargo should be Lodged under my care I will assuredly do as shall appear most for the benefit of the Owners by undertaking the Sale if I can do so with Honour to myself and advantage to them or by making the best bargain I can with somebody else, I am tied to none in particular, for I gain nothing by that sort of business—you know I scorn it—unless my friends the Owners are pleased to thank me. I am very loth to touch business of such importance without the assistance of a partner, and I neither see the fit Man nor feel inclination to seek for one on this side.

Your junction with Mr. Knight I hope will be a very happy one but if the Law lately passed in Carolina is not repealed at St. James's you must look out for other Markets for your African Cargoes, this in all probability will be quite overstock'd next year and then for three succeeding Years that Law will operate to prevent a further importation, I transmitted a Copy of that Act with some notes on it to Mr. Knight, Mr. Oswald, and Mr. Bright and I now send you a state of the Trade of this province for the last four Years from whence you may form some further opinions of the propriety of and necessity for such a Law. I thought my self at Liberty to speak boldly against it and made use of arguments and introduced proofs which could not be controverted, nevertheless the Law being artfully introduced did pass and I may say was cramm'd down in the latter end of a Session after other business had been rejusted for no other reason but because it was the latter end of a Session and many members gone home. Our once neighbour Brailsford acted two droll parts upon this occasion, first in voting and whispering strenuously in favour of the Bill and afterwards when I told him that I hop'd he intended to sell no more Negroes at the Crisis, he retired from the House and with[h]eld his Vote as if his patriotism and his Interest were in strong debate—he may nevertheless be very honest and the error lay in my want of perception—Mr. Smith was its Father and carried his point as he generally carries all points in which he succeeds, assertions too often are subs[t]ituted by him in place of argument and proof but this must be said for him that his declarations out of doors and in were uniform.[1] . . .

275. Henry Laurens to Samuel Wragg, 1764.[1]

Samuel Wragg, Geo. Town.

Sir, . . . The Sale which you sent of the parcel of 8 New Negroes per Smart is satisfactory except the charge of Commission, which is the same that is given in Charles Town in consideration of Sale and Guarantee of debts. I have usually paid only 2½ per Ct. and never asked more in the Country for the Sale alone. I am obliged to you for the offer of Keeping the Bonds and receiving the several amounts free of Commission, which you may do if you please but 'tis not improbable that you will be in Charles Town before they fall due which I think you said would be the 1st January, and we may then talk more of this matter. I beg the favour of you to forward the Sale of the first parcel concluding it by the Sale of the short-fingured Woman at the price you name if no more can be obtained but I think she is worth more, however do not stop the Sale of that Accot. . . .

The little Guinea Man which I expected and in which I was to have Ship'd those and other articles of Wood does not yet appear wherefore I hope she is better taken up. . . .

276. Henry Laurens to John and James Graham and Company, 1764.

9th Novem. 1764.

John and James Graham and Co., Georgia

. . . The former [1] I have reason to think treats of the Prince of Wales Brigt. belonging to our friends Messrs. Abram Parsons and Co. expected from Africa, which I take notice of because she is charg'd upon me in case of her arrival at this port and as I shall not undertake the Sale of her Cargo I would not, if she is worth your acceptance, have you miss of it. therefore with your permission I shall [274] [1] On Nov. 9 Laurens wrote to Appleby, in Liverpool: "be Wary and cautious in your orders to Guinea Men for Carolina next Summer, but order them to me if any comes. I'll put them upon the best terms into the best hands this Country affords."

upon her appearance advertize the Sale in your names and do what is needful until the arrival of one of your House to take the burthen upon yourselves, which no doubt your friends here will endeavour to make as light as possible to you and if you are pleased to command my services none will more chearfully assist you.

277. Henry Laurens to John Haslin, 1764.

19th Novem. 1764.

John Haslin, Barbadoes

Sir, I am indebted for your favour of the 16th Septem. and 6th October—the last per your Schooner Molly, Capt. Wooster, who arrived here the 31st Ulto. with twenty poor New Negroes on Accont. of Samuel Maddock Esq. and yourself. I have had no opportunity of writing to you but one presenting for Philadelphia; I advised Mr. William Wharton the 3d Inst. and requested the favour of him to pass the intelligence along by the first Vessel and to assure you that I should give your Vessel all possible dispatch; which I have not failed in.

Please now to receive Accont. Sale of said 20 Negroes Nt. Proceed to your Credit £4143. 1. 6. to the Credit of your Accont. Currt. which is as good a Sale as ever I made considering the assortment—one Man was maim'd by a shot in his ancle and not a little peppered with the venereal disease, one of the Girls very meagre and in a dangerous way and most of the females small and ordinary, nevertheless had there been 8 or 10 likely Men amongst them the average would have been five or Seven Pounds Sterling more, as I have sold them for Credit and not stinted the price for Cash which commonly affects a Sale 10 per Ct. only for two or three Months.

Capt. Wooster having hinted to me a design of returning here soon after he is unloaden at Barbadoes I take upon me to recommend to you to send a few Prime Negroes none old or defective and let them be clad with Linnen, woolen and a Blanket, about 12/6 Sterling each but not wear their Cloaths until they begin to feel the change of climate and then only by degrees 'till they come upon the Coast. Let them be well fed and humanely treated. such a Little Cargo say 40 to 60 will sell in all probability ext[r]emly well at George Town in Winyaw and the Schooner may be loaden upon as good terms as in this place especially if you can give a little previous notice of her coming. if the weather suits he may go in there directly, otherwise stop here and proceed or tarry as shall appear most for your Interest. If you think that such a Voyage will be advantageous to you I shall be glad to receive your commands and to do all in my power to make it so. . . .

278. Henry Laurens to John and Thomas Tipping, 1764.

4th Decem. 1764.

John and Thomas Tipping, Barbadoes

. . . Likewise on your Accot. three poor wretched human creatures call'd Negroes, being part of those four which you were pleased to consign to me, one of that number the Captain says died on the passage. I shall do the best in my power with the owners goods but 'tis amazing to me that they continue to send such to this Market where they can expect no gain unless a profit is already laid upon their Invoice. . . . I have sold your three Negroes as per inclos'd Accot. for Net proceeds £492. 8. 6 which considering their quality is the greatest Sale that ever I made and I have done as much as most folks in that branch. I believe you will be so well satisfied with the Accot. that it will be in vain for me to say any more. You may from hence judge what an handsome adventure might have been made for the Owners if you had been permitted to Ship about four score or an hundred prime Negroes and especially if you had avail'd yourselves of that Skill which you think so peculiar to Capt. Holme in the choice of Females—he smiles at this, and says you would not trust him with a commodity worth his care—I am sure that a Cargo of prime Gambia Young Men and Women would sell for upwards of Forty pounds Sterling and this I believe will continue to be the case untill the Cargoes fall in next Spring when probably they may be so numerous from our late Sales as to make a vast alteration. If from this advice you incline to make a consignment to Mr. Head to arrive here any time before the 10th March, you may depend upon my best assistance to him both in the Sale and remittances. He has shew'd me your Letter and I think if you are dispos'd to do a friendly Act to him you have now an opportunity of doing it without any apparent risque to yourselves but you know too much of commercial affairs to depend so absolutely upon any adventure, as to appropriate the profits while the adventure is only in embrio—but so much I can safely say and repeat that there is a good prospect of gain and that you may be assur'd of my aid to make the most of it for you provided you send likely healthy (black) Negroes. . . . If any Guinea Men belonging to my worthy friends and benefactors, Mr. Oswald of London, Mr. Bright of Bristol or Mr. Knight of Leverpoole shall arrive with you in proper time, I intreat you to inform them what I have wrote to you in their branch. let healthy negroes be well fed and well cloath'd and be not afraid of the Cold.

279. Henry Laurens to Smith and Baillies, 1764.

18th Decem. 1764.

Smith and Baillies, St. Christophers

. . . You will now receive Accont. Sale of two Negroes Boys, Bob and Allen per the Sloop John, Net proceed £358. 1 which no doubt you will think a good price as you know what sort of creatures they were . . . I am given to understand by the Gentlemen who bought your Negroes that they cannot pay me any part before February nor do I expect the whole for a Long time after in the common course of Carolina payments and yet they are very good men. by the latter I have some reason to hope that you are now a good deal in Cash on my Accont. and that you will be so good as to remit my full Balance upon Receipt hereof and the offer of a good opportunity in healthy New Negroes to be pretty well Cloathed and have a Blanket each, under a humane Master who will promise to take care of them. if you are pleased to exceed the said Balance a little or to add any number of Negroes on your own and so make a joint Account of it I shall be speedy in remitting your part I hope you will not fail in this but if it cannot be done be so good as to remit me in the first new Rum that shall come to Market. . . .

280. Henry Laurens to Lloyd and Barton, 1764.

Lloyd and Barton, Jamaica

. . . Negroes have sold here at very exhorbitant prices all the past Summer and even down to this time. I have just transmitted a Sale of a parcel of Men refuse aged, half blind and one dumb and deaf, which made an average of £34. Sterling—prime negroes will yield full £40 [1] at this time but how long this will continue is very uncertain for we have parcels dropping in every day from the West Indies, many more are expected and the Season is at hand when the Affrican Ships will make their appearance. a great many of them are expected and I am sure that several will come or attempt to come earlier than usual—I have advices from my own particular friends of several. The great prices that have of late been given, The eagerness of some rival Houses in this Town, The Act of Assembly lately passed laying a heavy duty upon all Negroes imported after the year 1765, all will conspire to over stock our [280] [1] On Dec. 7 Laurens wrote to Meyler and Hall of Jamaica that a parcel of 70 negroes had sold the day before for £42 per head.

Market with Negroes and I shall not wonder if the prices are run down very Low and a necessity for giving very tedious Credit. you will be pleas'd to think on this a little and then give me leave on the other hand to observe, that many people may from apprehensions of the danger which I have pointed at restrain their importations, and that our Crops of Rice and Indigo are very large and sell for high prices whereby the Rich planters are enabled to lay by money and the middling and poorer sort in general to clear themselves of debt, That the latter class stand in need and will take off a great number of Negroes in small parcels, and the first will be induc'd to lay out all their ready money and to strain upon a next Crop to increase their Stocks both for themselves and their Children upon the prospect of that prohibitary law which is calculated to stop the importation of Slaves for three years. now I have said all that occurs to be needful on each side of your enquiry you will be pleas'd to judge for yourselves, I shall only add a word of advice, which may be of service in case you shall determine to adventure in that branch. in such case be early, not later here than 15th March and let your purchase be of the very best kind of Slaves black and smooth free from blemishes, Young and well grown, the more Men the better but not old, none sell better than Gambia Slaves. if you touch any below this description let a very great bargain only tempt and let me know the real cost of them. be sure to give them good covering and victuals and secure the promise of the Master by whom you send them to treat them with humanity and keep up their spirits. if you have an inclination after all that I have said to make an attempt you may have remittances in Bills of Exchange upon London according to the then state of the Market which will be in payments at three, six, and nine or three, six, and twelve months but I would not have you rely upon anything better than the latter tho you may depend upon being treated with honour and punctuality. upon the whole unless you have an opportunity of making a very good purchase, I think you may as well forego the prospect of uncertain profit as to run a risque of meeting certain loss. if I am not in the way Messrs Price, Hest, and Head will receive and obey your commands as effectually as I could do, and I beg leave to introduce that House to your acquaintance. . . .

[2] "All well cloathed." The Gazette of Jan. 26 advertised negroes, who may have been those left from the sale of the George: "A Parcel of very Likely and Healthy New Negroes all well cloathed, to be sold, at a Store on Burn's Wharf, for Rice or short Credit, by JOHN GORDON."

[3] "At Mess's Woodrop and Cathcart On the Bay . . . Being the prime picked out of a large cargo. N. B. Indico will be taken in payment." In a later notice it was stated that this cargo came from Montserrat. On board the Prudence was the negro Olaudah Equiano, better known as Gustavus Vassa, who in 1791 published his life. He had been kidnapped at the age of eleven in Benin, and had been first sold in Barbados, then in Virginia. He was later purchased by a Mr. King of Montserrat and Philadelphia, who still owned him at this time though he was in the service of Captain Farmer. He writes of having taken a negro cargo to Charleston at the time of the celebration of the repeal of the Stamp Act, a troublesome statement, since presumably no cargoes were coming into Charleston at that time. Life of Gustavus Vassa, p. 191.

[11] "Such as are usually brought from Gambia and inferior to none imported this year."

The sale to begin precisely at eleven o'clock in the forenoon. BRAILSFORD and CHAPMAN."

[13] "After a passage of 33 days."

[14] "None of sd. cargo of Slaves will be sold or engaged, before the Doors are open, on the above-mentioned day of sale." This assurance is frequently attached to notices of sale. The next advertisement, that for the cargo of the Minories, has the following note:

"N. B. It may be depended on, that this cargo of negroes will be entirely free and unengaged till the doors are open, on the above mentioned day of sale."

[15] "Chiefly young, lusty Men, and as likely Women, as could be picked out of a large number at a Factory on the Gold Coast."

[16] "Small cargo of young negroes."

[17] "On Tuesday put into Tybee . . . a snow from Gambia, Dean, master, bound to Charlestown, having on board about 150 slaves. Capt. Dean lost two anchors of[f] Charlestown bar on Saturday, and upwards of 30 of his cargo of slaves have died during 16 days he has been on the coast" (Georgia Gazette, Sept. 26, 1765). The Gazette of Oct. 17 reported that the vessel had sailed for Charleston on the 24th.

[18] The Gazette, July 6, 1769, reported for this year 6701; that of May 31, 1773, gave 7184. "The number of Negroes brought into this port only since the 1st of November last this day inclusive, is Five Thousand and Eighty-two, which at £35 sterling per head amounts to £177,870 sterling, or One Million Two Hundred and Forty-five Thousand and Ninety Pounds currency" (S. C. Gazette, June 29, 1765; Mass. Gazette and News Letter, Aug. 1, 1765). The advertisements up to the end of June give a total of 4368, which leaves 714 to the previous November and December. In those months the Gazette had recorded but three arrivals, all from the West Indies, two of them with "a few prime negroes", one with 60 blacks. On Aug. 8 the Georgia Gazette gave the value of the importations since the passing of the duty act as £200,000 stg., probably reckoning the average value at £35. This would give a total of 5711 slaves. That the Gazette list is not complete is of course probable. The Newport Mercury on Sept. 16, 1765, notes the arrival in Newport of Capt. Henry Tillinghast, from Anamabo and "last from South Carolina", but his name does not appear here.

282. Henry Laurens to Francis Stuart, 1765.[1]

Francis Stuart Esqr., Beaufort.

Sir, It gives me some pain to be troublesome to you upon any occasion but particularly upon such an one as the present. I am now in advance for every farthing of the proceeds of those Negroes which I sold you some time ago for £12,000, because I promised our friends at St. Kitts that I would be punctual in remitting. I must therefore request you to order me a reimbursement of the whole if you possibly can but at least send me some part of it to Keep dunns from my Door, the fear of which alone makes me call upon you and I flatter myself that you will give the needfull attention hereunto.

283. Henry Laurens to David Fulton, 1765.[1]

David Fulton, Black Mingo

Sir, . . . If a proper parcel of good Negroes shall fall in my way I will send them for Sale to Black Mingo but this is so very distant and uncertain that none of my friends can by any means depend upon it and therefore I beg they may loose no opportunity of purchasing elsewhere.

284. Henry Laurens to Elias Ball, 1765.[1]

Dear Sir, On Tuesday last I chose out of Messrs. Brailsford and Chapman's Gold Coast Cargo Six Negro Women they prevailed on me to take two more in all 8: which I have bought on your Account at £240 per head payable in two months from the 10th Inst. or as much sooner as you can.

I believe they are all young and seem in these five or six days experience to be tractable and healthy; the price is certainly reasonable. I know he sold Women two days after those at £250 per.

If 8 is more than you want please to draw two out for me and send them when a convenient opportunity offers to Wambaw or back again to Charles Town. I shall be glad to have them, I say this because I think you limited me to 6 and the 8 were bought to reduce the Amt. of the price but if you like to keep the whole, do so by all means. Mr. Gaillard charges you with 8 Blankets at 46/6 per piece.

285. Lieutenant Governor William Bull to the Board of Trade, 1765.[1]

December 17, 1765.

. . . the indulgence equitably intended to be given to the British Merchants trading to Africa (lest too short a period might have interfered with their adventures) by the Act of Assembly for prohibiting the importation of negros for 3 years, has in great measure defeated the salutary end proposed, as above 8000 have been imported this year, being nearly equal to three years importation.[2] whether this sudden addition to a number already beyond a prudent proportion[3] will be productive of unhappy consequences, cannot be certainly foreseen, but I have a few days ago received intimation that some plots are forming and some attemp[t]s of insurrection to be made during these Holydays, at which Time Slaves are allowed some days of festivity and exemption from labour. I shall therefore take proper measures to prevent the execution of such designs by giving necessary directions to the militia and patrols to be alert on their duty on that season. . . .

286. Henry Laurens to Captain Richard Todd, 1767.[1]

Capt. Richard Todd of the Sloop Henry, Now Bound to Jamaica

Sir, You have here inclosed Invoice and Bill of Loading for the Cargo Ship'd on board your said Sloop on Account of the Owners, to wit, 5/8ths on Account of Mr. Henry Todd, jun. and Compa. and 3/8ths on my Account with which you will proceed immediately to Kingston in Jamaica and there dispose of the whole to the best

[2] The act imposing an additional duty of £100 on all negroes imported, to be paid by the first purchaser, went into effect Jan. 1, 1766, to be in operation for three years. Cooper, IV. 187-188.

[3] Webster gives the population of Charleston as 5000 whites and 20,000 negroes; for 1769 Governor Bull reported for South Carolina 45,000 whites and 80,000 negroes. "Jour. of Webster", Southern Hist. Soc., Publications, II. 134; Br. Trans., XXXII. 122.

[286] [1] With the South Carolina market closed by the duty Charleston merchants turned to Georgia and Florida, to which they were at liberty to send negroes. Evidence of earlier trade with Florida is also to be found occasionally. On Jan. 29, 1767, John Gordon presented to the assembly the statement that before the passage of the duty act John Dennett of St. Augustine had purchased from Brailsford and Chapman, and Middleton, Liston, and Hope seven new negroes. Dennett had died and the negroes could not be advantageously disposed of. He asked if they could be brought back to Carolina provided the drawback were returned. The request was refused (S. C. House Journals, p. 269). Petitions relating to the slave trade were not uncommon. On Apr. 16 James Phillips asked that the duty of £50 and £100 per head which he had paid on 4 women, 1 boy, and 2 children imported in Yellowly, James, be returned to him as he intended to become a resident of Carolina. This the committee reported upon favorably (ibid., pp. 290, 370, 377). On May 22 John Morris, comptroller of customs in Charleston, former resident of North Carolina, asked permission to bring in his 30 slaves without duty but was freed only from the £20 currency imposed by the general duty act on the first purchaser. Ibid., p. 409.

advantage for ready Money and invest the Net proceed in good Rum of a fine colour and full proof, or in Negroes, or in Dollars as shall appear to you most for our benefit. if Rum is upward of 2/6 per Gallon, no great prospect of profit appears at present from that article and therefore in such case endeavor to lay out your Money in fine healthy young Negro Lads and Men, if such of any Country except Ebo are to be purchased at or under Forty Pounds per head, and you will remember that some cloathing will be needful upon your approach to this coast. in case that neither Rum nor Negroes are to be purchased nor Sugar upon as good terms as the last parcel, then bring home our Money in Silver.

We rely very much upon your own judgement and there[fore] do not lay you under any absolute restrictions but after giving our advice, we recommend our affairs in a great measure to your own discretion, perhaps you may see a good opportunity of purchasing Negroes cheap in the way that we were talking of today, such as are sold to pay debts and not for crimes, if so, it is probable that you may make a good return in that way, but remember that in case of Negroe purchases, we must be prepared to export them again from this place therefore if you have above nine on board it will be necessary for you to come to, with the Sloop in Rebellion Road; former directions about the care of Negroes and also the state of your Accounts may serve in the present case, and leaves nothing particular to add upon the Sloop's Account. I beg you will particularly wait upon Mr. Jeremiah Meyler and press him to make me some remittance by the Henry in part of the large balance still due to me by Meyler and Hall near £600 Sterling—in Negroes, in Rum, or Sugar.[2] . . .

287. Henry Laurens to Inglis and Hall, 1767.

24th Sept. 1767.

per Mr. Peace
Inglis and Hall, Savanna

Gentlemen, I am obliged to you for your favour of the 3d Inst notifying your intended Sale of a Cargo of Negroes, which I received at the State House and communicated the contents to a great many people some of whom have Lands in Georgia.

I had no occasion for Negroes in addition to my stock in that Colony and therefore defer'd answering your favour until Mr. Peace the bearer of this should go to Savanna and I then thought he would have been there within 24 hours of your messenger.

[2] Captain Todd also carried a letter from Laurens to Jeremiah Meyler, importuning him for some payment, which ended, "send me anything but Rogues, from such I have no hopes of any good, but for justice sake send something or other".

I hope you make a good Sale, to your own and the benefit of the owners and wishing you success in all your undertakings

288. Henry Laurens to Smith and Baillies, 1767.

Smith and Baillies, St. Christophers

My last was the 22d Octob. per Capt. Robertson, since which I have heard that the Negroes therein mentioned were safe arrived in Georgia, but were under much the same inconv[en]iences as to Landing them as Negroes are in this Country;[1] this was disagreeable intelligence and I had scarcely received it an hour when Capt Simblet brought me your favour of the 25th October inclosing a Bill of Loading for more New Negroes on your Accot which must also be exported but I have not time by this conveyance to say more than to assure you of my endeavours to dispose of them for your Interest as if my own was wholly concern'd therein. . . .

289. Henry Laurens to James Penman and William Makdougall, 1767.

James Penman and William Makdougall, St. Augustine

Gentlemen, In compliance with your favour of the 8th Inst. I have wrote two Letters of Credit, one to Barbadoes and one to St. Christophers, in your favour for Two thousand Pounds Sterling each, the former to John and Thomas Tipping Esqr.[1] and the latter to Messrs. Smith and Baillies, either or both of which you may make use of and you will receive the Letters here inclosed. St. Christophers I take to be the best Island in the West Indies to purchase Negroes at, tho the Barbadoes gives you a double chance by having all the rest under your Lee. Antigua is not a proper place—very few Guinea Men stop there—the Gentlemen to whom I have wrote are Men of honour and integrity and are also the principal African Houses in those Islands respectively. I wish you much success in the enterprize and [288] [1] On Oct. 26 Laurens wrote to Clay and Habersham of Savannah that he was sending to them for sale, since they could not be sold in Charleston, thirteen new negroes from Smith and Baillies, and three from Peter Gordon of Grenada. Georgia had in 1762 imposed a tax of £2. 10 on every £100 value imported by transient merchants. In addition such merchants must pay fees to the comptroller and the treasurer. Ga. Col. Recs., XVIII. 484-488.

[289] [1] This letter is accompanied by one to this house, explaining that Penman and Makdougall are stocking a plantation in East Florida upon "a very extensive plan and a sound Capital". Apparently the plan here under consideration was never carried out and the credit which Laurens offered was not used. See Laurens to Ross and Mill, London, May 21, 1768.

have no reason to doubt if the affair is well conducted, but give me leave to ask do you send your Charter'd Vessel away empty, would it not have paid Port charges to take in a mixed Cargo here and made something towards the purchase? Remember to charge your Captain and others to be upon their guard constantly without discovering to the Negroes that they are so. I had a fine Sloop nearly cut off some time ago with only 22 Negroes on board from the West Indies.

I shall send 10 New Negroes by Doran for Sale belonging to Messrs. Smith and Baillies and wish they may suit you at a low price.[2]

290. Henry Laurens to James Penman, 1767.

21st Nov. 1767.

James Penman, St Augustine

Dear Sir, I have before me your kind Letter of the 8th Inst. inclosing Bills for £69. 8. 7 Sterling. the application of the former set was a mere oversight which shall be now rectified.

You will see by my Letters to your African company and from the Letters of Credit there inclosed that I am heartily inclined to do you all the service in my power. your plan is a good one and if well executed will be attended with much saving to you but I think Hugh[1] has hardly experience enough to make choice of Negroes and may easily be deceived in allotments from a whole Cargo wherefore rely more on the persons to whom you write than upon him in that part of the business, those to whom my Credits are directed are Men of strict honour and will not deceive him or you. remember that Bills in the West Indies given for payment of Negro Sales pass extremely well at instalments of 3-6-9 and even 12 Months sight, hint this to your friends and they will explain the matter to your Brother, and if the Bills are drawn more favourably than the custom of the day a proper consideration should be made. . . .

I wish your Family woud. take them at any tolerable Price of your own fixing and send me Bills for the Amot. if you will not buy them and cannot Trouble yourself with the Sale of them, be so good as to tender them to some other good hand that will do my Friends Justice. . . .

Mr. Oswald will have a fine stock in a few Years from his Nursery of Negroes at Musquito,[1] and the idea of putting some of the large Boys under Mr. Waistcoat if he is a clever fellow, is very lucky, and I should think if half a dozen were distributed to learn to row in Canoes and to manage small Boats for two or three Years it would be a further improvement; I was sorry on Mr. Oswalds Account to hear that Nanny was sold and now she will be much missed by Mr. Alert, I have more than a dozen Women of her Value upon Plantations, some that I would not sell for £600 because I know the use of such people among a large gang of ignorant ones. . . .

If you have an Inclination to deal with him, I shall in remembrance of my Promise be your Surety so far as to borrow Three hundred and fifty to four hundred Pounds Sterling for you and your offer of Carolina Currency or Bills of Exchange within Three Months must intitle you to some consideration in the purchase. in case you accept of this your presence may be necessary in Charles Town sometime before the Day of Payment. . . .

Capt. John Doran, of the Schooner Mary

Sir, The Negro Man that I have put on board the Mary and consign'd to you for Sale at St. Augustine, was part of a Remittance made to the owners of the Ship Henry and as such Negroes cannot Legally be sold in this Province I beg the Favour of you to sell him for the most you can obtain in Ready Money or a Bill of Exchange on London or this Place, but not less than £30 Sterlg. clear of Freight your Commission and Charges if any. As to the Negroes Qualities, good or bad, I know nothing of them. I never saw him but once and then very transiently. If you cannot obtain the Price above mentioned and my Schooner is at Augustine put him on board and desire Capt. Peacock to leave him at Broughton Island.[1] if the Schooner is not there leave him with Capt. Adam Bachop or Mr. Alexander Gray. . . .

[293] [1] On Nov. 28, 1768, Laurens wrote to this firm that this letter, and one of Feb. 9, 1768, remained unanswered, and that he had heard nothing of the fifteen negroes consigned to them from Smith and Baillies and Peter Gordon.

. . . Upon Capt. Chilcotts arrival I did every thing in my power to put your Negroes and his into the best hands in Georgia, there happen'd to be in Charles town at that time Mr. McGillivray of the House of Messrs. Graham and Co. and Mr. Hall of the House of Inglis and Hall to each of whom I applied. the former would come to no terms, the latter proposed to sell them upon the best terms of that Market and to remit in 4, 8, 12 and 16 Months. I urged to them the good quality of the Cargo and the terms upon which I had always sold Negroes, to Wit, to remit according to the times agreed upon with the purchasers for Payments but all in vain, they were inflexible. I then took another method and recommended to the House of Price, Hest, and Head to go to Georgia and undertake the Sale upon my terms, which they agreed to. Mr. Price went thither but upon his arrival was intimidated by a transient duty which subjected him as a Stranger to 2½ per Ct. on the Sale and induced him to relinquish the consignment to Messrs. Graham and Co. who sent an Express to my freinds Penman and Co. at St. Augustine who immediately went to Savanna and purchased about 80 of the Cargo of which I understand 38 were yours, at an average of £36. 11. 6 Georgia Money, equal to £33. 13/ Sterling or thereabout payable in Bills upon London at 90 days, but Mr. Price and Capt. Chilcott inform me that Mr. Graham had agreed to remit in 4, 8 and 12 Months which in [torn] opinion is ungenerous and I am heartily vexed at it. I resign[ed] the Commission to Mr. Price thinking he would do the [busi]ness as well as any House there and because it was impossi[ble] for me to go to Georgia; without asking or expecting the [torn] gratuity or acknowledgement. it has been hinted to me [that] he partakes of the Commission yonder. if this shall be confirm'd to me for fact, I shall be very much displeased that [torn] I spoke to him. upon the hold [whole] my good friends I have done all in my power to serve you and am sorry that your affairs have not been managed more to your advantage. the House at Savanna will no doubt advise you fully and I have desired Capt.

Chi[l]cotts to write to them immediately to forward your Bills, for so many Negroes as are sold otherwise they may be long delay'd on Account of two or three unsold.

The Gentlemen in Georgia have not wrote a word to me for some time pass about your 10 and Mr. Gordons 3 Negroes but I hope they have been more careful to advise you of their doings as I desir'd them to miss no opportunity. the 10 Negroes which you consign'd to me by Capt. Simblet I sent to Mr. Penman at St. Augustine who sold them for £350 Stg. and has remitted me so much in a Bill upon this Town and another in London. I do his business here without charging him a commission and therefore I suppose he has charged me none up on that Sale and you shall be the gainers by it. The Rice that I ship'd you by Capt. Bell with the Insurance added Amounting to £2236.2.8, together with sundry charges on your Negroes as per Accot. below which please to note to my Credit £379. 10. more will overbalance the said Sale of 10 Negroes.

If you can send 30 or 40 likely unblemished Negroes soon after this reaches you at a price not exceeding £25 Sterling per head for Angola, or £27 for Gambia or Gold Coast consign'd to me on our joint Account, I will undertake the sale of them to the Southward and make you satisfactory remittances for the whole, if they are all Males they will be more valuable by 20/ or 40/ Sterling per head but you give too great a Freight for them. Capt. Chilcott's Negroes were far superior to yours and I am told have yeilded £4 or £5 Sterling per head more than yours. if you make such a Shipment give the Negroes some covering, charge the Master in whose Vessel they are Ship'd to be very careful of them and by all means give me previous advice if possible. . . .

Next Tuesday we determine in the House of Assembly upon the further continuance of the prohibition upon Negroes and you shall soon hear on which side the Majority is found.[1]

. . . The high duty upon Negroes expires with the present year and I make no doubt that this will be the best Market for Africans

[296] [1] Jan. 28, 1768, Laurens to John Moultrie: "Yesterday a Motion was made in the House for continuing the prohibitory Duty (intended to expire with 1768) for a longer Term—carried in the Negative the folks who play'd Cat in Pan to get the Duty laid to suit particular purposes, and now want to serve the same purpose by taking it off—kept out of the way, for obvious reasons."

"Upon a motion for continuing the additional duty on negroes imported, a majority appeared against it, by which the Prohibition will cease the first of January next." S. C. Gazette, Feb. 1, 1768.

all the next, of any in America. You will have offers enough of service in that branch, I shall only presume to say that if I am upon the spot when any of your Vessels arrive here you may command and depend upon my best advice and assistance to the Masters in agreeing with the most proper house, the benefit (I say this entre nos) resulting from the modern practice of remitting in the bottom at 3-6- and 9 Months or 3-6- and 12 have been improved far beyond anything that Austin and Laurens ever experienced—their mode for remittance was fairest—the other way is full of temptation—what I would never enter into altho I have known my neighbours making 13 per Ct. Commission sometimes more—when mine never exceeded Nine per Ct.—on Sales and returns. if a Man is honest you may depend upon his remitting according to the times of Payment set forth in the Sales if he is tricky and avaricious you can't depend upon him at all.[1] . . .

. . . This goes by the hands of Mr. William Price a Gentleman who has been in trade some Years and is at the head of that House that undertook the Sale of Capt. Chilcott's Negroes last Winter upon more equitable terms than was offer'd by any other. He is going to transact affairs of the partnership in the West Indies and may perhaps call at St. Christophers; if he does and shall enter into any engagement with you, for fourscore or an hundred Negroes of the first quality, I will be answerable for such part as he may take upon his Account and mine admitting the same to be 2/3ds or 3/4ths and make a satisfactory remittance for the Amount as soon as I shall be advis'd of the terms and also for remitting for your part if you shall chuse to hold 1/3d or one quarter punctually when the Nt. proceed shall become due, and likewise do everything in my power that shall be needful to make a good Sale. I am of opinion that such Slaves as I have hinted to Mr. Price, taken such care of on the Voyage as he shall direct will sell for good prices and command a great deal of ready Money. . . .

P. S. As my principal motive to the above proposition is to assist my friends Price, Hest, and Head it will [be] equally agreeable to me to be excluded from a share in the purchase of Negroes and I shall be answerable for the performance of any engagements on their part in the same manner as is express'd in the preceding Letter.

[297] [1] In a letter written the next day, May 25, to Thomas and Richard Millerson and Co. of Lancaster, also sent by Captain Jordan, Laurens, after proffering his advisory services in the market soon to be opened, added, "I have not resolved upon that Trade again or not".

299. Henry Laurens to Ross and Mill, 1768.

2d Septem. 1768.

Ross and Mill, London

. . . In my Letter of the 13th July [1] I promised to write more fully up on the African Trade meaning to enlarge upon the Subject of remittances. It was the constant practice of our House Austin and Laurens to Note upon each Accot. of Sale the terms of payment under different heads as such payments became due, and at each period to remit the full Sum then due. from that method we acted simply as Factors; transacting the business of our constituents for a certain known Commission of 5 per Ct. upon Sales and returns which Netted upon both about 8½ to 9 per Ct. some of our Neighbours in those days endeavour'd to persuade us to fall into a New way which had been proposed and I believe in some measure forced upon them of remitting the Net Proceed of each Cargo in Bills in the Bottom payable in certain proportions and at distant periods, as 3-6-9 to 3-6-12- and 15 Months, but we would not deviate from our plan altho we have known 14 to 17 per Ct. made the other way. I think it my duty in return for the friendly preference that you are pleased to offer me, to hint this much to you. You may learn from our old Accounts from Messrs. Oswald and Co. what remittances we made to them and such or nearly such may always be made while the Negro Trade is worth your attention in Carolina. The Market in this Country does not continue as in the West Indies long at a Medium price, our prices are (almost without exception) either high or too low to make tolerable profits by. in the West Indies terms of payment and prices do not greatly vary, you have a chance of going easily from one Island to another and the Merchant undertakes to turn out the Cargo at so much per head at least; upon such terms of remittance, whence the objection that I make to such remittances from this place is no objection in the Islands, nor any where else where a stated price for the Cargo is fixed. The Owner reaps all the benefit from better prices and the Merchant enjoys all the profits he can make from speedy payments. this is fair and understood by each party. If the House you consign to here, consist of candid and ingenuous Men you may depend upon having strict justice done in Accounts in what I call the old way—if you have any doubts of their integrity they are not fit to correspond with—but take Men as Men, consider how much more you are in the power of a House when remittances are to be made by Bill, in the bottom at long periods and no stated price for the average of a Cargo than you are when business is transacted for you at a certain Commission and the Remittances to be made on your Account as the payments become due. I do not mean by these observations to censure anybody nor to impute the mode of remittance, which I so much dislike, to the invention of our Carolina Merchants. I rather think it was forced upon them from your side of the Water by some Gentlemen who said that Bills in the bottom kept the wheel in motion. that is well enough when there is not other strength to turn it, but it is at the same time paying dear for such assistance.[2]

[299] [1] Laurens had also written to this house on July 26, expressing in his letter some apprehension over political conditions: "the good Sales of Negroes will depend very much upon the prospect we may have by and by of concord with our friends on your side the Water."

It is very uncertain whether I shall ever sell or be concern'd in the Sale of another Cargo of Negroes, I am determined barring extraordinary accidents to go to England in the Spring of Next Year and if any Negroes shall in the mean time come consign'd [to me] I shall transfer the consignment to Messrs. Thomas Loughton Smith and Roger Smith, the Sons of Benjamin Smith and Thomas Smith Esq. who have both retired from Trade.

The connexions, capital, and application to business of those Younger Gentlemen together with the aid of their Fathers and other able friends will give them an Ascendant over some Houses and enable them to do as much for the Interest of their Constituents in the African branch as any House in the place, both in obtaining good prices and making faithful remittances; they are ready to give good Security for performance of their engagements. when Austin, Laurens, and Appleby recommended Smith, Brewton, and Smith to their old benefactors and correspondant in the Negro Trade, it arose (next to a knowledge of the ability of that House) from a consideration of favours often received in their own Negro Sales and upon other occasions from Mr. Benjamin Smith and the same considerations attach me at present to the Interest of his Son and his Nephew, without meaning or intending to injure or by any means disparage Mr. Brewton and his new connexions whom I wish very well.[3] I believe that great Sales will be made next Year of Negroes in this place, if no extraordinary interruption by public disputes shall prevent our progress. I cannot form a compitent judgement of the Temper of the times, nor can I expect that great things will be done in our favour to make us quiet while you are in such confusion at home but you will have the first opportunity of seeing into public measures and will shape your own accordingly. We have a prospect of a large Crop of Rice and great plenty of Negro Provision which is no small inducement to planters to purchase Negroes and the Crop of Indigo tho not very large will make a considerable addition to our Remittances and besides all that the old Crop of Rice is wound up at 75/ per Ct., many Planters out of debt and full of Money which they must spend in the Horse Races if they cant lay it out in Negroes.[4]

I quitted the Profits arising from that gainful Branch principally because of many Acts from the Masters and others concern'd toward the wretched Negroes from the Time of purchasing to that of selling them again some of which, altho within my knowledge were uncontrolable. Yet I never saw an Instance of Cruelty in Ten or twelve Years experience in that branch equal to the cruelty exercised upon those poor Irish, who are to be I suppose the Subject of Mr. Jackson's Application. No! [4] On Oct. 15 Laurens wrote again of the need for caution because of political difficulties: "if we are thrown into confusion by political disputes and contentions for Liberty, our Market must be a very bad one at such times for the Sale of Negroes." On Oct. 21 he added: "Just as I was going to close the above Copy of my last the 15th Inst. your obliging favour of the 12th Augt. came to hand. You may rest assured of my utmost endeavours for your Interest when any of your Guinea Men arrive here. the unlimited confidence that you are pleased to repose in me demands it, but my inclination to do you all the service in my power added thereto secures to you a friendship that is wholly disinterested and I beg that you will not in return make any appoligies."

Here are about 150 Negroes imported in different bottoms from West Indies waiting for the opening of 1769—which is now near at hand[1] and I do suppose there will soon be ten Times as many. the Planters are full of Money, and their Rice commands Money wherefore 'tis probable that the Sale of Slaves will be very advantageous at this Market until we are overstock'd, or interrupted by any broils with King's Officers the latter I hope is at a much greater distance than the period of my Life—but yet—the aspect of the Times is exceedingly unpleasant.

. . . Several small parcels of Negroes have been imported here from the West India Islands and the best of them have sold pretty well but there is generally a mixture of refuse Negroes amongst such and therefore after the very best are disposed of, the bulk remains often times upon hand and do not yeild great prices, therefore no opinion can be formed from such adventure what a fine Cargo directly from the Coast would sell for, and indeed from the despondency of many People here on Account of the late Revenue Laws, from whence many were or pretended to be resolv'd against purchasing Negroes [2] I have not thought it for your Interest to Give Capt. Gray any encouragement to come to this Market. If such resolution shall be formed and adhered to by the Planters your friends will have a very difficult Card to play in order to save you from very great Losses and in such case you may rely upon the most strenuous exertion of my abilities to serve you. but I hope our next intelligence from Great Britain will clear away the gloom which at present hangs on our minds, otherwise depend upon it necessity will drive us to wear our old Cloaths over again until new ones can be wrought from our own manufactures. this is the general voice of the People; a very sensible Publication lately appeared in one of our Gazettes dissuading the Planters from purchasing Negroes and I am told it is much regarded in the Country.[3] I shall observe what happens at the first large Sale and if the bent of the Planter is really against purchasing Negroes until better times come, shall write to every Island from Barbadoes downward to prevent if possible any of your Interest from coming hither. . . .

[304] [1] Laurens's letters for this year give little idea of the amount of importation going on. No longer actively engaged in it, he either knew less of its details or was less concerned to transmit them to foreign correspondents.

[2] This suggests that the non-importation agreement of July was already being informally discussed.

[3] It is possible that Laurens refers to the following sentence, which had appeared in the Gazette of Mar. 2: "A Calculation having been made of the Amount of the Purchase Money of Slaves expected here the present Year, it is computed at £270,000 Sterling, which Sum will by that Means be drained from this Province."

upwards of 400 Negroes arrived to Messrs. Thomas and Roger Smith. some wealthy young Planters, and family connexions purchased a good many at £300 for Men and £270 for Women but there were not so many planters appear'd as used in former days to appear at such Sales nor did they discover that eagerness for buying as might be expected from the abundance of their Crops and the high prices obtained for them and Mr. Smith fears that his Sales will not average much above £31 or £32 and yet both Cargoes were very fine and no House in Town more capable of Selling Negroes to advantage. Such Cargoes in the present prosperous state of our Planters if they had not been under the dread of New Taxes the weight of which they cannot judge of until the demand is made, would have gone off upon very different terms. indeed it may be said that many of them stand off in hopes of purchasing cheaper a Month or two hence and I believe there is truth in that observation, but it is as certain that all the most sensible people act with more caution and restrict their expenses more than they would otherwise do, on Account of the present attempts of the Ministry to burthen us with Taxes of every kind.

Knight and Davidson your Agents at Bance Island inclosing a Bill of Loading for 150 Slaves on board the Ship King George, William Graham Master, on your Account now arrived within this port, and in the Evening your much esteemed favour of the 5th April by the Packet together with a duplicate of the 23d January and an inclosed Letter all came to hand. I am under great obligations to you for these intended consignments and shall never think I can do too much to serve you in return, altho it is not in my power consistently with my regard for your Interest to reap the benefits of them. my present plan of business renders me incapable of selling Negroes to such advantage as I used to do. I live a little remote from town, am very often in the Country and by an inattention to mercantile affairs for some Years past have lost a great many of my old Country acquaintance but besides these impediments I am endeavouring to go to England some time in next Month and shall do so if I possibly can put my affairs in order to admit of my absence. I have therefore recommended this Cargo to the care of Messrs. Thos. L. and Roger Smith whose interest and connexions are such as enables them to make (in my opinion) the best Sales in Charlestown. I shall talk to them upon the head of remittances and make no doubt that everything will be done by them to give you satisfaction and as I have no Interest in the Sale directly or indirectly save only to serve you and them so I can speak to them with the greater freedom and Mr. Thos. Smith will be with you very soon after you receive this. he leaves in his absence two excellent substitutes his own and his Partner's Father.

Docter Gordon from on board the King George writes to me that five of the Slaves died on the Passage, the remainder much improved since they left Bance Island and in general very healthy.

[2] On Oct. 31 Laurens wrote that the negroes had brought £1426. 8. 8, or £400 more than if he had sold them at once. To what he had already written of the cargo he added: "a third poor pining creature hanged herself with a piece of a small Vine which shews that her carcass was not very weighty. . . . Who that views the above Picture can love the African trade?"

When Capt. Stevens arrives you may depend upon my utmost endeavours to serve him in every respect and as he is very sensible and well acquainted with People here I shall put him in the way to make the most advantageous contract the times will admit of. I am told prime Negroes, say Men, sell quick at £300 per head others (ordinary ones excepted) in proportion.

308. News Item relating to Slave Trade, 1769.[1]

Upon examining the Imports of Negroes, from the year 1756 to 1766, it appears, that 23,743 were brought into this Province in that Period; the Medium of which is 2374 a Year; but if the last of those Years is taken off, (when 6701 were poured in upon us, on Account of the high Duty that was to take Place the Year following, and which did put an entire Stop to the Importation til last January) the Medium is then only 1894. From the 1st of January last to the 1st Instant, no less than 4233 have been imported, and near as many more, we hear, are expected, before the close of the Year, notwithstanding several Vessels that were intended here, have met, and will meet with Orders in the West-Indies, to sell there. There surely needs no Comment upon this; every Man's own mind must suggest the Consequences of such enormous Importations, in every view, especially at this Time.

July 22, 1769.

IV. That from and after the 1st Day of January, 1770, we will not Import, Buy, or Sell, any Negroes that shall be brought into this Province from Africa; nor after the 1st Day of October next, any Negroes that shall be imported from the West-Indies or Any Other Place, excepting Africa as aforesaid: And that, if any Negroes shall be sent to us, contrary to our Agreement in this Subscription, such Goods shall be Re-shipped or Stored, and Such Negroes Re-shipped from this Province, and not, By any Means, offered for Sale therein.

[308] [1] S. C. Gazette, July 6, 1769.

[309] [1] S. C. Gazette, May 3, 1770. In the original form in which the non-importation agreement appeared in the Gazette negroes were not mentioned, but the enlarged agreement presented to the meeting of Charleston inhabitants July 22, 1769, contained the paragraph here printed. The agreement was signed by 142 merchants and importers and enforced by a committee containing, among others, the following merchants: John Neufville, Daniel D'Oyley, Thomas Shirley, Peter Bacot, Roger Smith, and William Price (ibid., July 27, 1769; Boston News Letter, Aug. 17, 1769). For an account of the controversies over the adoption of the agreement see McCrady. Royal Government, pp. 645-658; Sellers, Charleston Business on the Eve of the Revolution, pp. 203-209.

310. Lieutenant Governor William Bull to Secretary Hillsborough, 1769.[1]

December 6, 1769.

. . . The only Article of Import I shall mention is that of Negroes as they increase the means of Agriculture. Since the 1st of January last at which time expired the prohibition to import them 5435 negroes have been imported which being mostly Adults for immediate Service sold upon an average near £40 Sterling each amounting to the great sum of £200,000 sterling purchased in Africa chiefly by british merchants residing in London, Bristol and Liverpool.[2]

311. Henry Laurens to Ross and Mill, 1770.

per Capt. Chamberlain
Ross and Mill, London

. . . When I recommended the House of Messrs. T. L. and Roger Smith for the Sale of your African Cargoes be assured Gentlemen I had your Interest solely in view. I thought that from their connections and particularly from the great assistance, which they might have from their respective Fathers both in person and purse no House in Town was better qualified to make advantageous Sales. all that I have gain'd by it is ill Will from some who would gladly have given me a part of the Commissions for the business and downright ungrateful Language from one a Young Man [1] who used to live with me, to whom I have done every proper service in my power but could not think as he did, that he was equally well qualified to sell Negro Cargoes as more established Houses. I mention so much because it really grieves me to think that after such disinterested measures as I took to serve you, you have not received that satisfaction from the conduct of my friends which you had a good right to expect but I still hope Mr. T. L. Smith has explain'd the Account in such manner as to convince you that their was nothing unfair in the transactions of his House. I told you long ago that I did not approve the mode adopted for the Sale of Negroes in this Province, but if each party is satisfied at making the contract and the [310] [1] Br. Trans., XXXII. 129. In a similar letter written by Bull to the Board of Trade, Dec. 5, he gives the number of negroes imported as 5438. Ibid., XXXII. 122.

[2] This corresponds with the estimate in the Gazette of Mar. 29, 1770: "But for the General Resolutions entered into by the Inhabitants of this Province, it is computed, that the British Merchants would have drawn from us this Year, no less a Sum than Two Hundred Thousand Pounds Sterling, for the Article of Slaves Alone, purchased chiefly with British Manufactures."

[311] [1] This may have been either Felix Warley, or Head, both of whom Laurens had befriended.

Selling party here complies with his or their engagements no blame can justly be laid to them. If you and I, had half an hours conversation I could I think I could put you in a way to have advantageous Sales made here and give a very acceptable Commission to your Factor.

I have not the least doubt but Negroes will sell extremely well here as soon as the market is open and if your first Cargo come under my care I will try to do you a piece of service by employing a friend (perhaps the same House) to sell it in the old way. . . .

312. News Items relating to Slave Trade, 1770.[1]

May 3, 1770.

In the Brigt. Tartar Capt. McCall, (arrived here the 11th past from Jamaica) 40 Negroes were imported, which, agreeable to our Resolutions, must be re-shipped from this Province, and not, by any Means, offered for Sale therein. Another Parcel of Slaves arrived here last Tuesday, in the Ship Africa, Capt. Sewell, from Grenada, under the same Circumstances. And the Ship Sally, of Liverpoole, Capt. Evans, from Africa, arrived Yesterday, with 300 more.

May 10, 1770.

A Part of the Negroes lately imported here, are, Agreeable to the Resolutions, re-shipped from this Province, and gone for Georgia; whither the rest will soon follow.

May 17, 1770.[2]

Yesterday sailed for Georgia the Ship Sally, George Evans Master, which arrived here the 2d Instant, with 345 Slaves from the Coast of Africa. Captain Evans had been to Georgia by Land, and returned a few Days before the above General Meeting, where he attended, intending to propose "to stay her about two Months; to repair his Vessel, and see if any Change of Affairs might happen in his Favour; and to offer Security that he would not, in the mean Time sell any Part of his Cargo in this Province;" But when he saw the People assembled, he thought it most adviseable, to decline his intended Proposal, to fill his Water-Casks the Day following and Sail the next, with his whole Cargo, tho' he has no Prospect of a good Sale where he is gone.

[312] [1] S. C. Gazette, for the dates given. The first item also appears in the Ga. Gazette, May 10, 1770, and in the Mass. Gazette and News Letter, June 7. South Carolina apparently made a very genuine effort to enforce the agreement. The Gazette reports a meeting called Jan. 1 or before, to enquire of the committee "whether any negroes have been imported from the West-Indies since the 1st day of October last, and sold here; and by whom (if any) purchased?" (S. C. Gazette, Dec. 21, 1769). In March "a meeting of Merchants and Factors framed an agreement to prevent masters of vessels from importing and clandestinely selling goods, wine and slaves". Ibid., Mar. 8, 1770.

[2] In the Supplement to the Gazette, May 17, 1770.

If it is possible, that any Planter in this Province can be so destitute of public Virtue, as to countenance the unfeeling Merchants of Georgia (while they counter-act our Resolutions, and remain dead to every Thing but their own Interest) by purchasing Slaves in That Province, and introducing them over Land into This; he will do well to consider, that Every Slave so introduced, is liable to Seizure and Forfeiture, One Half to the Informer; that he will be so narrowly watched, even by his Brethren, as well as Overseers and others, that it will be almost impossible to secure one such Slave; and that there is a Resolution taken, to inflict the highest public Censure upon such Offenders, particularly and to treat them with a Contempt equal to the Atrociousness of the Offence—as Enemies to the Liberties of America.[3]

July 19, 1770.

We are informed, that a Seizure has already been made at Beaufort, Port-Royal, of some Negroes clandestinely brought into this Province, for not having paid the Duties and that three or four other Purchasers are obliged to conceal theirs, to avert the same Inconveniency, being narrowly watched by some Resolutioners.[4]

313. Nathaniel Russell to Aaron Lopez, 1770.[1]

Charlestown 28th May 1770.

Dear Sir, . . . the State of Markits here are much the same as when I wrote. Rice continues at 45/, here has been several Vessells with Negroes but none sold they are Oblig'd to carry them to Other Provinces most of them are gone to Georgia if they could be sold here they would command a very good Price at this time. . . .

. . . If you send any Slaves to this place consign'd to me, you may depend upon it, that I shall either sell them myself, or put them

[3] This paragraph was repeated in the Gazette of May 24.

[4] On Sept. 22 Laurens wrote to a Dominican correspondent: "The Negroe which you have sent cannot possibly be landed in this Province for several Reasons—perhaps Capt. Hoggat may find some Opportunity to dispose of him for immediate Exportation to some neighboring province—otherwise you must expect to see him return in the Vessel."

[313] [1] Newport Hist. Soc., Lopez Letter-Book, no. 631, p. 11. For further information concerning Russell and Lopez see this work, vol. III., index.

into such hands as will do you the most Service in the Sale and the most perfect Justice in every Respect, but send none but young ones. I don't mean Children, when a small parcel of old or ordinary Slaves come to hand it is exceedingly difficult to dispose of them at any Rate. . . .

P. S. To Mr. Holman's Letter. I refer you to Capt. Savery for an Account of the Restriction laid on the Importation of Slaves into this province, by the Resolution of the people and it is my opinion that the Market will not be open again until April next, and that will depend entirely on the Repeal of certain Acts of Parliament, which we Americans complain of as unjust, oppressive and unconstitutional—and if you come to reside here, you will thank us for the bold opposition—which Duty to our latest posterity has obliged us to make against a Ministry who after having drained the Wealth of G. Britain and Ireland are endeavouring to subject America to the payment of pensions for their mignions of both sides. But we will not bow.[1]

[314] [1] On Sept. 10 Laurens wrote to Richard Oswald: "these Resolutions remain a Bar to the Importation of Negroes. . . . Our planters are out of Debt and in general have large Funds for purchasing Negroes, which they will do very eagerly whenever an Importation takes place." On Sept. 29 he wrote to Alexander, James, and Evan Baillie of St. Christopher: "Negroes would make not only a saving but a gainful Remittance if our Resolutions did not prohibit the Importation . . . Whenever the parliament will enable us to depart from our present Resolutions, you may depend upon it that our Market will be the best in America for fine Negroes." News of the defection of Rhode Island reached Charleston in the summer. Later, word arrived that New York and Pennsylvania had abandoned the agreement. At a general meeting held Dec. 13 the inhabitants of Charleston declared non-importation at an end. McCrady, Royal Government, p. 679.

Richard Oswald, London

Dear Sir, I was informed this morning by an accident, that a Snow which had delivered Negroes at St. Augustine and had been laying off the Bar of that place had been driven from her Anchors and was put into our Port in distress. it struck me immediately that she belonged to you and therefore thought it my duty to make some further enquiry.

I find her to be the Charlotte or Charlotta, James Tosh Master, that Capt. Tosh had landed 115 good Slaves at St. Augustine and was on shoar there with them, that he left the Pilot on board with orders to carry the Vessel into Port if possible; she had been at Anchor six days without an opportunity of going in, when a Gale of Wind drove her from all her Anchors which together with two of her cables are in all probability totally lost. the Mate Joshua Fox says he attempted to go into Tybee but finding it impracticable he bore away and with some difficulty (for we have had extreme tempestuous weather) he Entered this Port safely. the Vessel must have two or three New Anchors with Cables and Halsers and all her upper works require caulking which shall be done with dispatch and frugality and she may be in readiness for Sea when the Master arrives here. a small Vessel is to sail for Augustine to morrow and I shall embrace that opportunity for writing to Capt Tosh and he in all probability will be here in the course of this Month.[1] the Vessel has not one White Seaman, the Mate excepted, on board, and it will take up a fortnight to put her in order for Sea, therefore I think upon the whole it will be best to detain her in Port until the Master shall arrive or transmit orders to his mate. I understand from the latter that the Snow is to return directly to Bance Island, if that is the case I shall advise the master to take from hence a few articles which may be wanted at the Factory or may be disposed of on Your Account to advantage.

Mr. Gervais is now in Town with his little Crop of Indigo. he hopes to remit you One hundred Pounds Sterling and will give such security for the Balance of his Account as you require. I hear your Bance Island is on her Passage hither, if she brings a fine Cargo of Negroes you may expect to have a good account of the Sale barring a declaration of War and a greater fall in the price of Rice which is now at 45/ per Cwt.

[316] [1] On Mar. 8 Laurens wrote that Captain Tosh had arrived five or six days before that date. The Gazette, Mar. 7, 1771, reported the arrival of this vessel in Africa. See introduction, p. 245n.

Sir, Your much esteem'd favour to Mr. Laurens of the 25th May last came safe to hand a few days after His departure from this. He is gone to the Northward with his Elder and Younger Sons, and from thence He intends to accompany them to England, where he expects to be by the latter end of the next Month, but left directions with me relative to your Guinea Men in case they should arrive, in what manner I was to proceed.

Yesterday afternoon Capt. James Tosh in your Snow Charlotte arrived here in eight weeks from Bance Island with a Cargo of 118 as likely and healthy young Negroes as ever were seen in this Province. I immediately after perusing your Instructions to the Captain and agreeable to Mr. Laurens's orders to me; waited on Messrs. Thomas Loughton and Roger Smith to make them the offer of the Cargo which they readily accepted of and promised to do all the needful for your Interest.

I am informed that your Bance Island arrived at Georgia upwards of seven Weeks past and Sold her Cargo very well. I am in hopes that this Cargo will turn out full as well.

[320] [1] The next day the same writer reported to James Burnett of Jamaica the difficulty he had encountered in disposing of a small cargo from Jamaica on which he had been obliged to pay the £60 (£50 plus £10) duty on seasoned negroes. On Sept. 21 he wrote to Oswald that the cargo of the Charlotte had been sold on the 17th.

James Burnett, Jamaica

Sir, The beginning of this present month I had the pleasure to receive your much esteem'd favour of the 28th October, and I am truly sorry, that the amount of the Negroes which I had Sold and mentioned to you in my last of the 7th September, did not answer your expectation, but I do assure you upon my honor that my endeavours were not wanting in order to render an Advantageous Sale of said Slaves; and were they my own property I could not have done more in the disposal of them, than I have done for you or the proprietor, for the people here as I mentioned to you before, seem prejudiced against West India Negroes, that, with the heavy Duty laid on all season'd Slaves imported into this Province, have been a means of lessening the Value of them prodigiously.

Please now to receive under this cover an Account Sale of the said Negroes, Net Proceed of which is £930. 7. 8 Current money, together with an Account Current annexed finally balanced (free of Commission) by my Bill of this date on John Tarleton Esquire,[1] Leverpoole, Payable in London to the order of Charles Jackman Esquire, £137 Sterling at 679 per Cr. Each and remitted to him this day agreeable to your request—per the Swallow Packet, William Copeland, Esquire Commander.

You will also receive inclosed, the separate Doctors Bills for the cure of Rosetta which I send in order that you, or the Proprietor of said Wench may be better convinced of the Condition She must have been in, for to remain so long a time under their hands as to raise such extravagant Accounts before she was perfectly cured. These Charges also helps to prejudice the Value of the Negroes very much. Doctor Tucker who was the first person employed for this Negro Woman at her arrival attended and sent medicines for her for at least two Months and at the end thereof, She seem'd to complain of her Disorder as much as ever. She was really disagreeable about our House and as the Doctor would not take her to his own house, where in fact she should have been at first I was obliged to send her to the Hospital here and put her under two other Practitioners in order that they might perfect the cure of her as speedily as possible. There the said Wench remain'd upwards of two Months more before she was well enough to be discharged. I would have sent you the Sales of the Negroes before now but was deprived by the long Illness of Rosetta who I was fortunate enough to Sell, I think extremely well, considering her late circumstances.

With regard to the Entry of these Negroes as season'd Slaves, in which you apprehend the Captains were in fault, I will relate to you in as few words as I possibly can, to shew that they are blameless. Capt. Newbold by whom I received the first Two Wenches was obliged by his Owners here to have them Enter'd as Season'd Slaves. Capt. Henry who brought in the last, had Enter'd them as New Negroes, but as I knew they were not and that had Mr. Laurens been on the spot at the time he would not have received them before they were properly Enter'd, I therefore consulted some of his friends here about them, who advised me by all means not to take Charge of said Negroes without I intend to Enter them as season'd as they are liable to be seized at any time within the course of a Twelve Months. in consequence of their advice I received and Enter'd the said Negroes as season'd and paid the Duty accordingly. I am fully convinced of the hardship 'tis to the Proprietor of them and I am heartily sorry that it was not in my power to render a more pleasing Account Sale. Turpentine is very scarce just now and not to be had without paying an extravagant price of 20 per Ct. which is too high for your Market, otherwise I would have remitted you the Net Proceed of said Negroes in that commodity. I am greatly obliged to you for your kind offers of service to me and I shall at all times take great pleasure in rendering you those of mine.

323. Henry Laurens to James Laurens, 1772.

Bristol 6th Feby. 1772.

Sent to Mr Snoxell
James Laurens, Charles Town

. . . I have already refused the Offers (unask'd by me) and without Security, of Negro Cargoes from three Houses, and have not yet been at Leverpoole or Lancaster. might I not accumulate Business, if I was to lay out for it? but these Branches, the most profitable, I have quitted to people who are more eager for them. You know that I have given up many Thousands of pounds, which I might have added to my Stock in that way.[1] . . .

[323] [1] On Feb. 3 Laurens wrote to Felix Warley in the same vein, evidently greatly pleased with his treatment in England: "Mr. Oswald will send his African Ships to me, or to whomever I please. The mayor of Bristol [probably Henry Bright, who was mayor in 1771] says, Mr. Laurens, I have a Ship with Five hundred and fifty Negroes going to Carolina—will you have her? or who will you advise me to send her to—and if I was to lay myself out for the purpose I might obtain many other such offers."

324. Henry Laurens to Samuel Brailsford, 1772.

Samuel Brailsford, Bristol

. . . I must inform you, what I have learn'd from Mr. Oswald, of Mr. Hopton's addresses to him, and his answers relative to the Consignment of his African Vessels at Charles Town

Mr. Oswald says, that upon Mr. Hopton's first Application, and shewing a Letter of Credit from me, he received him with proper marks of Respect that when Mr. Hopton introduced the African Trade into Conversation he replied, that such Ships as he should send to Carolina, should always go to Mr. Laurens, and that he might do as he pleased with them that Mr. Hopton call'd upon him a second time, and then ask'd him or to use Mr. Oswald's very words seemed to wish that he would consign such African Vessels as had been talk'd of, to the House, in which he was newly concern'd.[1] But Mr. Oswald was not very well pleased with such importunity and declined or refused it. this is what Mr. Oswald has inform'd me of, after taking time to recollect what had pass'd, with the assistance of Mr. Herries his partner, and Mrs. Oswald, who were present, and it seems to be fully confirm'd by Mr. Hopton's Letter to me of the 22d May 1771—which I here inclose, for your perusal—added to this paragraph as below *—and had been never so much inclined, to have complimented my own Brother with the Sale of the Cargo, I do not think that I could have done so, consistently with honour, because Mr. Oswald in the earliest Advice of his Intention, to send an African Vessel to Carolina, had mentioned the name of Thos. Ln. [Loughton] Smith, as an alternative in case of my Refusal, and I believe had taken Security from Mr. Nutt on his Account in consequence thereof I had informed Mr. Smith, some time before I left the province, that such Guinea Men would probably fall into his hands. Mr. Oswald view'd the Credit which in Conjunction with the elder Mr. Hopton, I had given to the younger Mr. Hopton, in its true Light as a means of introducing him into Business, as opportunities should offer but not by any means, as even intimating a Resignation of any Branch of Business on my part.

If therefore, he told you, that I had resign'd or intended to resign Business in his favour, and that Mr. Oswald had promised him any of his African Consignments, I am sure he was mistaken, in the former, and there appears from the above Representation, the highest probability of his being also mistaken in the latter. . . . Mr. Oswald has not determined, to whom he shall consign his Ships, the present Year. his Partner Mr. Herries tells me that Mr. Nutt has long since been about him, on Account of Mr. Thos. Ln. Smith, and I am persuaded that you are a Man of too much Generosity, to desire to interpose to his Disadvantage, considering he transacted the Business last year, made good Sales, and gave Satisfaction, but Mr. Oswald himself, gave me no Opportunity of mentioning any Name or House, before he at our first meeting had told me, he had an inclination to try the Abilities of a Gentleman in Carolina, sent and recommended there by himself, and in which plan he is so particularly interested, as seems fairly to supercede all other Considerations. what therefore he will finally determine upon, I shall know some time in the Course of this Month.[2] . . .

* if I had told Mr. Hopton that I had resigned or intended to resign business in his favour, he would not have admitted (as he did in that letter) the possibility or probability of my selling Mr. Oswald's African Cargo. if Mr. Oswald had given Mr. Hopton any assurance that such Cargoes should fall into his hands next to mine, in the event of my refusal to sell them, neither you nor I can doubt, but that Mr. Hopton would have inform'd me thereof in words much more explicit than those in which he has now, as it were, recommended the House you had taken him into as being capable "of doing such business upon at least as good terms as any other". this general recommendation, without claiming a preference (much less any preference from promises, which had never been made on my side) was pertinent and proper from him to me, and in due time, it should and would have produced some good effects, all the good effects that could reasonably have been hoped for. I am sincerely grieved at his miscarriage, by going beyond that style, when he introduced himself to you, but with respect to that African Vessel of Mr. Oswald's, which did arrive at Charles Town and the other if she had arrived; if I had been on the Spot.[3]

325. Henry Laurens to John Lewis Gervais, 1772.

Westminster, 28th Feby. 1772.

John Lewis Gervais, Esqr. Herenhausen

. . . You will find under Cover hereof, a Letter from that Gentleman [Mr. Oswald], advising you of a Consignment of Negroes for the Sale of which, and Dispatch of the Vessel to Africa again it will be necessary for you to make immediately provision—that is to say as to the 1st pt. Apply to your good Friend Mr. Trapier, and to Collo. Heyward and to every other Friend who can be of Service to you, in the Country and inform them in a proper way of your expectation. The Messrs. Bales and Messrs. Harlestons and many others of my old Friends, you may speak to, with good Success, by taking a casual Ride Round to Mepkin [1] but I need not tell you, that barely mentioning that you expect soon, to have a Cargo or two, of Negroes, from the Windward Coast for Sale, and that you shall be glad to have an Opportunity of serving their Wants, will be sufficient and perhaps prevent Inconveniencies, which sometimes follow pressing Intreaties. to Mr. Trapier, you may write fully, it will be in his Power to retain and recommend a great many valuable purchasers, and I make no doubt, but that he will appear at any of your Sales, and give you the most friendly and effectual Assistance. Mr. Manigault and my Brother, will leave no reasonable thing in their power undone to assist you in Charles Town and there you have also many other Friends, of your own and mine to apply to, as you shall see occasion. Mr. Warley will be ready to help you in every Article, from the Arrival of the Vessel, to the Completion of the Sale, and Reloading; for which you may compliment him, if you please, with fifty or Sixty Guineas, on each Vessel and no more. I take the Liberty of restricting this, because I have thrown very handsome Commissions, already in his way—and shall have Opportunities of doing more for him—and because I wish the Commission on Mr. Oswald's Vessel or Vessels to be as ample as the Cargoes will admit of, to your own Benefit. The measure lately adopted in Charles Town, for the Sale of Negroes, is to give three Months Credit, to Purchasers with Interest from the Date, in most Cases, I would recommend to you to pay no Regard to this Rule. endeavour to obtain full as good prices as any other House—as much Cash, and Bills of Exchange in payment, as you possibly can—and deal with each Man who shall require Credit, according to the Length of Credit required but none beyond four or six Months and you will in such Cases, either receive a price in proportion to the Credit, or include Interest from the Day, if you obtain no more than the ready Money price. the Old Accounts of Sale of Austin and Laurens'—which my Brother will readily put into your hands—will serve you as a Guide for modelling your Accounts. These are the best Hints I can at present give you for the Sale of a Cargo of Negroes. I should have included one, to be early, and extensive as possible, in Advertizing the whole Country of your intended Sale. But as the Alterations which are introduced into particular Branches of Trade from time to time demand in many Instances, a Conformity to the Ruling Mode So you will receive what I have said under this Head, only as Hints and govern yourself finally by the Advice of your Friends on the Spot.

[2] The reference is to John Lewis Gervais, who had been recommended by Oswald to Laurens in 1764.

[3] At this point the letter abruptly ends.

Now with regard to Remittances, I refer you likewise to the practice of Austin and Laurens; that House remitted, as the payments on each Sale of Negroes became due. I have suggested to Mr Oswald, that it may not be in your Power to comply exactly with such Terms, for want of such a Capital, as that on which they traded, to which he very generously replied, that he should not be at all uneasy on that head, but then on your part, You will observe, that if you are not able to remit, when the payments become due, The Interest arising on the Bonds, will certainly become, and ought to be remitted as the property of your Constituent. As it is a part of the Negro Contract for the Factor to stand to all bad Debts, so you will for your own Safety, call in the Debts as speedily as possible, and I hope, in such a prosperous Year as this is for the planters, You will be enabled to make a very large Remittance, soon after the Close of the Sale, from Cash and Bills, paid down by purchasers and that you may also, exchange many good Bonds for Bills on London, in which Mr. Manigault may be very assistant to you, and at the same time make an agreeable Exchange to himself. by all means endeavour to compleat your Remittances without Delay, for tho Mr. Oswald is pleased to say, that it is a matter of no great Consequence to him, whether the Remittances are made immediately or not, yet I know that nothing is more disagreeable than long depending Accounts, in America, and that no Man however large his Capital may be, will go chearfully into a new Years Account, before that of the old is settled. At whatever Rate of Discount you purchase Bills of Exchange remit them. the Advantage is fairly due to your Friend here. By observing these Rules, Your whole Commission may not be so large, as if you were to adopt some new Methods, but they will be large enough and probably increase. I proposed to Mr. Oswald to be your Security if he requir'd it, which he likewise generously declined. I need not say to a Man of your good Sense and Gratitude of Heart, that he is entitled to your best services. . . .

I hope you enter upon and go through the above intended Business with Credit to yourself and Satisfaction to Mr. Oswald and that your Plantation Affairs will be put into, and conducted by such hands as will admit of your Absence a few Months without Loss, and that next Year, you will repay that Gentn. all the Money advanced for you, and Interest thereon, but if it shall so happen, that from any Cause, you are incapable of undertaking the same then Mr. Manigault and my Brother to whom I shall write, and to whom I shall direct this Letter in your Absence will put Mr. Oswalds Ship or Ships, into the hands of Gentlemen in Charles Town, who will do him Justice.[2] I wish they may find a House that will transact the Business on the same plan which Austin and Laurens used to do. Such House [and] our worthy Friend on this Side will be mutually benefited, and that is what he at present desires from you. If you transact the Business as I hope you will, guard against any Embarrassment to Mr. Oswald, in case of your Death, By entring and declaring all the Bonds [illegible] to the full Amount of his Balance to be his absolute Property and your Affairs to rest in the hands of Mr. Manigault and my Brother.[3] . . .

326. Henry Laurens to Gabriel Manigault, 1772.

Westminster 2d March 1772.

per Capt. Wm. Curling Gabriel Manigault Esqr. Charles Town

. . . My worthy Friend Richd. Oswald Esqr. who first recommended Mr. Gervais to me in the Year 1764, lately proposed to make a Trial of his Abilities, in the Sale of one or more of his African Cargoes, in order to give him an Opportunity by Commissions arising from thence, to cancel a Debt for Money which Mr. Oswald had advanced; and if he Mr. Gervais acquits himself tolerably well in this Business, it will be attended with a present benefit of 1000 or 1500 Guineas to him, and may be the Foundation of large future Fortune.

When my worthy Friend first made this proposition to me, tho' I had before spoke very handsomely of Mr. Gervais's Character in general, yet it alarm'd me, with the appearance of being an Engagement, of too much Weight and Importance, for the Experience and Capital of my Friend on your Side, I therefore took the liberty to suggest to Mr. Oswald, that as Messrs. T and R Smith had given him Satisfaction, in the Sale of a Cargo which they made last year, it might be better for all parties, to address his Cargoes of the present Year, to those Gentlemen in such a manner, as would leave it optional to them, to act conjunctly with Mr. Gervais, upon Terms consistent with the Dignity and Honour of Merchants, or to relinquish to him. my Interposition in this Case pleas'd Mr. Oswald, and it was his Intention to have address'd one half of about 400 Negroes in two Cargoes, or the largest of the two Cargoes to those Gentlemen. I happen'd to mention this Circumstance to Mr. John Nutt their correspondent, and as his own Interest was to have been concern'd in it, I did suppose that the Intelligence would have been very acceptable to him, but it fell out quite otherwise, he express'd much Dissatisfaction, and said he would speak to Mr. Oswald himself, to which I could have no reasonable objection, notwithstanding it seem'd to supercede my Interest with that Gentleman and my good Wishes for Messrs. Smith; accordingly, he applied to Mr. Oswald, and some part of his Address I believe disgusted my Friend, who does not love many Words—and induced him to send me a Note signifying his Determination to trust both Cargoes in Mr. Gervais's hands, upon the most generous Terms, without Security or particular Restrictions for Remittances. I beg leave to refer you to a letter which I have wrote to Mr. Gervais on this Subject, which he will lay before you. and now Good Sir! the Favour which I have to ask on his Behalf, is your friendly Advice and such Assistance to him, as you can render, without incommoding yourself, as Mr. Oswald introduced Mr. Gervais's name without the Addition of any other, altho' I knew he would consign his Vessels, to whomsoever I should desire, I would not venture to add the Name of Mr. Warley, nor indeed of my own Brother, lest there be the smallest Appearance of Self Interestedness on my Part; but you will see that I have desired Mr. Gervais to employ him, and to make some proper Consideration for his Trouble. Mr. Oswald has seen what I have wrote on this head; and has express'd great Satisfaction with the whole. . . .

[2] Whether Gervais sold the cargo of the Charlotte we do not know; he advertised that of the Africa on July 2.

[3] This letter was accompanied by one to James Laurens, giving most explicit directions as to the course to be followed in case Gervais was unable or unwilling to undertake the sale of the cargo. He likewise wrote advising Felix Warley to do all in his power to aid Gervais. The Letter-Book also contains a long letter to Gervais, inscribed "not sent", which explains in great detail the reasons why a negro cargo was sent to him. From Laurens's change of mind about sending this letter one may surmise that he thought better of having the detailed circumstances known in Charleston, since the story reflected some discredit on a well-known Charleston house. An abbreviated account of the transaction is to be found in the letter which follows.

John Holman, Island of Delos, Africa

Sir, Your favour of the 6th April last to Mr. Laurens I received with a Bill of Loading for 30 New Negroes per the Ship Africa, Capt. Wallace, Consign'd to him on your Account; but Mr. Laurens being in England His Attornies could not possibly comply with what you requested in your said Letter, therefore they thought it most proper for your Interest as Negroes were in great demand to put those of yours into the hands of John Lewis Gervais, Esquire, Merchant here, to be disposed of for your Account. Mr. Gervais informs me they average upwards of £45 Stg. per head, which is great and will no doubt be satisfactory to you. He intends to send you by this same conveyance an Account Sale of said Negroes together with your Account Current, the Balance of which he will if agreeable to you pay into the hands of Mr. Laurens on your Account at his arrival here, which is expected in about three months. . . .

mission way, since that determination I have had from different Merchants offers of several Guineamen being address'd to me annually provided my Bills for their Cargoes were garanteed by any House in London of which they approv'd. Nothing is wanting to complete those Consignments but a support in England. The mode of disposing of those Slave Cargoes is this, Three Months Credit is given the Purchaser who gives his Bond (with Security if required) payable in that time, which bears 8 pC. Interest from the date until paid, and the Factor Charges a Commission of 10 pC. on the Sale, the Owners are paid for the Proceeds of their Cargoes in Bills of Exchange on London, If the proceeds of a Cargo amount to a considerable Sum (say £4000 Sterlg.) the Bills in payment thereof are divided into four sets, that is to say, the first set for £1000 is drawn at three Months sight, the second set six, third nine, and the fourth at twelve Months. therefore by depositing £1000 in your hands together with the £500 Credit my Father in Law [2] has given me on you will be sufficient to pay my first drafts supposing them to be more than above stated, which perhaps they may, and before the other three sets of Exchange become due I shall have it in my power, by receiving the purchase Money of the Slaves, and otherwise, to remit you in Rice and Indigo or Bills at a short sight their Amount and probably more, but admitting there shoud. not be in your hands Effects of mine sufficient to answer the second and third drafts I will allow you at the rate of 6. pC. Int't for whatever Sum you advance on my account, besides the usual Comn. for honoring my drafts, and for whatever Sum of mine that may be in your hands I shall expect to be allowed 5 pC. Int't which you know is customary. Upon the whole, shoud. this meet with your approbation, you will please by the earliest opportunity to advise Mr. Vanhorne that you will Guarantee or accept such Bills (mentioning to what amount) as I may in future draw on you, for the Proceeds of Guinea Cargoes which will be communicated by him to those Guinea Adventurers with whom he is acquainted, but before Mr. Vanhorne mentions it to them he shall see that £1000 Sterg. is deposited in your hands. Rice is now Sold at £3 and it is generally believd that it will be as low as 45/ before the end of next Month. Freights to Cowes and a Market £3—to London, £2:10 p T. and from the few Shipping in Port and the great Crops there is no doubt of their continuing high during the Season.[3]

. . . Mr. Oswald was withdrawing himself wholly from business, that therefore you could not depend upon a long continuance of African consignments from him. . . . you will receive the Africa again in May next and probably that worthless Wretch Wallace will be continued because they dare not discharge him in Africa.[2] Mr. Oswald is endeavoring to sell out his Interest in Bance Island, but he does not yet speak it publicly therefore it is between ourselves. when his hands are cleared from that engagement he will withdraw wholly from Trade and you will commend his resolution.

. . . Once I was at Messrs. B and C's [3] and was to have met them again by appointment to adjust some of their African engagements with Mr. Barber but the Doctor forbid me going abroad. I therefore, in addition to my sentiments delivered at the former meeting sent them a cautionary hint in a Note, against Warranting Remittances to be made at any fixed Exchange, which to make a proper Impression on them I said might be the Ruin of a Young House. I have for some Months past thought I foresaw the Trade of Carolina falling into difficulties the common consequences of great sudden prosperity. . . .

He [Oswald] has got your Letter of the 25th Decem., which has shewn me the foundation for certain applications by the Resident Partner of Capt. Wallace's Securities to our worthy friend for his African Consignments at two several times which he gave me intimations of. The attemp[t]s were ungenerous and no doubt from our friends conduct he esteems the Attempters as he does their Acts. It would be a matter for Investigation if the prosecution against Wal-

[2] By the same captain Laurens wrote to Manigault: "Mr. Gervais will inform you what has been done by his friends on this side on his behalf. He will find a good establishment provided. The Patrons of the New York House are not too kind in procuring African Consignments upon dangerous Conditions of Remittance." One wonders whether the New York house was that of Levinius Clarkson.

Honord Sir, In conversing with Mr. Ray of this place, relative to Negro Cargoes, I find his relation Mr. Henry Bogert had offered him the Consignment of his part of the Cargoes of two Vessels that are expected here; but as Mr. Ray assures me he intends quitting this place soon, You'll very much oblige me if you will please to wait on the owners of these Vessels, Messrs. Henry Bogert, John Cortlandt and John Reade and offer them my services on terms equal to any given here. You can mention to them what Security I can give. You make no mention to me in what manner you have back'd my proposal to Mr. Neale, As to any doubt those Gentln. may have of my being a Stranger to the Business, I can assure them I have not been idle in attending to the mode of disposing of Negroes and I may venture to say that I have as many friends among the Planters as any Merchant in the place some of whom have already assured me that I shall have the preference when they purchase Negroes, In case I have any for Sale. It is their Interest to encourage As many Mercantile People settling among them as possible and from the very nervous Letters my friends gave me to this place, particularly those I had for the Planters, they seem extremely anxious for my settlement, tho' they appear a little doubtful of it, not having Mrs. Clarkson.

There is a ship lately arriv'd here from Gambia with 318 Slaves which will average £43 Sterg. it's true they are prime Slaves. Shoud. you meet with any new Negroes who have not been Six Months in any of his Majesty's Colonies (if they have been more than that time they are subject to a Duty of £60 on importation here) you may purchase ten or twelve on our joint Account provided you can get them for £50 or £55 york Cury p. head. they must be Boys or Men from the Age of 14 to 24, likely and Stout made. You must procure a Certificate that they have not been in an English Colony Six Months. If the above mention'd Gentlemn. shoud. conclude to address their

I beg you may Embrace the earliest oppty. of Advising me what those Gentn. say on this subject.

[P. S.] Had I Purchas'd 10 or 20 of the Negroes that John Beekman had for sail on my departure for this Place I am Certain I could have cleared 50 pc by them. . . . With respect to the purchase of "40 Young Slaves to be picked out of a Cargo and at a moderate price", upon Mortgage of uncultivated Land in Georgia I am quite certain none of the Owners of such Cargoes, it would give me more than one Civil hearing if I should make the proposition, and if they would condescend to give me any answer these several obstacles (and you Sir are a very good judge of them) would be opposed, first the taking 40 Young Slaves out of a Cargo would be a great Injury to the Sale, and nothing but a fixed tempting high price could induce them to submit to a measure so manifestly destructive to their Interest unless guarded by such consideration. the indefinite term of Moderate price would induce them to think that I was either very Ignorant of business or not in Earnest,

[2] In an undated letter belonging to 1773 Clarkson wrote: "Yesterday I attended a Negro Sale of 175 Gambia Slaves. tho as Indifferent a Cargo As has been Sold this Season they averadged £47 Stg. Such is the Goodness of this Market for Slaves, After a Saile of near 9000, Mention this to Rivington as it may be asserted as a fact." On Mar. 4 Clarkson wrote, probably to Van Horne, asking him to inquire from Benjamin Mason whether F. and E. Malbone were intending to send him the cargo which Mason had promised. A few days later he asked that John Cortland, John Reade, and Henry Bogart be asked what they would take for "Negroes that are Landed Safe and sound (Men, Women and Children) and the Credit they will give . . . the Usual Credit is 3-6-9 and 12 Month before they remit their payments if sold by a Factor. I have since my Last had several Applications from the Principal Planters to know what I would take for a hundred of Negroes Men Women and Children, and I wish I could be Certain that Messrs. Malbone Intended me a Vessel. If not I would draw my Money out" (Mar. 16, 1773, Clarkson to Van Horne). The Francis Malbone here mentioned is in all likelihood the same Malbone of whom William Almy wrote, after the Revolution: "the last time I conversed with him, he was Violently opposed to the abolition of the Slave Trade, and tho of an open frank disposition yet a rash unregarded Man, to conclude I think there must be a wonderful conversion in his mind to fit him for a Delegate in Congress." Moses Brown Papers, Misc., II. 105 (undated).

lastly one of the most Capital objections would be to the Mode of Payment, that of long Credit on American Security, to avoid which they forego the benefit of 8 per Cent Interest and take Security for the Remittance of Bills in each Bottom tho under manifest disadvantages as to Payment, merely to keep the Wheel going round as they term it, by making such Bills often at 12 and 18 Months sight become a Paper Currency passing in their respective Circles by a proper discount for Cash. Hence Sir, you will perceive the almost Insuperable difficulty which I should have to encounter, if you had transmitted descriptions of your Land, sent me Legal Authorities for pledging it and had been explicit and Liberal in your price for Negroes, as well as the utter impossibility to render you any service upon your present unfixed plan. . . .

James Laurens, So Carolina

. . . My Mind Indicates to me from reflecting the State of Affairs on both sides of the Water that this and the next will not be the most prosperous Years for Carolina. I have a foreboding of several troublesome Events. In the first place there will probably be a superabundant Importation of Negroes. Charles Town will be thereby in danger of Contagious Distempers which alone are very dreadful. the Amot. of Imports taking in the Arrears of last Year will far exceed that of Exports, the bad Sale of all our produce on this side, will drive Guarantees and Creditors here to push Debtors on the other, Rise of Exchange, Injurious delays of payment and failures where least expected will follow, if you should have unfavourable Seasons, a Hurricane or there should happen a sudden Declaration of War, our Carolina circumstances will be ten times worse, and at best I perceive that we shall have a considerable Balance against us. To guard against the consequences of Infectious disorders if any such should be Introduced by the Importation of Multitudes of Negroes, nothing can be said but what will occur to your Mind upon the first appearance and you are in a good situation, but in such a Calamity the distress of our neighbors is sensibly felt by ourselves. . . .

337. Henry Laurens to John Knight, 1773.

Westmr. 17th Mar. 1773.

John Knight, Leverpoole

. . . Concerning the African Trade at So. Carolina I am heartily chagrined on that article alone by the delay of my thoughts which I could wish had been Imparted to you a Month ago. I verily believe that Province will be overstocked by the present Years Importation of Negroes. I view the Crops of 1772 according to the fallen prices and stagnation of Sale both of Rice and Indigo to be Mortgaged or nearly so for the last Years debt. The Debt which will be Incurred by the Sale of 8 perhaps 10 Thousand Negroes in 1773 will Amount to much more than the Balance of another large Crop, after the Debt for European, West India and Madeira Importations, is deducted. this state at best promises difficulty to every Guarantee on this side and threatens a rise of Exchange on the other, which will in so far made [make] a deduction on the Nominal Average of Sale. this appears to me to be the true prospect of the present Year admitting the Crops of Rice and Indigo to be equal to those of the last. But if a great drought, a vast glut of Rain, a Violent Hurricane or only the appearance of a Storm of War, should intervene—what will the consequences be then? As to the prices which Negroes may sell for I can say nothing but that the Value will be in proportion to the Number Imported and the demand for them. this Latter may be much abated by the depreciated Value of Rice and Indigo, which will abate that madness which has appeared in some of the Merchants there for purchasing at any rate, some of whom (or perhaps their constituents) I am assured will sink £10,000 by the Article of Indigo alone.

A vast Importation of Negroes into Charles Town especially in the present relaxed State of Government in So Carolina will greatly expose the Capital to the danger of Infectious Distemper—Small Pox or Fever. Circumstances of this kind are very detrimental to the Sale of Negroes. I have been a Witness of the Loss of £500. or £1000. on a Cargo only from a Report of such Dangers. Upon the whole Sir, if I was concerned in the African Trade I would be cautious this Year of sending many Negroes to Carolina, if the demand is considerable in the West Indies and the prices at and upwards of £40, I should esteem a Sale there as the proverb tells us we should estimate a Bird in hand. if my orders were gone forth for Carolina I would meet my friends with Cautionary hints of the danger of the Rise of Exchange and recommendations to Remit Bills speedily while to be had. I press this particularly to you my Dear Friend, because I apprehend the risque of Exchange will in your Adventures be your own. The Houses in Common will take [like] the rest of Mankind in such Circumstances sit down Easy and make tempor[ar]y Paper Money when they Can. they will draw at their stated periods and trust to the approach of each for refunding their Friends on this side, which will Create a vast demand for Bills in the latter part of the Year. Opportunities which may present in the meantime ought by all practicable means to be embraced by Men of foresight. . . .

John Knight Esqr., Leverpoole

Upon Receipt of your very kind favour of the 28th [1] I applied to Messrs. Bourdieu and Chollet who Consented to become surety for the House of Gervais and Chollet for Amount of your African Consignments, but you are not explicit whether you demand full remittances by Bills in each Bottom and are silent on the Periods for payment. it does not appear to me therefore that you mean to insist upon such Returns especially as you refer to, and say you will be Content with transactions equal to those of A and L, who did not remit all Bills in the Bottom. be that as it may, the Gentlemen on this side tho very willing to Enter into Suretyship generally and extremely desirous of cultivating your Friendship do not seem Inclined to accept Bills which may come all in one Remittance lest they should incur too great a Load of Acceptance upon them at one Juncture of Time—their Credit is established upon a firm Basis and they are Wisely tenacious of holding it free even from a Suspicion of being under difficulties, and the subject is of too delicate a Nature to admit the Interposition of my opinion much less of Persuasion or Importunity. . . .

. . . Some Days ago my Friends Messrs. Ross and Mill intimated to me a dissatisfaction with their Correspondents in Charles Town and their intention to Change, that they had an Opening for any Friend of mine. upon discovering that they were not only disingaged but determined to apply to Mr. Nutt in case of any refusal, I could not do less than recommend your House, and you will in consequence thereof Receive the Peggy, Capt. Mill from the Gold Coast with a large Cargo of Negroes, about 400, for which Messrs. Bourdieu and Chollet are Guarantee, the Remittance for the Balance are to be in Bills at 3-6-9 and 12 Months sight—by a Letter which R. and M. have this minute sent me, because our Other friend in Lime Street made a point of my adjusting that part. I was prodigiously surprised at the Recpt. of a Letter the 20 Ulto. from my Old and good friend John Knight Esq., of Leverpoole, in which he inclos'd a Letter for [338] [1]On the 25th Laurens had written to Knight: "My friend Mr. Oswald first Introduced Mr. Gervais to me and by my recommendation he consigned him 2 African Cargoes last Year and two more the present Year."

Capt. Wotherspoon of his African Ship Nanny, desiring me to transmit it to my Friend in Charles Town to whom the Capt. would have Orders to deliver his Cargo, he said Messrs. Head and Giball had dissolved their Copartnership and that he would not consign to either of them separately, but I was not more surprised at the Information then affected and concerned on behalf of my Friend Sir Edmund and also of his partner. I therefore ca[ex]postulated with my Friend in Leverpoole, hoping to reconcile him, at least to a Conditional Consignment to one or both of those Gentlemen but he seemed Galled by something or other and was inflexible, therefore I was in some degree necessitated to recommend you, which when I was about it, I did in the warmest terms, and perfectly consistent with Truth.[1]

You will find inclosed the Letter above mentioned for Capt. Wotherspoon who will deliver his Cargo to Garvais and Chollet. Nothing rejoices me more than doing service to my Friends. but I must confess there is some alloy to my satisfaction when I perceive as in the present Case that other Friends are suffering any kind of disappointment. I wish my Friend Head had put it in my power to serve him, by communicating the change of his Circumstances to me, but of late for what reason I know not he has wholly withdrawn his correspondence, tho I have since my arrival in England not only spoke in his favour when applied to, but have offered to be his surety for an African Cargo or more. but to return—Mr. Knight has insisted upon my making terms for the Nanny on one hand, and the Gentlemen in Lime Street on the other Hand are wisely Cautious of engaging too largely in the acceptance of Bills, here I am in a Dilemma. there are but three other men in England from whom I would at this time have accepted a Cargo of Negroes for you, and truly I must say that if this application had not been made in manner aforesaid to me I should not have sought for them, but such Correspondents as Ross and Mill and Mr. Knight are Valuable and ought not to be treated slightly—to have their business and their Good Will is an establishment to a House. You will have much difficulty to strive with in order to keep your Friends here from being in a Very heavy advance, but you must strive with ardour and diligence, and you will succeed, if your Friends perceive you helping yourselves they will help you out in some unavoidable deficiencies; I would if I was on the spot and will do all that I can on this side. As Mr. Knights Cargo will be from Bonny not so saleable to good Purchasers nor for Cash as the Gold Coast Cargoes I shall expect that he will be content with Bills, at 6-9 and 12 Months sight which I hope will put you to no difficulty to accomplish, let you[r] Endeavours be to make a good and faithful Sale for the benefit of your Constituents but at the same time you must have a Proper regard for your own and the security of your Guarantee, make the Best Sale you can to good Men, take Collatiral Security from every person whose Circumstances are doubtful, Collect as much Cash as Possible and remit to Messrs. Bourdieu and Chollet in such a Manner as to keep them from being in advance, leave no stone unturn'd for that purpose, be continually on the Watch for Bills of Exchange and rather Borrow Money upon Interest to pay for them than be deficient. the Exchange for Remittances must be ascertained at the Current Course when each Sale is made and the Sooner you Remit, the less risque you will run from a variation. . . .

Gentlemen. I beg leave to refer you to what I have already written on African affairs, to your Mr. J L G, whose letter I closed too Soon and omitted to put into it, one which you will find under this cover from my worthy and Dear friend Jno. Knight Esqr. of Leverpoole [1] for Capt. Wotherspoon of the Ship Nanny, which opened this opportunity for addressing myself to you. I need not repeat that Mr. Knight is a Gentleman of the first character as a Citizen and a Merchant, he is just and very Liberal and deserves particular attention from all his friends, and I am persuaded that in every Instance of your correspondence with him you will find an Inclination from Gratitude to do rather more for him than you may be Strictly obliged to do by Contract. I speak from an experience of upwards of 24 Years acquaintance.

I am not sure what will be the final adjustment for Remitting the Net Proceed of the Nannys Cargo but probably in Bills at Six, eight, and twelve Months Sight and as Much better as you can make them consi[s]tent with your own safety and a grateful attachment to the Interest of your friend.

Excuse my Freedom in recommending to you to Make good Sales tho I would by no means encourage you to give Credit to every Man who may offer to deal with you merely for the Sake of a high price and a flaunting Average, which must end in the prejudice of your Constituents and your own Ruin, yet on the other hand if you consult only your own Safety by Selling to Monied Men who are always careful to obtain full abatement for Cash, you will depreciate your prices to such a degree as you will Injure your friends, the Owners of Cargoes consigned to you, hurt those who have recommended you, and greatly undervalue your own Credit and Reputation. . . .

Although there are now no less than Twelve Cargoes of Negroes for Sale here (all but two arrived since our last) yet the Number on board does not exceed 1900; most of the vessels having come off the Coast with less than Half the Quantity of Slaves they were sent to purchase. The greatest Quantity we find imported in any one Year, was 7184 in 1765, which is 4457 less than have arrived the present Year:[2] the next greatest Number imported in a Year, were 4865 in 1772, 4612 in 1769, and 3740 in 1760. The whole Quantity of Slaves imported from the 1st of January 1753, to the 1st of January 1773, is 43,965.

June 7, 1773.

Nothing could have happened more injurious to the British Merchants concerned in the Slave Trade, than the recent Stop put to the granting of Lands, at the same Time that the First Cutting of Indico is lost: But for these Events, the Cargoes of Negroes now here (tho' many have arrived almost together)[3] would have been sold at considerably higher Prices than they are now likely to be.

June 14, 1773.

Even now the Number of Negro Slaves imported the present Year, falls short 3066 of what were imported in the Year 1765 and, although not less than 3514 have arrived here since the 1st of May, the Sales have been well kept up, and there are not many on Hand, besides the three Cargoes which are to be exposed for Sale on the 15th, 17th, 23d Instant.

September 20, 1773.

The Number of Slaves imported here, since the First Day of November last, now amounts to 7507—6768 of them in 39 Guineymen, directly from the Coast of Africa. The Ship Hawke, Captain Ralph, of Liverpoole, took a Pilot on Board last Wednesday, off the Bar, but has not yet got in: This Ship will make the 40th, and is said to have upwards of Three Hundred Negroes on Board.

September 27, 1773.

On Wednesday arrived here the Hawke, from Africa, with about 250 Slaves, consigned to Messrs Robert, John and James Smyth; the Nancy with about 120 more; to Messrs. Edwards, Fisher, and Company; and on Saturday the King George, with about 160, to Miles Brewton, Esqr. These Arrivals have increased the Number of Guineymen to 42, and the Number of Negroes imported to about 8050.

[344] [1] In a letter to Richard Oswald, also written on Dec. 2, Laurens refers to his tract of 13,000 acres at Long Canes, in what was then the Carolina frontier region. Half of this he had given to Gervais for his services in surveying it, half he now pressed on Oswald, suggesting that he stock it with domestic slaves from the Bance Island factory, from which Oswald was at this time withdrawing. Oswald at first accepted the suggestion and careful instructions were sent to Gervais for settling the negroes upon this tract of land and providing for their housing and food, but further consideration led him to alter his plans and consign them to East Florida. Letters of Apr. 9 and May 18, not here printed, deal with this affair.

Fifty, but Suche a Number taken from a good Cargo would leave a pernicious blemish upon the Remainder, therefore I have in contemplation to make a purchase of a whole Cargo of One Hundred or twenty more or less—from Gambia or the Gold Coast—to be delivered to my order in Charles Town at a certain price in Sterling Money per head—free from Duty and Commission.

The first part of the payment, to be by Loading the Vessel according to Order and paying the Captains Coast Commission and Ships disbursements Exchag. at 700 per Cent—no Commission to be charged on either—the remaining Sum to be paid by Bills in London in equal thirds at Three, Six, and twelve Months Sight, to be delivered to the Master of you[r] Vessel or transmitted to you when the Vessel is cleared out for Sailing. The Cargo to be assorted about 50 Men, 40 Women and 20 Boys and Girls from 4 feet to [blank] feet high.

Be so obliging Dear Sir to Signify if an engagement of this nature is worth your attention; if it is, we may descend to particulars, respecting the time of delivery, number of privilege Slaves, certain provision if any to Spare at delivering the Negroes, and exceptions in case the Cargo Should prove unhealthy or of improper Sorts. probably when your answer comes I may be out of London but it will Soon overtake me wherever I am and I Shall give the needful reply without delay.

[2] "A Correspondent says, 'he is sorry to see Guineymen permitted, at a season when no bad Weather is apprehended, to come up from Rebellion Road, before they have there performed the Quarantine required by Law; by which he apprehends the Inhabitants of the Town may be exposed to some terrible Calamity worse than the Rage to buy Negroes'" (S. C. Gazette, May 16, 1774). This suggests that there may have been vessels discharging cargoes in Charleston between Mar. 22 and June 18, 1774, even though none is recorded. Further evidence of this is to be found in the fact that on May 4 Levinius Clarkson wrote to Van Horne: "Times never known to be so dull as at Present. Not a Ship in Port to Load. I am Informed a Sloop is Cutt off on the Coast of Guinea belonging to New York. There is a Guineaman Just arrivd, when she comes up I shall make Enquiries." Levinius Clarkson Letters.

[3] During the summer two slavers bound for Georgia put into Charleston "in distress", the Charlotte with 140 slaves, and the Friends, William Ross. S. C. Gazette, June 13, July 18, 1774.

[4] That these were not the last arrivals of the year may be surmised from a later note in the Gazette: "The Ship Two Brothers, Capt. Jones, with Slaves, consigned to Messrs. Andrew and George Lord here, was likewise disabled in the above-mentioned Gale, and is put into Georgia, whence the Slaves are sent for." S. C. Gazette, Nov. 21, 1774.

. . . believe me according to present appleasures [appearances] you will be better off, if you receive only two African Consignments than you would be if you had more.

It Seems to me now as if all parties concluded that your Connexion or intended Connexion with Mr. J Chollet was Barred. I meet Mr. Bourdieu but he never Speaks of the Subject, and I would advise you to trouble your Self no more about it. you are not undeserving my good opinion and you are intitled to it and I told Mr. Herries two days ago that I would be your Security for Ten Thousand pounds if Mr. Oswald Shall require it, and if I did not think it would be injurious to your Interest I would Secure you the Consignment of Several Cargoes of Negroes the present Summer. I am pressed by Some friends on this Side to do it, but for your own Sake I dare not go a Ship further at present. look out for a good Partner, you deserve a good one, and I can make a connexion with you Merit the attention of Some of the best in Charles Town. I will do a great deal to Serve you but Entering into the African Trade is so repugnant to my disposition and my plan for future Life that it Seems as if nothing but dire necessity could drive me to it.

. . . Mr. Oswald's continued absence from Town has hindered me from writing further on African Consignments. You will have his Brigt. the Amelia again, and Mr. Knight expects every hour to hear of your having Sold the Livily's Cargo,[1] for payment of which I am Surety and I fancy that by a late draught upon me under the name of a Loan he is beginning to Collect part of it betimes. these vessels if you get no more in 1774 will make the pot Boil and the Contracted Circle in my opinion will be most beneficial in these precarious times. . . .

Ha! I congratulate you on the arrival of the Molly which I learn by the Gazette of 21st January. we had given her up for lost. I hope you will make a good Sale and quick remittances now you will have Negroes enough for one year. . . .

[347] [1] The Gazette does not record the sale of a cargo from the Amelia, though Laurens writes as though Gervais had already received and sold a consignment by that vessel. It will be seen from the next letter that the Lively was not sent to Charleston.

I don't like the Complexion of the times, there will be trouble and Confusion in America—Carolina will partake of the Evil. if I was an Owner of African Vessels on this Side I would not trust a Cargo there; if a Merchant there, I would not wish to receive a Cargo. Your Guarantees on this Side are Rich in paper. Should there be a Sudden Check to Correspondence, the bottoms, of Some will appear to be but paper. if I might venture to give my opinion to my Dear friend Mr. Knight, it would be to draw in, rather than extend debts in the present State of affairs. . . .

October 20, 1774.

We will neither import nor purchase, any slave imported after the first day of December next; after which time, we will wholly discontinue the slave trade, and will neither be concerned in it ourselves, nor will we hire our vessels, nor sell our commodities or manufactures to those who are concerned in it.[2]

352. News Items relating to Slave Trade, 1775.[1]

March 6, 1775.

The same Evening [Saturday] arrived, in the Rebellion-Road, the Ship Katherine, of Bristol, Capt. Fraser, with 300 Slaves from Angola, to the Address of Mr. John Neufville, (the worthy Merchant who owns, and to whom the Cargo of the Ship Charming Sally abovementioned was consigned): which, as soon as she can be supplied with Provisions and Water for another Voyage, (having Provisions for only 4 Days when she came in) is to proceed for the West-Indies, with the Whole of her Cargo.

[351] [1] Journals of the Continental Congress, I. 77. The South Carolina merchants had in a meeting preliminary to the general meeting of July 6 resolved not to accede to any non-importation and non-exportation agreement. In the resolutions entered into July 6, 1774, there was no mention of non-importation. At this meeting however those candidates for delegates to the Philadelphia meeting who were supported by the merchants were defeated. The opposition group believed that the successful delegates were committed to non-importation, should that be the desire of the congress. The general committee appointed by South Carolina to act with the other colonies contained among its fifteen merchants Miles Brewton, Thomas Shirley, John Neufville, Roger Smith, William Savage, and David Deas, all of whom had traded in slaves (Am. Arch., fourth ser., I. 525-526, 531-533). On Aug. 2 the Commons House of Assembly in South Carolina was acquainted with the fact that during the recess of the house, by a general meeting of the inhabitants July 6 and 8, Henry Middleton, John Rutledge, Thomas Lynch, Christopher Gadsden, and Edward Rutledge had been appointed deputies to a congress to meet in Philadelphia in September (Journals, I. 23-24; Drayton, Memoirs, I. 128-131). McCrady says that the merchants continued to oppose non-importation until August (Royal Government, p. 411). On July 8 Clarkson wrote to Van Horne: "The Province have been Considering of Proper Measures to relieve their Neighboring Province Boston . . . have las[t] Night Come to a determination to send 5 Gentlemen to Meet a Congress at Philadelphia on Eleven with full Power to [act] as they think most Conducive for the Interest of the Colonys and this Province."

[2] On Jan. 3, 1775, Laurens wrote to Ross and Mill of London: "You have long Since been informed of the proceedings of the American Congress and that a total prohibition to the Importation of Slaves is implied in one of their Resolves." A Liverpool petition to the House of Commons refers to the trade to Africa as threatened with ruin if some remedy is not found (Am. Arch., first ser., I. 1531). One of the effects in Carolina may be surmised from a suggestion of Clarkson to Van Horne on Jan. 24, that the period of non-importation of negroes would be a good time in which to buy a plantation. On Sept. 20, 1776, the resolution of the Continental Congress was read in the Carolina assembly: "Resolved that no Slaves be imported into any of the Thirteen United Colonies." Journal of the General Assembly of South Carolina, Sept. 17, 1776-Oct. 20, 1776 (ed. Salley, 1909), p. 22; E. C. Burnett, Letters, I. 415n.

Charleston, S. C., 14th August, 1776.

. . . My negroes there [on Laurens's Georgia plantations, which he had just visited], all to a man, are strongly attached to me—so are all of mine in this country. . . . These negroes were first enslaved by the English; acts of parliament have established the slave trade in favour of the home-residing English, and almost totally prohibited the Americans from reaping any share of it. Men of war, forts, castles, governors, companies and committees are employed and authorized by the English parliament to protect, regulate, and extend the slave trade. Negroes are brought by Englishmen and sold as slaves to Americans. Bristol, Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, etc., live upon the slave trade. The British parliament now employ their men-of-war to steal those negroes from the Americans to whom they had sold them, pretending to set the poor wretches free, but basely trepan and sell them into tenfold worse slavery in the West Indies, where probably they will become the property of Englishmen again, and of some who sit in parliament.[2] . . .

Mr. Oswald replied he had not heard from Mr. Gervais since the Year 1775. it would have been kind said he if in the course of so many Years he had embraced some opportunity and certainly many have offered for writing me only a Line and saying, "I am alive, I hope you are alive". I could say nothing in excuse for your neglect and thinking my friend determined against enlarging his Account with you, I named Mr. John Owen and urged Arguments in his favor warranted by experience and truth. Mr. Oswald paused, then said, it shall be so, I'll send the Consignment to him; soon after, he added—but as my former Consignments to Mr. Gervais were made on your Account I don't wish to affront him, suppose I were to join them. I was extremely well pleased to hear this and therefore closed with the proposition, you will accordingly be addressed in conjunction with Mr. Owen by our worthy old friend.[1] . . .

Mr. Bloy applied to me to recommend some proper person in Charles Town to whom he might consign cargoes of Negroes. after assuring him of my hearty dissent to further importations of slaves in any of the United States of America and of my hopes that the Trade would be prohibited in South Carolina,[1] I gave him the names of several of my old acquaintance, leaving a choice to himself after conversing with them. your name is in the list and Mr. Bloy will call upon you. Should the African Trade be encouraged in our Country no particular censure can fall upon you for participating.

[354] [1] Oswald changed his plans for these negroes not long after this letter was written (see post, no. 356). To this letter and also to those from Laurens of Aug. 16 and 26 and Sept. 9 Gervais replied on Dec. 16: "I flatter myself my Letter to our worthy Friend Mr. Oswald the same Month will lessen his displeasure. . . . permit me My Dear Sir to thank you for mentioning my name to him again respecting his East Florida negroes. I had no right to expect he would be inclined to enlarge his accounts with me before the old ones are settled. Therefore I am very well contented that he has been pleased to make it a joint Concern with Mr. Owen." The letter ends with an enumeration of the debts owed to him which his debtors cannot pay, partly because of the action of the British in removing slaves from South Carolina. N. Y. Hist. Soc., Letters of John Lewis Gervais to Henry Laurens.

[355] [1] A bill introduced into the Carolina house in February, forbidding negro importations, had failed to pass. Instead, a law was enacted placing a duty of £3 per head on African negroes over four feet in height, 30 s. on those under that, and £20 on those from places other than Africa. Cooper, IV. 577; Journals of the House, 1783, pp. 170, 183, 240.

Should either of my plantations, Broughton Island, or New hope on the Altamaha, or Wright's Savanna on the North Side of Savanna River be as fit for the purpose of our friend as any other which may present to your View, it will afford me Satisfaction that you should adopt one of mine because I derive no Rent except barely so much as will pay the public Tax nor even so much as an Exemption from Taxes unless you shall be fully persuaded that the Bargain will be beneficial to Mr. Oswald.[1] . . .

[356] [1] Similar letters were sent to Gervais and to John Owen. To the latter Laurens added: "you are to impute [Oswald's plan] wholly to his humane feelings, his wishes to keep the families together and Reluctance to separate them, however the Scheme may militate against his Interest."

[357] [1] The information to be derived from the advertisements in the Gazette, is much more fragmentary than that for the period preceding the Revolution. The character of the sales had apparently changed somewhat, and it seems no longer to be expected that a single sale will dispose of the cargo. The clause, "The sale to continue every fair day (Sundays excepted) until all be sold", becomes a common one. Drayton, in View of South Carolina (1802), p. 167, gives the importation from Africa and the West Indies in 1783 as 1003, that from St. Augustine as 167.

[358] [1] Most of these advertisements appear a number of times, but only the date of the Gazette in which one first appears is given. Drayton (View of S. C., p. 167) gives the importation from Africa and the West Indies as 4020, that from St. Augustine as 1372.

place they were picked out of a large cargo that had just arrived from Africa. The conditions of the sale are one half Cash, and the other moiety in three months, on bond with approved security. LEWIS MCPHERSON."

Conditions of Sale Ready Money or Produce. GEORGE GARNER."

[4] "Negroes for Sale. On Monday the 17th of May instant, Will be exposed to Sale at Eveleigh's Wharf on board the Ship Two Brothers, Jacob Swift Commander, A Cargo of prime healthy, stout Slaves, from the Windward Coast of Africa. They are choice slaves, in good order, and fit for immediate service. Conditions of sale, Ready Money, Lumber of all species, Indigo and Rice." The advertisement for this cargo was copied in a London journal, with this introduction: "What must be the feelings of a Philosopher on reading the following advertisement which is copied verbatim from the South-Carolina Gazette?" The London item found its way back to South Carolina and appeared in the Gazette of Sept. 13.

[5] "At our Auction-Room, Tuesday, 29th of June, Will be sold, precisely at 12 o'Clock, 25 prime New Negroes. Conditions of sale will be made known on the day." These are probably the residuum of some early cargo taken over for sale by Cudworth and Waller.

[6] Negroes at this time must have been disposed of with difficulty for as late as Mar. 10, 1785, the Gazette was advertising: "Gold Coast Negroes. On Thursday, the 17th of March instant, Will be exposed to Public Sale, Near the Exchange, (If not before disposed of by Private Contract) The remainder of the Cargo of Negroes imported in the ship Success, Captain John Conner, consisting chiefly of likely young boys and girls in good health, and having been through the winter, may be considered in some degree seasoned to the climate. The Conditions of the sale will be credit to the first of January 1786, on giving bond with approved security where required—the Negroes not to be delivered till the terms are complied with. [359] [1] The majority of the notices of sale contain the clause, "continued daily until the whole are sold", and appear in the Gazette for four or five weeks. Many of them refer to the familiarity of the negroes with rice planting.

[2] "Ten prime healthy privilege Slaves, just arrived."

[3] "To approved Purchasers . . . great consideration for immediate payment in rice or other produce, or in money." Later the names "Smiths, Desaussure and Darrell" were added to this notice.

[4] These are advertised as "New Negroes" but there is no indication of their origin.

[5] "The Negroes from this part of the coast of Africa are well acquainted with the cultivation of rice and are naturally industrious."

[6] "Gold Coast Negroes. Just arrived in the Brig Gambia, Captain Robert Champlin, directly from Anamaboo, And to be sold, On Thursday, the 23d inst. A Cargo of very healthy prime young Negroes, the greatest part of them are fit to be put into the field immediately.

She is a stout British built vessel, burthen about 100 tons, exceeding well found, sails fast, and is well calculated for the African or any other trade, and may be sent to sea at a small expence. For further particulars inquire of the Master on board, at Roper's wharf. ROBERT NORRIS and Co." S. C. Gazette, Aug. 18, 1785.

[8] On July 11 the original notice of this sale was amplified: "Just arrived in the Danish Ship General Heath, Captain Koperholt, And to be Sold, On Friday, the 15th Instant, On board the vessel at Prioleau's wharf, A Choice Cargo of Windward and Gold Coast Negroes, Who have been accustomed to the planting of rice. The appearance of the negroes will sufficiently confute a report which has been circulated of their being much infected with the scurvey. The sale to continue from day to day until the whole are disposed of. The conditions will be as moderate as possible and be made known on the day of sale, by applying to A. PLEYM."

[10] "Inoculated for small pox and recovered without the loss of one." The Macleod advertising this cargo is probably the defendant in a suit brought in 1797 for failure to deliver 38 new negroes. He pleaded that the legislature had prohibited the importation of negroes but the court held that the contract was not thereby rescinded. Catterall, Judicial Cases, II. 279.

[11] This notice and the one of July 23 are of public auctions, in the one case of "New Negroes", in the other of "Gambia Men". On Nov. 18 Laurence Campbell was again advertising new negroes.

[12] "Picked from a cargo of 500."

[13] "160 Men and Men Boys, 30 Boys and Girls, 70 Women." The conditions for this sale were one-third payable in January, for the remainder, credit until Jan. 1, 1787, with interest.

[14] These negroes were advertised as accustomed to the planting of both rice and corn.

[15] "A few prime Gold Coast Negroes picked from a large cargo there."

361. Nathaniel Russell to Joseph and Joshua Grafton, 1785.[1]

Charleston, 2d July 1785.

In my last of the 13th Ulto. I informed you of the arrival of Captn. Champlin, and that I had undertaken to sell his Cargo, the [360] [1] Essex Institute, MSS., Slave Trade in Salem. For further knowledge of the Graftons and of Capt. Robert Champlin see this work, vol. III., index. Among these papers are two sheets of accounts of trade at Vintan on the Gambia River, carried on by Capt. Geo. Nelson of the brig Anthony between Dec. 17, 1781, and Apr. 10, 1782. There is no evidence as to the owner of the brig, but the other papers in this envelop evidently relate to the business of the Graftons and this may also be one of their ventures.

[2] A copy of Captain Champlin's instructions, signed by the captain but unsigned by the owners, dated Oct. 19, 1784, is to be found among these papers. The captain was to have eight privilege slaves, he was to remember that his number of men was large (but ten are listed), and was to keep his owners informed of his whereabouts for the sake of the insurers. A printed wage agreement for the "Briganteen Gamby, bound from Salem to Africa", thence to Charleston, S. C., and back to Salem, contains the names of the mariners but not the amounts of the wages. The bill of lading contains 15395¼ gallons of New England rum and one cask of tobacco. Slave Trade in Salem.

sales of which are now enclosed, wth proceeds being £5987. 1, which are the greatest sales ever made in this State or perhaps any where else, They were remarkably healthy and in general very good slaves. The Cargo consisted of an hundred, including an old woman and her grandchild abt. 20 months old, both, not worth half a prime slave. I have taken care to sell them into the very safe hands and if no unforseen accident happens, I do not think that you will loose a shilling by bad debts. I shall enclose you a list of bonds—most of them are pay'b in Jany. '86 and I flatter myself that I shall be able to receive at least one half the amt in the course of the next [illegible] that is by the 1st Jan. Every thing will depend on a good season. At present the prospect is flattering. The reason of my selling the last 42 at so great price was, that Melson, who bot them had Mr Stith [?] paper for which he wanted Cash, but it was for so large an amount, that he could not obtain the money from any one person. He was therefore under the necessity of buying Negroes, which he sold at a very great loss; The bond is as good as any that I have.

I have charged you £254. 16. 9 for Captn. Champlain's Coast Comn., being 4 on 104. Have credited your acct wth the am't of your order on Mr. Charles Hamilton £46. 0. 4. Curry equal to £35. 16. 4 stg. you have a list of bonds £5610. 17. 7. the Brigt. Gambia's disbursments £118. 14. 8 a Bill on S. A. Otis Esqr. 100 Dollars and Captn. Champlains receipt for £7. 18. 8 being the balance of 3 Negroes sold for Cash. Since I closed the sales 4 large ships have arrived with a great number of negroes [2] and many more daily expected, which must lower the prices and lengthen the credit greatly.

It is not in my power to sell any more of the negroes for Cash unless at very low prices.

You may be assured that I consulted your Interest in the whole of the business and I make no doubt but my conduct will.[3] . . .

362. Debate on the Importation of Negroes, 1785.[1]

September 27, 1785.

In the Committee sitting to consider the State of the Republic, Mr. Ralph Izard moved

That a report be made to the house, that it was the opinion of this

[2] This suggests that the list for 1785 is far from complete.

[3] The remainder of the letter is missing.

[362] [1] Charleston Evening Gazette, Sept. 28, 1785. "A short sketch of the debate, Sept. 27, in the Committee of Enquiry into the state of the Republic, on a motion that a report should be made to the house, that a bill be brought in to prohibit the importation of negroes into this state for three years". On Mar. 4 John Lewis Gervais wrote to Laurens: "A Bill was brought in the house of Representatives to prevent the importation of negroes and yesterday after a long debate it was rejected 65 to 58 but the Matter is not given up—another Bill will be brought in at the expiration of six days." N. Y. Hist. Soc., Letters of Gervais to Laurens.

committee, a bill ought to be brought in for preventing the importation of negroes into this state for the term of three years

The Honourable Gentleman spoke a few words in favour of his motion, which being read, Mr. Maurice Simons, rose to second it. This he said he would do with the most perfect goodwill, and also wished to add an amendment, that such high duties should be laid on articles of luxury, as would amount to prohibition. . . .

Mr. Bee thought a bill prohibiting the importation of slaves, would throw the ballance of trade against us for two years, without receiving from the measure such capital advantages as were expected. . . .

Mr. Izard thanked the hon. member for his support with regard to the motion, but could not by any means admit of the addition proposed, on the contrary, he would vote in the house against the importation of Negroes, for the space of three years, but when the other point came to be discussed he should vote the other way. . . .

Mr. J. Rutledge was against the proposed measure of restricting the importation of Negroes for any given time into this state; he had been of opinion for many years, that Negroes were an increase of our wealth; what number of slaves had been imported since the peace? not above 7000, take these on an average at 50£ a piece, would amount in the whole to about 400,000£ and surely that was not a sum sufficient to have occasioned the present national calamities; was the above sum in any proportion to the immense quantities of dry goods which had been imported, certainly not, it was there the evil originated, and it was there a speedy remedy was necessary; However, as the business to which the House was now confined was what must originate in this committee, and as at present there was nothing before the house, he should vote for the motion, although when the report was made he should be at full liberty to oppose it in the house, if he were so inclined, the report was then read and agreed on.[2] . . .

Mr. Bee . . . thought the manner in which negroes had been lately imported threw the ballance of trade greatly against us, and therefore was the one great cause of our present calamities. He understood that last year we imported negroes to the value of 300,000 £, our exports for that period amounted to 400,000 £ now we had also imported in this time a very extensive quantity of goods, which we had left only 100,000 £ to pay for with. Was this wise, was [2] On Sept. 28 Judge Pendleton reported to the house that the committee on the state of the republic recommended non-importation of negroes for three years. On Sept. 30 Chancellor Matthews presented a plan for prohibiting importation for four years (Charleston Evening Gazette, Sept. 28, 30). The following debate took place in the committee of the whole to consider the bill for non-importation of negroes for three years. Ralph Izard moved the discussion of the question. Ibid., Oct. 1, 1785.

it politic? undoubtedly not. There were articles of foreign production that were indispensibly necessary for us to procure, especially whilst there appeared so great a backwardness amongst the people for establishing manufactories, such as those of the coarser kind, which we must have, but if we went on and imported luxuries, it was unreasonable to suppose we should ever be out of debt. The great quantity of negroes now pouring in upon us, occasions every planter to wish an increase of his stock, the sight of a negroe yard was to[o] great a temptation for a planter to withstand, he could not leave it without purchasing; in short, there seemed to be a rage for negroes, without any consideration how they were to be paid for. He did not object to this increase of slaves when we were out of debt; let that happy period arrive, wait with patience until we can clear ourselves, and then it would be time enough to permit importation. As it would be unreasonable to turn away those vessels that were already on their way for this state, if the proposition should be agreed to by the Committee, he wished the time of its taking place might be fixed for the 1st of January next. . . .

Judge Pendleton: . . . We wanted a large supply of negroes, and superfluities, when we could not devise means to pay for those we were already in possession of. . . . In a debate last year upon this subject, it had been said, and he did not doubt but the argument would be used this day, that negroes should be considered as the riches of a country, but this was an opinion he could by no means assent to. They might indeed constitute the strength of it, but its riches should be estimated by the number of its white inhabitants, for it was upon them that our commerce, our agriculture, and manufacture depended. . . .

General Pinckney went extensively into the question. He made a clear enumeration of the negroes imported, and their value on an average. He thought the strength of this country constituted its riches; that this sort of strength once saved this city, in the war, was the case when Prevost over-ran the country: 'twas true he only looked at us and went away, but what was this owing to—why to the number of bastions hastily thrown up, a service performed entirely by the negroe pioneers. This country was not capable of being cultivated by white men; as appeared on the attempt made in Georgia, during General Oglethorp's administration, but entirely failed, and ended in the white people emigrating from that state into this, where they could have negroes to cultivate their lands. Such part of this country was unhealthy as had not yet been cleared, so that the useful labours of negroes contributed to promote salubrity in the air. Much had been said about our exports being inferior to our imports, but his measure tended to diminish the exports still more, and of course prevents a great deal of specie from being brought into the state. Negroes were to this country what raw materials were to another country, they increased the staple commodity, a point well worth gentlemen's attention, as was also the large duty paid to the state for negroes imported; being about 3 £ per head. Who was it that wanted negroes? why those brave men that had suffered by the war; they had the general misfortune to find, on being released from captivity, there plantations plundered, and every negroe swept away. Was it not well understood, that no planter could cultivate his land without slaves? and yet is he not oblidged to pay his land tax? Is it not a moral impossibility for any planter to pay that or any other tax when by passing of this proposition they deprive of the means! Another observation of material consequence was, that to shut our ports against the importation of negroes, the whole of our trade would center in Georgia and North Carolina; they would keep their ports open while ours were shut; and so drain us of all our produce—was this the intention of gentlemen? surely not! and yet this would be the consequence if the committee agreed with the proposition. He concluded his speech with a declaration that he would vote against the proposition.

Mr. E. Rutledge made an animated speech for the proposition.

General Pinckney said a paper had been put into his hands, which stated, that in 1783, negroes sold, on an average at 90 £ a head, how they had fallen in price every one knew; this was an evident demonstration of the advantages arising from importation.

Mr. Izard observed that the purchasers of negroes at 90 £ a head had them on a credit, which was a benefit, but the late mode of purchasing was, for planters to give bonds to make speedy payments for their negroes in England with produce.

Mr. Smith wished to know what was become of a memorial, signed by six hundred names, and which had in a great measure occasioned there being convened at this present time: one part of that memorial attributed the poverty in which the country had been involved, to take its source from the importation of negroes, and prayed a check might be given to this increasing calamity. He thought many of the arguments of former speakers applied to our situation in former times, rather than the situation of the country at present. It [had] been already agreed upon by the committee, that it would be improper to emit paper money, and yet should they disagree to the proposition, the introducing more negroes would drive us headlong into that very measure, for paper money must be made to pay for them. Something had been urged as to the policy of increasing the quantity of our negroes, that was a point he would not enter into argument upon at present, he could not help observing, that the previous consideration ought to be how we could pay for them, this was a duty incumbent upon us to do, if we wished to prove to the world, as he was satisfied we always should do, that we preferred honesty to policy. The legislature were bound in duty to restrain an exuberence in any that had a tendency towards injuring the public interest: food was absolutely necessary for the existence of a man, but was it any reason, that because he has a craving appetite that he shall eat until he burst, An observation had been made that the people had given into an excess of luxury; he thought the imputation was only justly applicable in part, to Charleston, for he knew people in the country lived in a very moderate manner. An honorable friend of his had said, that to stop the importation of negroes would greatly enhance the value of those in the state; he did not coincide with this idea—he rather thought people would look round to their superflous negroes, at present sunk in indolence, and send them to work. He supposed there were at present in Charleston not fewer than 10,000 negroes, of this over-grown number he did not doubt but 7000 could well be spared, if the proposition is agreed to, those families that have about their houses perhaps 25 negroes, will find out that five are sufficient, and send the rest to their plantations. On the whole he was entirely for the proposition, and should vote accordingly; not that he was very anxious about its fate, because he was satisfied that the evil every day would cure itself more and more, the improvident manner in which we contracted debts hastened the loss of credit, and we should cease to purchase, when merchants no longer could be found to trust us.

When the chairman mentioned the first of January, as the time for the act to take place, Commodore Gillon, said if the committee were of opinion to stop the importation of negroes, they ought to do it immediately; before the first of January 10,000 negroes might be brought here from the West Indies.

The question being called for, it was put, and the committee divided, when there appeared to be,

[3] On Oct. 3 Mr. M. Simons requested that since four more members had arrived the matter be again discussed in the committee of the whole, and the debate was therefore resumed Oct. 5, on a motion of Mr. E. Rutledge against the importation of negroes. Charleston Evening Gazette, Oct. 18, 1785.

negroes during the term of three years. He said although on a former day the question which he now meant to submit for consideration had been discussed much at large, and received a negative, yet from a review of the arguments made use of at that time, and a recollection of the small majority of numbers that defeated the proposition proposed by his honorable and learned friend he was induced still to persevere, not only from a hope that many gentlemen had altered their sentiments, but from a something in his constitution that powerfully stimulated him to persevere to the utmost in accomplishing any measure that had an obvious tendency to promote the public good. He had considered the former arguments divested of prejudice and passion; had weighed them well in his mind for conviction, but he still found the forcible truth of such reasons offered against this destructive importation, and did not doubt but the decision of that day would prove to the world we had become sensible of what really was our natural interest. . . . Mr. Rutledge then observed that the true cause of all the misfortune in which this country was involved at present should be attributed entirely to the immense debt, by which we were overwhelmed. That justice had been more regularly administered immediately after the evacuation of this state by the British than it was six months ago, and better six months ago than at present; as people were pressed by their necessities, they became refractory, and finally might be disposed to lay aside all subordination. The only way to relieve ourselves from those distresses, and avoid their evil consequences, would be to extricate ourselves from debt, and he could think of no measure so likely to bring relief as the one which he had had the honor of offering; he hoped therefore it would be taken and executed now, or it might probably be out of our power to do it to any good purpose hereafter. Nor was the measure a new one—it had been adopted by our ancestors more than once;—it had been adopted with success. The war of 1739 had involved this country in distress very similar to those under which she now labors; with this difference indeed that our produce was then scarcely of any value—the executive Officers of the Law were effectually opposed, and a scheme for the valuation of property was set on foot. But the wisdom of our ancestors, in prohibiting the importation of negroes, and by the blessing of providence on their honest endeavors, the public tranquility was again restored, and the faith of private engagements was inviolably preserved. During the war of 1758 few negroes were imported into this country but immediately on the signing of the peace of 1763 the negroe trade was embraced with avidity. There were many men then alive who had smarted under former calamities—they remembered the evils which he had related—they wisely stept forward, and in some measure checked the evils which they had well grounded reasons to dread—they prohibited the importation of negroes, tho' they were then in a preferable situation in point of debt and trade than at present. Mr. R. then went into a state of the imports of the years 1765, and 1766, and demonstrated that by stopping the importation of negroes the ballance in favor of the country was 71,800 £, sterling. though there had been a failure of crops, and by recurring to the crop same preceding year he shewed that if a full crop had been made in 1776, when the importation of negroes was entirely stopt, the ballance would have been 151,800 £ sterling. He then stated the debt which it was thought was due from this state, and called upon the house to shew what probability there was of there ever being in a better situation than at present if they continued to import negroes. . . . It [had] been strongly urged in a former debate, that negroes were the riches of this state, he did not feel himself inclined to combat this opinion in the fullest extent, he should only at present observe that this supposed wealth could not exist but in better times. The general mode of talking was, we have a large quantity of lands that must lie dormant until we can procure negroes to cultivate them, and for this purpose we will plunge ourselves into difficulties; did not this resemble the conduct of men that were willing to sacrifice all natural comforts and advantages for the aggrandisement of their heirs. Great stress has been laid, in a former debate, on the unhealthiness of our climate, he could not accord with the general opinion on this point, beca[u]se in the course of his observation he had known many persons arrive at a ripe old age, owing to their temperence, which had a salutary influence upon the health of mankind. Fears were also expressed that Georgia would import slaves when we did not, and draw into her bosom all our produce in payment for slaves; but there were material obstructions against that state entering into the African trade; the merchants must possess large capitals to enable them to prosecute the trade with success; such was the disorder prevalent there, and such the diliatory manner of collecting debts (three years time being necessary) that no merchant in Georgia on a sudden could become an importer of negroes; however, allowing the argument in its fullest extent, still he flattered himself that he had a remedy to propose, perfectly efficacious, and unexceptional, this was to render null and void all bonds given in Georgia for negroes during a limited time; such a restriction would compleatly prevent an illicit trade being carried on between the two states, and avert the threatened evils which gentlemen were so much in fear of, he hoped too we had another security in the virtue of the people—he hoped that when it was understood that the legislature had stopped the prohibition of negroes to relieve our national distress, the people would be emulous in exertions to keep the law; . . .

Chancellor Matthews seconded the motion; as he had given his opinion on the subject when it was before the committee, he should not trouble the house at present.

Mr. Pringle said this republic depended on her produce materially for her national welfare and support, . . . The increase of domestic industry lays the foundation of foreign commerce, but how could we continue industrious if the motion were agreed to for taking the very means of our industry away. it was from our negroes we were capable of cultivating our lands; the labour of a white person in the field under the burning sun in August amounted to very little; whilst the hardy Ethiopian pursued his task without appearing to feel any inconvenience from the heats that rendered his master enervated and useless. . . . With regard to the ballance of trade he had long been of opinion, that it depended on the cheapness of labour; this rule prevailed in other states, why not then in this? and if it did would not a scarcity of necessary labourers tend to enhance the price of labour, and throw the ballance of trade still more against us? not that he thought the late calculations had been on just principles, our imports had indeed been very large, but his was owing to our new situation. . . . In calculating our imports last year at 300,000 £ and our exports at 400,000 £ it was argued that we should be more frugal; he sincerely hoped we would in the introduction of foreign articles of luxury, but negroes were not luxuries; they were a sort of rough journeymen, and from their numbers stimulated our white workmen to a higher degree of exertion than they would otherwise arrive at. What tho' for three years our crops had failed, should we lay our account that they would always be unproductive? in former times our produce commonly amounted to about 100,000 barrels of rice, which at 3 £ per barrel made 300,000 £ exclusive of 50,000 wt. of indico, and other articles, so that what reason appeared for fears that our debts could not be paid. He made other observations, and pressed the house to consider whether it was not probable that if the ports were shut up for three years the Liverpool Merchants might not be induced to quit the African trade entirely, for he understood they were at present undetermined what steps to take.

Mr. Izard. . . . He again entreated gentlemen to consider what the motion was, being simply if under our present enormous load of debt, we could be justified in going any further.

Dr. Ramsey would have supposed himself amongst an assembly of divines, from the great piety with which a political question had been argued. Since the evacuation 9000 Negroes had been brought into this state; and this importation occasioned us to run largely in debt; our creditors were very pressing, yet what we were about to do, not anxious to become honest by making payment, but studying how to gain greater credit. In former times our negro trade was carried on very differently from what it was at present, much more to our advantage; we could then purchase negroes on a credit of 5 years, and so much did honesty flourish amongst us, that he remembered an instance of a planter, who had taken up some negroes on a credit for a time, but finding himself unable to pay, from bad crops, he brought the negroes back to the merchant and desired to return them, because he found himself unable to keep up to the terms on which they had been purchased: the conduct of the merchant would have graced the primitive times of innocence and virtue; he said to the planter, take back your negroes, and add as many more to them as you please: I shall never distress any man that can satisfy me he is honest, But this mutual confidence no longer existing, no other prudent alternative remained, but to stop importing. . . . He thought little of the opinion that our produce might find its way to Georgia; since the peace that state had only imported one vessel with slaves; but should the shutting up our ports, occasion her merchants to import Negroes, he thought the precaution of rendering bonds void, as recommended, would prevent any clandestine trade being carried on between us and Georgia. It had been observed that great duties were paid for negroes, and therefore we should go on importing; but he could tell the house that although the money did not come into the treasury under the denomination of duties, it would still be paid for taxes; it was frequently the case that a planter on his way to the treasury with his taxes, unluckily stumbled on a negro yard the temptation was too great for his philosophy to withstand, and he purchased negroes with the money that ought to have been devoted to payment of his debts. Much had been said of our unhealthiness, for his part he did not think a greater number of negroes would make our climate in the smallest degree more wholesome; but if it were so, he would rather continue as we were than run more into debt, for he hated a dun infinitely more than he dreaded a fever. A gentleman had said that the Liverpool merchants were at present undetermined what steps they should take with respect to their future trade, and might be induced to discontinue engageing in the slave trade, if we shut up our ports; well let them do so; what loss will this be to us? on the contrary the confederation will profit by it; for the African trade could be carried on by the New England states, he meant as merchants, not as Christians, with as much advantage, as by any country under the sun. . . .[4]

Judge Pendleton approved greatly of the motion, and entered into a defence of it; he then answered several arguments of General Pinckney's, which are in justice omitted. It had been urged that a non importation of negroes might throw that trade into the hands of Georgia, but this was no good reason why we should continue it to our ruin, because a few negroes would probably be introduced amongst us from that state; with equal propriety the commander of a vessel might object against putting to sea, fearing to perish, because he took in a few drops of water. It had been observed, that a man's life was estimated at seven years; this perhaps was a certain calculation in England, where the temperature of the climate was more regular and wholesome than here, but, all disadvantages attending new negroes, being maturely consider'd he did not think the calculation of a negroes life should exceed two years; if he should be right, what became of all those high sounding arguments about national wealth deriving such abundant addition from the importation of slaves, when it was obvious that a man who bought one at the current price, had a balance against him, for no slave could be expected to produce for his master 30 £ per annum. . . .

Mr. Calhoun wondered how it happened that gentlemen argued so strenuously against a measure that they at the same time encouraged; riding to this city from the country he met about 20 fine healthy new negroes; enquiring who they belonged to, he was informed Judge Pendleton; he did not think bonds could be taken in the manner proposed by the honorable gentleman that made the motion; without militating against an article of the confederation, which he read and explained.

Mr. Rutledge explained that article of the confederation, which Mr. Calhoun had read to permit a very different construction than it had received. He made a round, elegant speech in reply to Gen. Pinckney.

The question being put on motion the house divided, when there appeared to be,

The Guinea trade both to the Gold and Windward coasts of Africa, is carried on with vigour from Charleston, South Carolina, altho' on a contracted scale, the vessels being now smaller than usual." One explanation of this is probably that a larger proportion of the vessels was owned in America than had been the case before the war. The American-owned vessels had always been the smaller vessels.

365. DEBATE ON THE IMPORTATION OF NEGROES, 1787.[1]

March 22, 1787.

When the house came to the clause relative to negroes, where the Senate had inserted "three months".[2]

Commodore Gillon opposed any time being allowed, because a great number of negroes could be brought from the West Indies.

Mr. E Rutledge would rather vote to strike out this clause together; for if this ruinous and impolitic species of importation went, even for a short time, the legislature would be called on next year to pass another Instalment law. Indeed this was the only good clause in the bill, and tended to do away [with] those misfortunes which reduced them to the necessity of passing it.

Judge Burke thought some attention should be paid to the situation of those merchants who had already sent vessels to bring slaves; if the house did not admit some exception, they were actually making an ex post facto law?

Mr. Darrel asked whether all acts for paying debts by instalments were not ex post facto laws? If merchants had sent for negroes they might find a market for them in the several ports of the West Indies. If importations were not immediately stopt, the clause would do very little if any good, as a proof, a vessel had recently arrived at North Carolina, with 100 slaves, who were intended to be sent here.

Dr. Ramsey opposed any time. He made a jocose remark, that every man went to church last Sunday, and said his prayers, was bound by a spiritual obligation to refuse the importation of slaves.

[365] [1] Charleston Morning Post, Mar. 23, 1787, debate in the House of Representatives, S. C., over a bill to prohibit the importation of negroes. On Feb. 18 Gillon had introduced a bill for the recovery of debts which was first read on Mar. 13. On the 17th leave was given to add a clause forbidding the importation of negroes for three years. It is the debate on the third reading which is here reported. Meanwhile the senate, which had had the bill under consideration since the 17th, suggested amendments which the house, on Mar. 24, refused to accept. Jour. of House, S. C., 1787, pp. 96, 272, 298, 300, 325, 334, 350-351.

[2] Before the prohibition of importation was to take effect.

They had devoutly prayed not to be led into temptation, and negroes were a temptation too great to be resisted.

Mr. Simpkins was unwilling to stop the importation of slaves by a legislative interference; not that he wanted the practice to continue, but rather wished to have a clause in the constitution, prohibiting the importation of negroes altogether. To do it in any other way opened a door for persons to speculate. Suppose negroes were imported into North Carolina or Georgia, could they not be very easily smuggled into this state, and then we should lose the duties.

Mr. M. Winn hoped importation of negroes to be stopped immediately, or not at all. They had been told an instance of a man refusing to pay any part of his debts, alledging his inability, and a few days afterwards he purchased 15 slaves! It was their duty as legislators to prevent such people from going on in this line of dishonesty, which operated more to the disadvantage of their constituents than the loss of any part of the duties.

Mr. Hunter wanted the time extended to five months, with a view of giving the merchants time to dispose of their slaves. This law was intended to restrain imprudent persons, but this clause had a tendency to injure prudent persons.

Col. Anderson would not admit of an hour's delay. Why had the house agreed to this iniquitous law? was it not to relieve those who had made purchases, and were not able to pay? It was too notorious to be denied that we were still anxious to purchase negroes, and in five months a great number could be imported, which must be sold on credit, or kept until those prudent men came down to buy them for cash. In the mean time what was to become of debtors that wanted to sell property to pay their debts? Where could they find purchasers? This was the very reason that obliged the legislature to stoop so low as to pass restraining laws, and if they did not prevent importations of negroes, more such laws would be necessary. If this clause did not stand in its original form they had better throw out the bill at once, than hold out to creditors such a deception as that they were going to receive their debts in three years. What was the house to sanction such injustice to serve a few individual[s]? No, surely not. Rather let those monied men go and purchase from persons who were obliged to sell.

Commodore Gillon had another reason against the importation, which was, that negroes would rise in value, and the debtor who sold slaves had a better chance of satisfying his creditors.

The question being put generally for any importation of negroes, the yeas and nays were called, when there appeared to be for the importation 56, against 74.

Then the house agreed to strike out the three months.[3]

366. Act for penalizing the Importation of Negroes, 1787.[1]

March 28, 1787.

An Ordinance to impose a Penalty on any person who shall import into this State any Negroes, contrary to the Installment Act.

1. Be it ordained, by the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives, met in General Assembly, and by the authority of the same, That any person importing or bringing into this State a negro slave, contrary to the Act to regulate the recovery of debts and prohibiting the importation of negroes, shall besides the forfeiture of such negro or slave, be liable to a penalty of one hundred pounds, to the use of the State, for every such negro or slave so imported and brought in, in addition to the forfeiture in and by the said Act prescribed.[2]

367. Voyage of Joseph Hawkins, 1793-1795.[1]

We sailed from Charleston the 1st of Dec. 1793, on board the ship Charleston, J. Connelly master, burthen 400 Tons; and after a passage partly boisterous, and frequently becalmed for several days, we made the isles of Delos on the 17th January 1794.[2]

[3] The text of the act, "to regulate the recovery and payment of debts and for prohibiting the importation of negroes for the time therein mentioned", is to be found in the Charleston Morning Post (Mar. 29, 1787). It forbade importation for three years, and made the importer liable to a fine of £100 for each slave imported. His slaves were forfeited to the informer.

[366] [1] McCord, VII. 430; Mar. 28, 1787, Jour. of House, pp. 398, 399.

[2] The prohibition act, referred to above as the "installment act", began a policy of exclusion which, by the extension of the law from time to time, was maintained until the end of 1803 (DuBois, pp. 229, 238, 239, 240; McCord, VII. 433-434, 436, 444, 447, 449). "Yesterday the ship Maria, Capt. Dennison, from Anamabo, with 204 negroes on board, was seized, under authority of the law which prohibits the importation of slaves for three years" (Charleston Morning Post, June 16, 1787; New Haven Gazette and Connecticut Magazine, II. 172). The uncertainty during this period as to whether from time to time Charleston was or would be a market for slaves is illustrated in the case of Anderson v. Moncrieff (1810). On Oct. 6, 1799, the Andersons had consigned 45 negroes from Bance Island by the schooner Phoebe to M'Leod of Charleston, who was instructed to direct the slaves of the complainants, along with his own, to Havana if they could not be sold in Carolina. Catterall, Judicial Cases, II. 294.

[367] [1] Joseph Hawkins, Voyage to the Coast of Africa (1797). Joseph Hawkins had come to Charleston from New York, searching for an opportunity to earn a living. Not long after his arrival he was offered the position of supercargo on board the Guinea vessel Charleston. Such accounts as his of the process of purchasing the negroes in Africa are rare in the annals of the American traders.

[2] This account, as well as occasional items from other sources, suggests that though no slaves could legally be brought into Charleston, Charleston vessels were carrying them to other ports. The Salem Gazette (Jan. 31, 1792) reported the loss of the "Eliza, Olderman, from Charleston", on the coast of Africa; it may be remembered that Mungo Park in 1797 embarked in a Charleston slaver (this work, II. 640). A letter

These islands are nine in number, and afford harbours and safe anchorage in deep water for ships of any burthen; they are six leagues from the main land of Africa, in 12 deg. 30 min. south lat. they are inhabited by French and English factors, who find their account in living on those islands in preference to the main, particularly from the circumstances of accommodation for their ships, which lye here with the greatest safety in all weathers, and that their slaves cannot easily escape. The slaves are in those islands suffered to go at large, without chains, contrary to the customs on the continent. The surface of the islands is barren and rocky, but there is abundance of fine fresh water; and provisions are procured with facility.

From the factors here we learned that the Ebo and Golo Kings had been at war, the latter of whom having been defeated, and a great part of his army had fallen into the hands of the conqueror, they therefore advised us to proceed for the Reyo-pongo river, about 25 leagues south westward, and from thence the access to the Ebo nation would be easily secured, by a passage up that river and from thence by land, about three hundred miles from the mouth of this river; they furnished us with further directions, and assured us of a certain and good trade.

Agreeably to this information, we provided ourselves with such necessaries as the factors could afford us, and proceeded for the Reyo-pongo, which we made on the 5th of February, and after chusing a proper situation, came to anchor in a handsome harbour within the northern bank (pp. 12-14). . . .

On the 6th February we were visited by numbers of the natives, who offered to barter with us fruit and ivory for our hardwares; but finding after we had exchanged a few articles, that they belonged to a nation which had been before represented to us as thinly inhabited, and that we could not accommodate ourselves here as we wished, we made use of them to obtain information concerning the country of the Ebo king. We fortunately found an interpreter acquainted with that country and the trade, him we engaged, and an expedition was immediately determined upon by the captain (pp. 15-16).[3] . . . . . he proposed that I should go and see the prisoners; we accordingly crossed to the southeastern side of the rivulet, where at the lower side of the town, we found them confined in a large of Samuel Hodgden to Timothy Pickering, July 10, 1800, refers to the capture of a Charleston vessel with eighty slaves on board (Mass. Hist. Soc., Pickering Papers, vol. 42, pp. 239-240). In December, 1803, the schooner Ann, with a cargo of slaves, was captured by the French. Though her captain called himself a Danish subject and was sailing with Danish papers, the vessel was the property of Mann and Foltz of Charleston (Catterall, Judicial Cases, II. 285). See also post, no. 368. For further information concerning the American trade with the Delos Islands see this work, vol. III., index.

[3] Hawkins, in spite of his inexperience, was chosen to lead the expedition. The next sixty pages recount his overland journey and his reception by the Ebo king.

area within a thick stockade, on the outside of which was a trench: the inside was divided into parcels, and huts irregularly constructed, and the entrance as well as the whole circuit, was guarded by men with spears.

We commonly find ourselves impressed with emotions of horror or compassion, on entering places where our fellow men are doomed to punishment or thraldom. In the scene before me, the ear was not indeed dinned with the clanking of heavy fetters, but was horrible in its peculiar way. The captives were destitute for the most part of even their necessary covering, and bound indiscriminately together by the hands and legs, the cords being again fastened to the ground by stakes; they were loosed a few at a time once every day, when each was permitted to eat the only meal they were allowed, consisting of rice and palm oil. Benevolence, however, sometimes broke through the rigours of a savage life, and occasionally alleviated the sufferings of the weakly, or the wounded with milk or other necessaries: their condition was on the whole deplorable.

I had often in the course of the voyage, and of the journey, rebuked myself for having embarked in the African trade, but found a consolation in the reflection, that it was not from a malicious inclination or avaricious disposition, that I had embarked in it, but from the pressing call of necessity, and at a time when my dissent could not alter or obstruct the undertaking. On the present occasion, however, I was fully convinced the removal of these poor wretches even into the slavery of the West-Indies, would be an act of humanity, rather than one exposed to censure.

We passed through the whole range of the place of confinement, the old chief pointing out to me those who were the greatest warriors of the Galla nation. He then intimated to me that I might chuse such of them as I should think proper and agree on what he was to receive in return. I agreed to do so, but requested that I might have an opportunity of conversing with them, and chusing such as would go with me voluntarily, if any could be found. To this he readily assented; and for the next week I continued to visit them daily, and took occasion through my interpreter, to exhibit as flattering a prospect to their future situation in America, should they go with me, as I thought was just in itself, and favorable to their wishes. . . .

Having arranged matters on this subject to my mind, I mentioned to the old king the several articles which I proposed exchanging with him, and shewing specimens of such few articles as I had brought, proposed dispatching a person to the ship with a letter, directing the Captain to send a shallop with goods to the mouth of the little Congo, and that rafts should be ready with hands to convey them up the rest of the way. The Galla nation having suffered so much by their last war, had now became fearful of molesting or interfering with the Ebo people, a circumstance, which if we had previously known, would have saved us a long circuitous and troublesome journey, which might now be performed with ease in one half the time (pp. 92-96). . . .

On the 3d of April, while I was on an excursion abroad, one of the messengers returned from the ship, and I found him before me at my hut in the evening, with a packet from the Captain, advising me of the goods which he had sent by the shallop, to the mouth of the little Congo, and giving me directions how to proceed.

The information being communicated to the old chief, he informed me he would send a number of experienced old men with me, to chuse such articles as they should approve and after three days, provisions and horses being provided, we set out, the company consisting of six of the deputation, with some of their families, a number of persons to carry provisions and goods, and my two wives. We had nearly 100 miles to go, which engaged us six days; riding proved very unpleasant to me, on account of the heat and the want of a saddle. We found the boats as we were directed, and a cargo of brandy, rum, gin, and tobacco, a few coarse guns, some ammunition, swords, knives, spears, and ornament, such as rings of various kinds, for the legs, arms, and fingers, some gilt and plated breast plates for their warriors, tinsel laces, and some glass-ware. An assortment so extensive and rich in their eyes, had never been there before; and bargains were very soon made for goods, in exchange for 100 slaves, (being ordered not to bring down more) for the rest I procured ivory and gold, in dust and bars. In these dealings I found my wives of more use to me than my companion Hurdee, for they sincerely studied my interest, while he studied to profit himself (pp. 136-138). . . .

The slaves that I had purchased were young men, many of whom being eager to escape from their bondage in Ebo, preferred the evil they "knew not of" to that which they then felt; but the majority were evidently affected with grief at their approaching departure.

Arrangements were made and a sufficient body of the Ebo people undertook to accompany me as a guard to the place of embarkation; provisions were provided for the journey, so that each of the slaves was well fed, and a load of provisions or goods given him to carry. They were tied to poles in rows, four feet apart; a loose wicker bandage round the neck of each, connected him to the pole, and the arms being pinioned by a bandage affixed behind above the elbows, they had sufficient room to feed, but not to loose themselves, or commit any violence; and as the guard was provided with arms, we had nothing to apprehend during the night, as we divided the Ebo people into parties, one of which slept while the other watched. . . .

This journey was extremely different in its nature from that in which I had last passed this way; the giddy pranks of the vain, or the inebriated Ebo, was woefully contrasted by the sullen melancholy, and deep sighs of the poor Galla prisoners; often did they look back with eyes flowing with tears, turn sudden round and gaze, seeming to part with reluctance, even from their former bondage. It was excessively affecting to me, but I considered that death might have been their fate otherwise, and I endeavoured to reconcile them to their condition, by representing flattering accounts of the country to which they were going; that the bonds they then bore were only to prevent their flight; that they should be at liberty where they were going, and have plenty to eat, drink, etc. These assurances occasioned a temporary composure, and we at length arrived at the place of our embarkation; two boats had been brought up, as the shallop drew too much water; the slaves were put on board, and necessarily in irons brought for the purpose. This measure occasioned one of the most affecting scenes I ever witnessed: their hopes with my assurances had buoyed them up on the road; but a change from the cordage to iron fetters, rent their hopes and hearts together: their wailings were torturing beyond what words can express; but delay at this crisis would have been fatal; the boat's crews were acquainted with the duty, and they were all safely embarked (pp. 139-143). . . .

We soon lost sight of them in a winding of the river; and continued going down with the current till night; the slaves seemed every hour to feel their situation more grievously, and I ordered them each a dram of liquor which for a while exhilerated their spirits, and quieted their cares. . . . We furnished the slaves with provisions, but whether through grief or sulleness, very few of them would partake of any refreshments beside water.

As soon as we had light we unmoored, and before noon we reached our shallop, extremely fatigued from the heat and closeness of the air, the banks of each side as we passed, being overgrown with wood and thicket, obstructing its free circulation. We had now another disagreeable piece of duty to execute, viz. the removal of the slaves from the small boats into the shallop; they were in want of room, and it was suggested to loose six of them at a time; we accordingly moved to the centre of the river, and being moored by a grapling, began to remove them; they appeared generally more quiet, and willing to act as we directed by the interpreter than usual, and had now all been removed, and placed below, but the last six, whom we suffered to remain on deck; when we had got under weigh, and were passing through a narrow part of the river, two of them found means to jump overboard; a sailor who was in the small boat astern seized one of them by the arms, and the end of a rope being thrown to him, the slave was taken on board, though not without some difficulty. The others who had been at the oars, seeing their fellows, one of them seized, and the other struck on the head with a pole, set up a scream, which was echoed by the rest below; those that were loose made an effort to throw two of the sailors overboard; the rest, except the one in the boat and at the helm, being asleep: the noise had now aroused them, and the scream had impressed them with some degree of terror; they seized on the guns and bayonets that lay ready, and rushed upon the slaves, five of whom from below had got loose, and were endeavouring to set the rest free, while those we had to deal with above, were threatening to sacrifice us to their despair. These transactions were but the events of a moment; I had neither gun nor sword, and to retire in search of either, would have been to give the slaves a decisive superiority; I laid hold of the palloon stick, and had raised it to strike one of them who had nearly wrested a gun from one of the sailors, but before I could give the blow, I received a stroke of an oar, which severed my little finger from my hand; I know not how it was that I felt nothing of the severe pain for the moment, a slight twitch on the hand was the only sensation I experienced; the blow was broken that I had intended, but I renewed the effort, and with effect, for I levelled the fellow, and the sailor recovered his gun, whom I could not prevent from running the poor negro through the body; the hatch was open, and he fell among his fellows, who had, crouded tied, and ironed as they were, to assist as far as they were able, by holding our legs, encouraging their companions, and shouting whenever those above did any thing that appeared likely to overcome one or other of us. We at length overpowered them; one only having escaped and one being killed, the rest were immediately bound in double irons, and took care from thence till our arrival at the ship, not to suffer any of them to take the air without being made fast. Five of the sailors were considerably, but not dangerously hurt, and of the slaves, those who had been riotous above and below, nine were severely wounded.

We reached the ship in five days from our first embarkation, where we were received with much satisfaction; the officers had all provided themselves with three or four wives each, and rebuked me for not bringing mine along, alledging that they would, according to the account given by their messmates, bring a good price when we arrived in America. I was sorry, however, to find that two of our best seamen had expired during my absence, from the excessive fatigue of the ships duty, and the heat of the climate.

While I was away, the Captain had opened a trade in another channel, he had obtained 100 slaves in the place where he lay, beside gold and ivory; and had contracted with some French and English factors up the river Reyo Naunus,[4] for the remainder of his cargo, and for his sea stores. We accordingly weighed anchor and stood for that river, which lies about 40 leagues N. of the Reyo Pongo, or in 10 deg. 40 min. south, and on the 16th of May arrived off the Cape, which forms one side of the southern outlet of that river (pp. 145-150). . . .

The whole number of slaves that we had now on board, I found about 500, of whom above 50 were then lying in a dangerous state of illness; it was time for us to depart, being now in the 13th of June, 1795. We accordingly got in our anchors, and procured six of the natives boats, with six men in each, to tow us down night and day, when the tide served (pp. 173-174).[5] . . .

369. Governor James Richardson to the House of Representatives, 1803.[1]

Columbia, Nov. 4, 1803.

To the Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives.

Gentlemen, . . . All possible vigilance and my best exertions, have been used to carry effectually into operation the law prohibiting the importation of negroes into this state; but it is with concern that I have here to state to you, that it has been without success; whether it must be attributed principally to the ill consequences that are apprehended would result from carrying the law into operation, by emancipating the negroes so brought in (a remedy deemed more mischievous than the evil of their introduction in servitude), or whether the interest of the citizens is so interwoven with the species of property, that it prevents there aiding the law in answering the salutary purposes intended, I will not presume to determine; but I am inclined to believe both causes operate as preventatives, for those people are continued to be brought into the state, beyond the possibility of prevention.[2] In all laws intended for the general benefit, they should be so calculated, that their operation should be found equal in every part of the state; when this is not the case, it evinces that there is some radical defect therein, or it is inimical to the interest of the citizens; with this law, such is the situation; for in the state of things, the citizens in the frontier and sea coast districts, do accumulate this property without the possibility of being detected, while those of the interior and middle districts only, experience the operation of that law; from their remote situation of introducing this property, they are deprived of that security to evade the vigilant eyes of the officers of the government. Whatever defects were experienced in this law, and however ineffectual it has been found, and from whatsoever cause, I was induced to hope that the provisions made in the law of congress to prevent the introduction of that property into such states, where, by their laws the same had been prohibited, would prove successful in its operation, and ensure the desired object of prevention; but that also, has not been productive of the purposes contemplated, from not meeting that due support from the citizens, which the laws of the government ought. This, indeed, is a circumstance to be lamented, but such is the true state of our situation, and therefore becomes a subject worthy of your consideration, and one that I trust will engage your endeavours to render equally energetic in every part of the state, that law, which experience has proved partial in its operation, and is oppressive upon such citizens in the interior districts, as holds it an object of desire, to augment their capital in the accumulation of such property. . . .

[5] On the Middle Passage a fever broke out among the cargo which affected the eyes of its victims and Hawkins lost his eyesight. Where the negroes were delivered Hawkins does not say.

[2] On Feb. 14, 1804, Lowndes made the statement that the number of negroes imported into South Carolina during the period of the prohibition was but little less than normal. Mitchell, of New York, computed that during the past twelve months (1804), 20,000 negroes had been transported from Africa to the plantations of Georgia and South Carolina. In spite of the ample reward offered to reformers, there were no convictions in South Carolina during the period of prohibited trade (Annals of Congress, 8 Cong., 1 sess., pp. 992, 1000, 1031). Drayton in 1802 referred to the number smuggled into the state both by land and water. View of South Carolina, p. 146.

Tuesday, December 6.

On the second reading of this bill, Mr. Barnwell opposed it. He maintained that by the immense influx of these persons into the state, the value of this species of property would be considerably diminished, insomuch that he did believe negroes would soon not be worth one half of what they might now be sold for. The value of the produce raised by their labour would in like manner be depreciated. It was well known that the stores of Charleston were now filled with our cotton, and that it could not be sold for any tolerable price. Our trade with the nations of Europe was much interrupted and lessened by the great contest which was now maintained in that quarter of the world; a contest on the issue of which, perhaps, everything dear and valuable to man depended. Was it under these circumstances that we ought to lay out the savings of our industry, the funds accumulated in many years of prosperity and peace, to increase that produce whose value had already fallen so much? He thought not. The permission given by the bill would lead to ruinous speculations. Everyone would purchase negroes. It was well known that those who dealt in this property would sell it at a very long credit. Our citizens would purchase at all hazards, and trust to fortunate crops and favorable markets for making their payments; and it would be found that South Carolina would in a few years, if this trade continued open, be in the same situation of debt, and subject to all the misfortunes which the situation had produced, as at the conclusion of the revolutionary war. The Hon. Member adduced in support of his opinion various other arguments, still more cogent and impressive, which from reasons very obvious we decline making public.

Mr Smith said he would agree to put a stop to the importation of negroes, but he believed it to be impossible. For this reason he would vote for the bill.

On putting the question a majority appeared to be in favor of the importation from any part of the world except the Bahama and West India Islands.[2]

[370] [1] Charleston Courier, Dec. 26, 1803. This debate is on a bill permitting the importation of negroes.

[2] "The house agreed to the order of the day, resolved itself into a committee of the whole, on a bill from the senate to alter and amend the several acts respecting the importation or bringing into this state, from beyond the seas and elsewhere, negroes and other persons of colour; also a report of the committee of this house, to enquire whether any, and if any what amendments are necessary in the acts, entitled, an act to prevent negro slaves and persons of colour from being brought into or entering this state, and an act supplementary to the act aforesaid; and on that part of the governor's message relating thereto, Mr. H. Deas in the chair.

"Mr. H. Deas from the committee of the whole house, reported, they have had the same under consideration, and are of opinion that the laws prohibiting the importation of negroes and other persons of colour into this state, can be so amended as to prevent their introduction amongst us, and to recommend that a committee be appointed to report a bill for that purpose on Monday next.

371. Reminiscences of Ebenezer S. Thomas, 1803.[1]

This, and the three following years, my business doubled, and trebled, annually. In November, 1803, I returned from my fourth voyage, with a printed catalogue of fifty thousand volumes of books, in every branch of literature, arts, and sciences, being by far, the largest importation ever made into the United States. I had only got them opened, and arranged for sale three days, when news arrived from Columbia, that the legislature, then in session, had opened the port for the importation of slaves from Africa. The news had not been five hours in the city, before two large British Guineamen, that had been laying off and on the port for several days, expecting it, came up to town; and from that day my business began to decline, although then in a situation to carry it on to three times the extent I had ever done before. Previous to this, the planters had large sums of money laying idle in the banks, which they liberally expended, not only for their actual, but supposed wants. A great change at once took place in every thing. Vessels were fitted out in numbers, for the coast of Africa, and as fast as they returned, their cargoes were bought up with avidity, not only consuming the large funds that had been accumulating, but all that could be procured, and finally exhausting credit, and mortgaging the slaves for payment; many of whom were not redeemed for ten years after, to my knowledge. This state of things continued, until put a stop to by that provision of the Constitution which forbade the trade after the first of January, 1808. So completely absorbed were the funds of the agriculturalists, in many instances, that those who had been in the habit of indulging in every luxury, and paying for it at the moment, took credit for a bundle of quills and a ream of paper. For myself, I was upwards of five years disposing of my large stock, at a sacrifice of more than one half, in all the principal towns, from Augusta, in Georgia, to Boston.[2]

"The above report being immediately considered, was agreed to, and the following gentlemen appointed a committee for that purpose, viz. Messrs. Falconer, H. Deas, D. Deas, K. L. Simons and Cheves.

December 13.

"The committee appointed by the house of Representatives on Saturday last, to bring in a bill to prevent the importation of negroes into this state, reported a bill for that purpose yesterday, which was read a first time; when a motion was made to postpone the second reading of the said bill until the 1st day of February next, which was negatived, 41 to 62, and ordered for a second reading to-day" (Charleston Courier, Dec. 6, 13, 20, 26, 1803). For the act of 1803 opening the Carolina ports to negroes see McCord, VII. 449.

[371] [1] Ebenezer S. Thomas, Reminiscences of the Last Sixty-Five Years (Hartford, 1840), II. 35-36. Ebenezer Thomas of Massachusetts, a nephew of the celebrated printer Isaiah Thomas, was occupied with a book-selling business in Charleston during the years indicated.

[2] Occasional unfavorable comment on the action of South Carolina comes from North Carolina: July 26, 1806, the Raleigh Register describes the reopening of the trade as a "detested, short sighted policy, which in order to increase the wealth of a few can impose upon the State the greatest calamity with which any nation has ever been afflicted". Taylor, Slave Holding in North Carolina, p. 27.

[372] [1] This list, compiled from the Charleston Courier, should be compared with that presented to the Senate in 1820, which follows. Each contains vessels not found in the other. Moreau de Saint Méry, in Voyage aux États-Unis (p. 331), gives the number of negroes imported into Carolina in 1804 as 5658; John Lambert, in Travels through Canada and the United States, 1806, 1807, and 1808 (1813), II. 165, gives 5386.

[2] This notice appeared in at least forty issues of the Courier.

[3] "Brig Brilliant, Preble, of this port, is lost on the Coast of Africa—Cargo saved." Charleston Courier, May 31, 1805.

[4] "On Wednesday, the 18th instant, will commence the sale of the Cargo of the ship Horizon, at Frink's Wharf, consisting of 243 Mozambique Slaves. . . . The Conditions of Sale for the Slaves are, one third cash, one third payable the 1st of January, and one third payable the first of June, 1805, with interest included in the Notes, and approved indorsers in Charleston. . . . The character of the Slaves from the East Coast of Africa is now so well known that it is unnecessary to mention the decided preference they have over all other negroes" (ibid., July 14, 1804). The Horizon had left Mozambique with 543 slaves but off the Cape of Good Hope she was seized by a French vessel and held nearly a month, during which time about 300 of the negroes died (ibid., July 12, 13, 1804). The next issue of the Courier offered the Horizon for sale: "The Ship Horizon Will also be sold if applied for in ten days; she was built in Charleston in 1800, of the best materials, copper fastened and coppered to the bends, and fitted in the most complete manner for an African voyage. ALEXANDER and JOHN MCLURE."

[5] Captain Welch brought word of a Liverpool vessel, the Angola, with 170 slaves for Charleston, which had been captured in the Gambia. Ibid., Aug. 6, 1804.

[6] An item in the Courier of Feb. 18, 1804, stated that the schooner Aurora, Mackie, from Goree had been seized by a French frigate but released when the French learned that she was an American vessel.

[373] [1] In a debate in the Senate in 1820 over the admission of Missouri, Mr. William Smith of South Carolina presented to the Senate a list of vessels importing slaves into South Carolina between 1804 and 1807: "This subject had been forgotten in Carolina. It was supposed to be at an end. However, hearing late in the Summer that the storm was gathering to the north, and that the admission of Missouri into the Union would be opposed on account of slavery, or something springing from that source, he wrote to a friend in Charleston, to apply to the customhouse officer for a full statement of all the ships engaged in that trade during the four years, together with their owners, consignees, their places of residence, country, nation to which they belonged, etc., that he might be able to show the public, who were engaged in it. In answer to his request, he had received from the customhouse books, from the hand of the collector, the following authentic documents. He would present to the Senate, in the first place, the documents, which contained the years of arrival, the names of the vessels, the place to which the vessel belonged, the names of the proprietors, the names of the consignees, their country, and to where they belonged. (Explanation—B. British, F. French, R. I. R. Island.)" (Annals, 16 Cong., 2 sess., pp. 72-77). Unfortunately the list as it stands does not do all that Senator Smith promised. We are given the name and country of the proprietor of the cargo, if the caption in the Annals is to be accepted, but no names of consignees. In many cases proprietor and consignee are the same but not in all. Comparison of this list with the one which precedes it brings to light many mistakes in the Annals. Part of the list was reprinted in the Newport Mercury, July 27, 1895, where James C. Swann selected the names of all Newport vessels trading to Charleston between 1804 and 1807. Here he attributed to Newport all Rhode Island vessels, ignoring any part which other Rhode Island ports may have taken in the trade. The Annals list was also printed in Dawson and De Saussure, Census of Charleston (1848), pp. 136-142.

[2] The Charleston papers also mention the following vessels from Charleston or bound to Charleston as on the African coast or spoken by other vessels somewhere on the voyage: Mar. 12, Ariadne; May 14, Daniel and Mary; Aug. 6, Angola; Aug. 14, Amazon.

374. News Items relating to Slave Trade, 1804.

January 14, 1804.[1]

Public Auction. On Tuesday, the 17th instant, will be sold before my store, 7 prime African Negroes, just landed, viz. Five Boys, about 14 years of age, two Girls, from 15 to 16 years of Age. Conditions Cash. James Scot.

February 8.

Public Auction. On Tuesday, the 14th inst. will be sold by the Subscribers, before their Vendue Store, precisely at 11 o'clock, 70 grown African Negroes. Terms will be declared at the time of Sale. Verree and Blair.

July 12.

This Day, the 12th inst. will be sold before the subscribers Vendue Store, suitable for the African trade: 20 Collars, 6 Deck Chains, 143 Pair Shackles, 6—without bolts.[2] Henry Smerdon.

December 22, 1804.

Public Auction. On Monday next will be sold before my store without reserve, 3 Prime Windward Coast Negroes, Two Men and one Woman merely as a trial to see what New Negroes will bring at vendue and for which cash or produce will be taken at cash price. . . . M. M. Campbell.

[374] [1] These early notices in the Courier probably represent small lots rushed into Charleston from the West Indies as soon as the news of the repeal of prohibition reached there. The second notice is repeated in the Courier for Feb. 9, with the substitution of the figure 17 for 70, which is more plausible. The number of auction sales, with no vessel's name mentioned, increased steadily during the four years. In many instances the vendor probably took over a small lot of negroes unsold by the consignees of a cargo.

[2] Goods for the slave trade had been advertised in Charleston before the port was opened to negroes: "For the African Trade. A few bales blue Baftas, or Guineas, calculated purposely for the African Trade, just received and for sale, for cash or notes at 60 days. W. and E. Crafts." Charleston Courier, Oct. 28, 1803.

[375] [1] The total number of negroes advertised is 5089; Moreau de Saint Méry gives for this year 6727 (Voyage aux États-Unis, p. 33); John Lambert, 6790 (Travels, II. 165). A few vessels appear in the advertisements which are not to be found in the customs records; many are in those records which have not been found in the newspapers. From the Courier the number of negroes entered week by week can occasionally be obtained. The date given is not that of the Courier [illegible]

the date given, the negroes are always from Africa:

[2] The Yeopum apparently returned again to the coast, for about a year later appeared the following item: "A letter from Goree, dated December 21, states that the French privateer General Blandshot (formerly the brig Leon, of this port) capt. Debrux, had entered the River Gambia, and plundered the schooner Yeopim, Bixby, of this port, of stores; the Yeopim had about 100 slaves on board" (Charleston Courier, Jan. 30, 1806). The vessel is later heard of as having gone into Martinique on Apr. 10, in distress for want of hands. Ibid., May 3, 1806.

[3] The arrival at Goree of the Republican, owned by Peter Kennedy of Charleston, was reported in the Courier of May 29, 1804. The schooner left Goree Jan. 5 and was in Charleston by May 1, 1805. The next year Welsh reached the Carolina coast late in January with 93 negroes. After twenty-five days of futile endeavor to enter the harbor he sailed to Nassau for water and provisions, then made his way to Havana, where he sold his slaves. By Apr. 1 he arrived in Charleston with sugar. Charleston Courier, May 29, 1804, Jan. 31, May 1, 1805, Jan. 28, Feb. 4, 6, Apr. 1, 1806.

[4] The Margaret shortly before reaching Charleston had encountered two French privateers, which inflicted on the vessel considerable damage and injured 18 slaves and 9 members of the crew. The Margaret carried 14 six-pounders, 20 men, and 200 slaves. Ibid., July 8, 11, 12, 1805.

[5] "Also for Sale, A quantity of India Piece Goods, Suitable for the African markets, together with all the stores on board said Brig [Commerce] calculated to fit a Vessel for the African trade. Apply as above [WILLIAM TIMMONS]" (ibid., Oct. 21, 1805). It was probably from this cargo that Timmons was still advertising on Dec. 20: "India Goods. Suitable for the African Markets.

130	pieces	blue Bafts (or Guineas)	20	pieces	Blue Romalls
100	"	White "	70	"	Cushetes
170	"	Chellors and Bejdputs	10	"	Allegars.

Also, 30 Elephants' Teeth, of large sizes. All entitled to Drawback. For sale at low prices and a liberal supply of Credit by WILLIAM TIMMONS." William Smith, in a Letter to Wilberforce (London, 1807, pp. 36-41), encloses a newspaper clipping which reports that the Commerce, Bishop, was destroyed by natives at Cape Mount, and the officers and crew massacred.

[6] "Whereas some evil minded person or persons had fabulously and nefariously set on float, through various parts of the city, an insidious rumour that there prevailed a contagious disorder on board the ship Washington, Capt. Belcher, just arrived from the Coast of Africa, with slaves, belonging to us; the following report made to the Medical Society, by a Committee of their body, appointed for the purpose, will, we trust, be deemed a sufficient refutation of a report so void of truth—so injurious in its tendency. GIBSON and BROADFOOT.

"Agreeably to a Resolution of the Medical Society, We the undersigned visited the ship Washington, commanded by capt. Belcher, lately arrived in this port from Africa, with Slaves, and having strictly examined the Crew and Slaves on board the said Ship: Do certify, that we did not discover any symtoms of Measles to be present, as was reported to have existed among them, but, on the contrary, that they are healthful, and the ship unusually clean. M. IRVINE, BENJ. B. SIMONS, SAMUEL WILSON, FREDERICK DALCHO, JOSEPH GLOVER.

"CHARLESTON, 3d December, 1805.—Extract from the minutes of the Medical Society of South Carolina, FREDERICK DALCHO, Sec'ry, Dec. 4." Charleston Courier, Dec. 7, 1805.

[7] On Dec. 31 the Courier reported: "Capt. Brooks left at Matanzas brig Minerva, Brookings, and brig Minerva, Gernon, of this port. Capt. B. informs us that a Brig has recently been captured by a French privateer and carried into Matanzas, with a cargo of slaves, from Nassau. The Captain had gone to Guadaloupe in the privateer. The crew stated her to be an American, and that she had touched at Nassau on her way from the Coast; but as it did not appear from her Log-Book or Papers that she had been to the Coast, it was conjectured that she was an English vessel, from Nassau bound to Jamaica. Two American schooners have recently arrived at Havanna from the Coast of Africa."

377. News Items relating to Slave Trade, 1805.[1]

Capt. Bixby left in the River Gambia brig. Polly, of this port. Left at Senegal 5 weeks since, capt. Williams, in a brig from Baltimore; capt. Brumer in a brig from New York; capt. M'Farlane, in a schooner from Philadelphia. The brig —— Kelly, of New York, was lost the day before Capt. B. left Senegal. Left at Goree, Jan. 5, schooner Republican, Welsh, from this port.

The brig Thomas, Bishop, of this port, had touched at Goree, and proceeded on the Coast.

[376] [1] Annals, 16 Cong., 2 sess., pp. 73-74.

[2] This should be C., not E., Cook. Clark Cook went from Newport to Charleston in February, 1805, to meet an incoming slave vessel. See this work, III. 387.

[3] Swann gives this as a Newport vessel. Newport Mercury, July 27, 1895.

[377] [1] Charleston Courier for the dates given. These items are illustrative of the intelligence communicated to the editor by every incoming captain. Carefully fitted together, such news would make it possible to follow the progress of many of the vessels which left Charleston for Africa throughout their entire voyage.

A great number of American vessels have touched at Goree, for the Coast of Africa—which had made business very dull. Slaves were very high.

Landing at Geyer's Wharf, 75 hhds. New England Rum, suitable for the African Market. Apply to JAMES MILLER, Sen.[2]

April 4, 1805.

In the brig Maria, from Havanna, came two seamen belonging to the sloop Sydney, capt. Gardner, of this port. The Sydney sailed from the River Gambia, about the last of January, with 70 slaves; touched at St. Thomas, where 30 slaves were put on board another vessel—she then sailed for this port, and on the 6th ult. carried away her mast, which tore up the deck, and reduced the vessel to a wreck—two days after, the crew and negroes were taken off the wreck, and carried into Havanna. Capt. Gardner left at Gambia, ship Armed Neutrality, Mason, of this port; brig —— White, do.; brig Polly, Hovey, do. had been very much shattered by the explosion of a bbl. of gun-powder, by which the second mate, and ten slaves, were killed; schooner Republican, Welch, of do.

KINGSTON, (JAM.) September 11 [1805].[3]

The Montezuma Guineaman which was sent in on Monday, by the Rein-Deer brig. Captain Fyfe, was cleared out in Liverpool, and bound for Charleston, with a choice cargo of 328 slaves, from the River Congo. She was boarded by a privateer, who suffered her to precede unmolested, but afterwards taken, on the 9th of August, by the Regulator, of Guadaloupe, who descried her in [the] evening, and ordered her to lay to till the next morning, when she sent a boat's crew on board and took possession. She parted with the privateer on the 20th of the same month, and on the 3rd of September, fell in with the Rein-Deer, to whom she surrendered, within four leagues of Barracoa, with little or no resistance. At the time of her recapture she had 18 of the privateer's crew on board; all their provisions, except a sufficiency for two days, were expended. . . .

[2] Various items from the Courier indicate the development of other lines of commerce dependent upon the traffic in slaves. This was a feature of the trade fairly new to Charleston, since, in the days before the Revolution, few ships had sailed directly from Carolina to the African coast: "For Sale, on Consignment, for Cash or Approved Notes, 160 quarter barrels Gun-Powder, suitable for the African trade. GREGORIE, jun. and SMITH"; "Per sloop Alert, Captain Becket, from Salem, 67 Bales fine Blue Guineas, (or Salempores) Entitled to debenture, suitable for the African Markets, for sale at low prices and on long credit, by THOMAS FLETCHER." Charleston Courier, June 3, Dec. 6, 1805.

[3] The Montezuma, Captain Ives, was owned by William Maine and Robert Mackey of Savannah. The mate, James Crawford, who arrived in Norfolk Aug. 26, reported that the vessel had had on board 343 slaves when she was captured by the Regulator. Ibid., Sept. 6, 1805.

[November 1, 1805.]

The brig. Leon sailed from Charleston and made a voyage to the coast of Africa, and returned to Martinique with Slaves, Mr. John B. de Brux, Supercargo and one half owner, and the other half owner is Mr. Lacoste a merchant in Charleston; he sold his slaves in Martinique and took in Sugars for Charleston; but on his way he put into St. Thomas and sold his Sugars and made a privateer of his brig. . . .[4]

November 18, 1805.

Ship Margaret. Wm. Livingston (late commander). The said Vessel, Cargo, and Provisions, is now offered For Sale, as she lies ready for sea, at Geyer's Wharf, and was to have sailed this day, having already shipped her crew, and will be put up at Auction on Thursday next the 21st inst. if not previously sold by private contract. She is about 347 tons burthen; has been completely sheathed, is perfectly equipped for a voyage to Africa, sails uncommonly fast, and is in every respect well calculated for the African trade. Her sails are mostly new, the greatest part being lately made—were of the best canvas; and, notwithstanding inconsistent reports, she is as sound a vessel as any in this port. Any person inclined to purchase her is referred to Mr. William Pritchard, junior, ship-carpenter, who will candidly give his opinion of the said vessel. The whole will be sold a bargain, for an approved note and indorsed with interest included payable at 6, 9, and 12 months. For inventory, very complete, invoice of merchandize, bill of provisions, and terms, apply to

VERREE and BLAIR.[5]

[4] The Courier of Nov. 4, 1805, published a detailed account of an act of piracy committed by the Speedwell, Captain Cain, with 100 negroes bound from Barbados to Georgia or Carolina. By no means all the vessels which went from Charleston to the African coast reappear in the lists of those bringing slaves to that port: "Capt. Welsh left at Goree, schooner Young Edward, Sabb, for this port, to sail next day" (ibid., May 1, 1805); "Schooner Eagle Duncan, and schooner Edward and Edmund, Shearman, from this port, are arrived on the Coast of Africa" (ibid., June 7); "The Ship Margaret, Livingston, of this port, from Mozambique, via Barbadoes, has arrived at Havanna, with the loss of half her cargo of slaves, by sickness" (ibid., May 10); "They [French privateer L'Emerance, which captured the ship Two Friends] stated that one of the Guineamen which they had taken, bound into this port, had 450 slaves" (ibid., June 7); "The Sloop Independence, Carlton, from this port, has been lost on the coast of Africa, crew saved" (ibid., May 1). "Capt. Vincent left at Rio Pongos, ship Maria, Cooper, of this port, to sail in all August. Capt. Cooper had 40 days passage out; 7 days after leaving this port lost his mate, Mr. Daniel M. Brown." Ibid., Sept. 27, 1805.

[5] On Dec. 13 Verree and Blair advertised for sale the Hamilton, "with all her African materials".

The following items help to answer the question of what became of the stream of slaves pouring into Carolina, certainly far in excess of her need for labor: "Brig Three Sisters, Lindsey, from this port for New Orleans, with slaves has put into Havanna in distress—30 of the slaves having died on the passage"; "Philadelphia, September 23. Arrived at the Lazaretto schooner Fly, M'Farlan, New-Orleans, August 28, in the Mississippi, spoke the . . . schooner Lucy, from Charleston, for Natchez, with slaves. Sept. 8, off Nariel, spoke schooner Comet, from Charleston, out 14 days, bound to Natchez with slaves" (Charleston Courier, Aug. 11, Sept. 11, Oct. 7, 1806). The Lucy had left Charleston July 4, 1806, carrying 50 negroes insured from Charleston to Natchez, the premium 7½ per cent.; the amount of the policy $1800, and 11 negroes for Havana, the premium 5 per cent. On July 24 the Lucy was captured and sent into Nassau. When she was acquitted the 11 negroes were removed as lawful prize; also many of the others had died. The remainder were sold in New Orleans "for 3 or 4000 dollars more than they would have yielded at Nassau". While in Nassau $856.60 were expended for clothes and provisions for the cargo. These negroes belonged to citizens of Charleston and of New Orleans. Catterall, Judicial Cases, II. 298.

[2] In the Courier of Jan. 17 the number is given as 300.

[3] The ships Cleopatra, Daphne, and America were left at Congo River, and were to be ready for sea a fortnight after the sailing of the Æriel. "Ship Minerva was at an out port. capt. Hall heard she would sail in a short time after him." Ibid., Jan. 10, 1806; see also Jan. 17.

[4] The Courier of Jan. 20 reported the arrival at Nassau of the Jane, Munroe, of Bristol, R. I., from Sierra Leone, with 128 slaves for Charleston.

[5] During the year 1806 the following Guineamen were offered for sale in Charleston: America, 272 tons; Daphne, "with all her African materials"; Gustavia; Rolla, 310 tons; Three Friends, 100 tons; Sally, 113 tons; Mercury, 80 tons.

[6] "Agent Mein, Mackay and Co., Savannah."

[7] By Apr. 16 the Doris was again bound for Africa (Courier, Apr. 21, 1806). The suit of Bethune v. Gibson, in which the Doris and her cargo of slaves were attached, probably relates to this sale. The defendants, who were agents of the owners of the vessel, requested by the master to take charge, ordered provisions and clothing for the negroes and published the advertisement for the sale. Catterall, II. 290.

[8] "Mandingos, Soozees, Ballams, Bagos, Naloofe Negroes." This was probably a Gambia cargo.

[10] Word reached Charleston Feb. 10 that the Fair American had arrived on the African coast and would leave about Feb. 1.

"The brig Swan . . . on the 10th instant, early in the morning, got aground at the distance of six miles from the shore of Bull's Island, on this coast. She had on board a cargo of 194 slaves. At nine o'clock . . . she was seen by Captain Jerby of the schooner Victory, who . . . bore down to the vessel, and . . . agreed to take the crew and cargo of negroes on board his schooner . . . the business was completely effected by eight o'clock in the evening: on the following morning at ten o'clock they all arrived safe in Charleston. I decree . . . one fifth to the libellant." Catterall, Judicial Cases, II. 287-288.

[14] A single issue of the Courier (May 31, 1806) contained advertisements of the cargoes of the Love and Unity, Swan, Hector, Ruby, Farnham, Ceres, and Robert. The Hector, a British ship, was reported in the Courier of Apr. 26, as at Angola. Another British vessel, the Fanny, Kennan, with 207 slaves for Charleston, left the coast about the same time, was captured off the Charleston coast, and was driven to [15] Captain Purcell died on the coast. The Port Mary on her voyage to Carolina was twice detained by French privateers (Courier, June 4, 9, 18, 1806). During June several references are made to the presence of a French privateer not far from the Charleston bar, watching for British slavers as they entered or left the Charleston harbor.

WILLIAM PAYNE" (Charleston Courier, Oct. 8, 1806). Not long after this the following notice appeared in the Courier (Oct. 18): "Wanted, A smart, active, sober, honest, intelligent, and well informed Captain, who is well acquainted with the navigation of the Coast of Africa. One who has been employed in the Congo Trade would be preferred, and will meet with a favorable employ, by proving himself qualified, as above.

380. Reply to Criticism of Slave Trade, 1806.[1]

July 10, 1806.

Editorial: We have, for a considerable time past, seen with the utmost indignation, the many scandalous and scurrilous paragraphs which have appeared in several of the Northern papers, against the citizens of this State, for doing that which the laws of their country permit them to do, and for embarking in a trade which the neccessities of the State require. A more extensive cultivation of land from the increase of our population, renders it necessary that more labourers should be employed to till the soil; the advantages of which not only result in private interest, but the two seamen, who were on shore at the time, perished" (Charleston Courier, July 24, 1807). In the suit of Ingraham v. the Insurance Co., decided in 1815, the underwriters were supported in a refusal to pay the claim for the destruction of this vessel. It had been agreed "that the vessel would not go within five hundred miles of Congo, . . . knowing that the people of that part of Africa were much enraged against the captain, and savage-like, would go great lengths to destroy the vessel, on account of his having taken off some of the free natives of that kingdom on his last voyage". Catterall, Judicial Cases, II. 300.

Among the many vessels "spoken" on their voyage to or from Africa the Courier of June 23 referred to the Eleanor, Davidson, as 22 days from Charleston to Africa on May 9; July 4, the Minerva, Gernon, from Charleston bound for Africa. On Oct. 13 it was observed that the Alcide and the Gold Dust from Charleston had not yet reached Africa.

[380] [1] Charleston Courier, July 10, 1806. This is one of a number of editorials which appeared during 1806, which expressed the growing resentment of Carolina against outside criticism of the traffic in slaves, whether it emanated from northern states or from Maryland, Virginia, or North Carolina. See ibid., Jan. 22, July 12, 1806.

public coffers of the nation ultimately feel its beneficial influence. These considerations led to the decision of the Legislature.

It is not for us now to call in question the morality of the trade, for our readers will recollect that we have uniformly opposed the introduction of so many new negroes, as repugnant to the principles of sound policy, as well as of morality; or, in the emphatic language of our Governor, because, "it increases our weakness, and not our strength". The delegates of the people when sitting in solemn general assembly, deemed it essentially necessary for the interest of the state to permit the importation of slaves from Africa, and those merchants who embark in this trade, do no more than carry the intentions and wishes of the government of their country into operation.

Readers! mark the following paragraph, copied from a Philadelphia paper of June 13. After quoting the paragraph from our paper of the 31st of May last, relative to the pardon of Valentine, under the gallows, for negro stealing, the Editor proceeds—"From the same paper we have selected the following advertisements, offering for sale, publicly, and in the face of day, one thousand seven hundred and eleven human beings, Stolen from Africa, and no effort is made to bring to justice the detestable Thieves who dragged them, by violence, from their native homes!" Then follow the advertisements at full length, of Gibson and Broadfoot, Henry and John Ker, John Watson and Co., Wm. Boyd, John S. Adams, T. W. Rawlinson, etc.

The only truth contained in the Editor's observations is, the number of Slaves offered for sale. The rest is a flourish to catch the feelings of the ignorant, at the expense of truth; and as to the epithet of thieves, which he applies to those who bring Slaves from Africa, we shall presently see whether we cannot apply it to the pure, the immaculate, and demure Philadelphian, and some other of the Northern cities, where they are bellowing out, humanity! humanity! humanity! Oh! the rights of dear insulted human nature!

On the 14th of February last there were at Monteveido, in the River Plate, the following vessels, with Slaves from Mozambique and the Gold Coast.

—— Ship Juliana, Nicols of Boston
—— Pigou, Collet of Philadelphia
—— Swift, Mayberry of Newport
—— Espasia, Moore of Philadelphia
—— Ann, Donaldson of Newport
—— John, Watson of Charleston

Out of six slave ships from the coast:
Two belonged to Philadelphia
One to Boston
Two to Newport
One to Charleston

Of these, the one from Charleston was the only one which was authorized to slave by the laws of his country. Neither Philadelphia, Boston, or Newport, are authorized by the laws of their respective states, to equip vessels for slave voyages—and yet it is a fact known to every citizen of Charleston, that where there is one ship belonging to this port, employed in the slave trade, there are three vessels from the northern states. If villainy is to be attached to the characters of those who engage in this trade, under the sanction of the laws of their country, what epithet shall we apply to those reptiles, who, in defiance of the laws of their state, and in defiance of the opinions of their fellow-citizens, engage in, to them, an unlawful and prohibited commerce? Such fellows would set their country in a blaze for money, and then run away by the light of it.[2] . . .

381. Governor Charles Pinckney to the House of Representatives, 1806.[1]

November 26, 1806.

. . . Again, permit me to solicit your attention to the law authorising the importation of Slaves. Were I to address you, gentlemen, in terms suited to all my feelings on this subject, I might perhaps, be considered as expressing myself in some instances, ungraciously, which far be from me; yet using the latitude, which the constitution allows me, I recommend to you most earnestly, a prohibition of this trade. I mentioned in my communication at your last session, that it was draining our country of specie, and involving us in pecuniary distress: Subsequent experience confirms the truth of [2] The remainder of the editorial attacks an advertisement for the sale of "a German boy" which appeared in the Philadelphia paper under consideration.

[381] [1] Charleston Courier, Dec. 1, 1806. A bill prohibiting the importation of foreign negroes was introduced into the house late in the year 1805. The sentiment of the house was strongly in favor of it but it was lost in the senate on Dec. 14 (ibid., Dec. 9, 16, 18, 19, 1805). The debate in the senate was reported by Edward Hooker, sojourning in Columbia. On Dec. 2 the speakers were Keating Simons, Alston, Miles, Taylor, and John Izard Wright, the first two speaking for prohibition of the traffic. The arguments against it were: the material loss to the state by shutting out the negro, the impossibility of preventing smuggling, and the unfairness to the poor man who had as yet been unable to supply himself with negroes. On the 9th the debate was renewed by Izard, who attempted to prove that the scarcity of specie had no relation to the slave trade but was caused by the premium on the East India trade, which drew specie from South Carolina to England and New England. "Diary of Edward Hooker", Am. Hist. Assn., Annual Report, 1896, I. 867-870, 873-874, 878-880.

this assertion. The eagerness of purchasers, and the failure of crops generally, throughout the state, are in evidence, also, that this trade is becoming every day, more mischievous. Let us, therefore, remove tem[p]tation from the eyes of our citizens, cease to practice what every other state in the union discountenances; and let us shew our moderation by abstaining, while we may of our own will, from a traffic, which it is the attribute of another power, shortly, to interdict, if that power shall so determine. My own mind tells me that it is for very many reasons, wrong. I believe that the general sentiment of the community, is at this time against it; but you gentlemen, will determine, and I doubt not that your decision will be made on principles, not merely of interest, but also of morality. With our laws, such as they should be, and you can make them, an increase of morals throughout the community, and a genuine attachment to our happy constitution must be produced, and with the means of defence in the hands of every man, and a well regulated military system, firmly relying on him, in whose hands are the destinies of nations, fearing no evil or danger, we can confidently await events.[2]

[2] A bill was brought into the house to prevent the introduction of negro slaves, and was carried in its second reading with but two dissenting votes. In the senate it failed to reach a second reading by a tie vote. Charleston Courier, Dec. 16, 17, 24, 1806.

[382] [1] Lambert gives the importation for the year as 15,676 (Travels, II. 165). The importation reported in the Courier is as follows:

Mar.	21,	62	Apr.	19,	539	May	23,	535	July	4,	242	Aug.	29,	180	Nov.	28,	120	Dec.	19, 120 (Mozambique)

[2] On July 6, 1806, the James was spoken, then 27 days out from Charleston on her voyage to Africa (Courier, Aug. 5, 1806). One cargo of forty slaves, insured for $250 each from St. Thomas to Charleston, never reached that port. On Feb. 23, 1807, the captain of the vessel wrote to Teasdale that he had put in to St. Thomas for water and repairs, that his sloop was wrecked and that the negroes had been placed on the Charlotte and sold in Havana, his reason being that freight for Charleston commanded extravagant rates because of the danger from French privateers. The 37 that lived to be sold commanded $4685. Catterall, Judicial Cases, II. 289-290.

[3] C. W. Jansen, in The Stranger in America (1807, p. 359), gives copies of three advertisements of Gibson and Broadfoot, and William Boyd, the total amounting to 880 negroes.

[4] The Nancy, Vial, was noted in the Courier of Nov. 10 as having sailed from Senegal for Charleston, her second voyage in 1807. On Nov. 28 it was reported that she had been captured and carried into Tortola. For her case, see this work, III. 394-404.

[5] The Courier of Apr. 27 reported that the Minerva had lost 120 slaves on her passage.

[6] The Courier, Nov. 10, 1806, reported the arrival of the Leander in Gambia. She was apparently attempting to bring in one more cargo before the market closed.

[7] Ten years later trouble arose over the sales of Christian and De Wolf in 1807 or 1808. From a cargo assigned to them by Watson they had sold 14 to Whalley, valued at $8280. Whalley, who later failed in England, apparently never paid for his slaves. Catterall, II. 304.

[8] Courier, Dec. 7. The Hindoston, Commerce, Charlotte, and Albert, all from Africa, were anchored off the bar.

[9] It may have been this Mercury whose captain was involved in the complicated transactions described in Catterall, II. 305.

[10] During 1807 fifty-six public auctions were announced in the Courier, the largest number named being 100 Congo negroes.

[2] Swann gives the Mary and the Edward and Edmund as Rhode Island vessels.

[3] This vessel sailed again for Africa on June 16, 1807, directed not to remain on the coast longer than four months. On Sept. 5 the captain wrote that his goods were unsaleable and that there were no less than 300 sail on the coast. He touched at Senegal and Goree, then traded in the Gambia, where he lost part of his crew and purchased but 86 slaves. Too late to reach the Carolina market, he proceeded to Matanzas. There his vessel was grounded and lost. Catterall, II. 302-303.

Pike was captain of the Heart of Oak, Lovel was doubtless the captain sent from Salem to the Isles de Los and to Sierra Leone in January, 1806, with instructions not to trade in slaves. [6] "Here, sir, ends the black catalogue. It would show to the Senate, that those people who most deprecate the evils of slavery and traffic in human flesh, when a profitable market can be found, can sell human flesh with as easy a conscience as they sell other articles. The whole number imported by the merchants and planters of Charleston and its vicinity were only two thousand and six. Nor were the slaves imported by the foreigners, and other American vessels and owners, sold to the Carolinians, only in a small part. They were sold to the people of the Western States, Georgia, New Orleans, and a considerable quantity were sent to the West Indies, especially when the market became dull in Carolina" (Annals, 16 Cong., 2 sess., p. 73). Lambert's total is 39,310.

A Jury of Inquest was held on Monday last, on the body of a Negro Man, found floating by Benjamin Johnson's new wharf; supposed to be an African, and thrown overboard from some slave ship in the harbour, to save the expense of burial. The jury brought in a verdict, that he came to his death by the visitation of God.

A Jury of Inquest was held yesterday, on the body of an African [384] [1] Charleston Courier, Jan. 6, 15, Feb. 2, 26, Mar. 5, Apr. 8, 21, 22, June 1, July 23, Dec. 9, 1807. Slavers offered for sale during 1807: Feb. 23, Rio, 170 tons, to be sold at Savannah; May 18, Leander, capacity, 250 slaves; June 29, schooner Eliza, 95 tons; June 30, Amazon, 153 tons, with or without her African materials; July 8, Heroine, 201 tons, "with all materials complete for that trade", also James, Speculation, Nancy, Three Friends, Concord, John, Hiram. An "African boiler", water casks, handcuffs, a "complete Platform carrying negroes, suitable for a vessel of about 100 tons", and prime Georgia tobacco for the African market were all offered for sale during the year. On June 29 Nathan Bixby advertised for a cooper for Africa.

[2] One peculiarly revolting accompaniment of the importation of these years is suggested by a city ordinance which appeared in the Courier of Nov. 22, 1805: "Whereas since the importation of Slaves from Africa, several incidents have occured of dead human bodies having been thrown into the waters of the Harbour of Charleston; and whereas such practices are extremely disgraceful, and ought to be prevented by their severest penalties that can be inflicted by the City Council", a fine of $100 was imposed on any person throwing a dead body into any of the rivers of the harbor. See also Courier, Aug. 24, 1807.

Negro, found floating in Pritchard's dock. It appeared to be one thrown overboard from one of the slave ships from Africa, now in the harbour. A practice too prevalent among the captains, and disgraceful to humanity. The jury brought in a verdict, that he came to his death by the visitation of God.

April 21, 1807.

A Jury of Inquest was held on Sunday afternoon, on the body of an African negro woman, found floating near the Market dock—it appeared to the jurors, from its having on the usual dress, of a blue flannel frock, to have belonged to one of the slave ships in the harbour, and thrown into the river, to save the expense of burial; a custom too prevalent in this port with the officers of slave ships, and in itself shocking to humanity. The jury brought in a verdict, that she came to her death by the visitation of God. And the coroner begs leave to remind the seamen and petty officers of those ships, that the City Council have passed an Ordinance, prohibiting so inhuman and brutal a custom, and have offered a reward of One Hundred Dollars, to any person or persons, who will give information, so that the offender or offenders, may be prosecuted to conviction, and their names exposed to the good citizens of this state. The Coroner has received information that there are at this time, the bodies of three or more of these poor wretches floating about Hog-Island, and the marshes opposite the city—the effluvia arrising from which, must be very prejudicial to the health of passengers in boats, passing and repassing them daily.

April 22, 1807.

A Jury of Inquest was held yesterday, on the body of an African Negro woman, found floating at Craft's north wharf. The jury brought in a verdict, that she came to her death by the visitation of God—and supposed her to belong to some of the slave ships in this harbour, and thrown into the river, to save expense of burial.

385. Case of the Cleopatra, 1807.[1]

January 16, 1807.

We are informed that the crew of the ship Cleopatra, Captain Butman, which arrived in this port on Sunday last from the River Congo, have made oath before James Bentham, Esq. of the barbarous and inhuman treatment which they received during their voyage, from Captain Butman and Mr. Lawson, the supercargo. It appears from their evidence, that three seamen were killed on the passage, and that those who have returned are much maimed from their ill-treatment, and that some of them have been burnt in the face with firebrands, and others were beat with hammers: one man had his arm twisted round nearly out of its socket, another was torn by the dogs, which were purposely set upon him. Thirteen of these unfortunate men have been carried to the Marine Hospital, two of whom it is supposed will die—and another is to have his arm amputated. The seamen are foreigners. Captain Butman and Mr. Lawson, are both commited to goal. We feel it to be our duty, as faithful journalist, to lay these circumstances before our readers; we hope for the honor of human nature, that the account will prove to be in some degree exaggerated.

[385] [1] Charleston Courier, Jan. 16, 17, May 29, 1807.

January 17, 1807.

In addition to the statement which we published yesterday, of the cruelties committed upon the crew of the ship Cleopatra, we have now to inform our readers, that Daniel Saunders, the boatswain, was yesterday morning committed to goal, upon the affadavit of the Surgeon's Mate, charging him of having killed one of the seamen by the name of Anderson, and that two men have died in the Marine Hospital of the wounds they received on the passage. The Juries of Inquest brought in the following verdicts:

A Jury of Inquest was held on Thursday last, in the Marine Hospital, on the body of Oluff Groning, a native of Sweden, and a mariner of the ship Cleopatra, capt. John Butman and R. V. Lawson supercargo, from Africa, with slaves. The Jury brought in the verdict as follows, That said deceased (Oluff Groning) came to his death by cruel and ill-treatment from the said Captain and R. V. Lawson, the supercargo, by severe beatings, and particularly Mr. Lawson—stabbing him under the left arm with the Tormentors, or Cook's Fork; it having entered the thorax, by which he languished and died; there being also the marks of eight blows inflicted on his arms, hand and foot, said to have been received from said Lawson with a billet of fire-wood and the pump-bolt, on board said vessel.

A Jury of Inquest was held yesterday morning on the body of Daniel Meyer, a native of Denmark, and a mariner of the ship Cleopatra. The Jury brought in the verdict—That said deceased came to his death by the cruel and ill treatment, wounds and bruises, particularly by the Captain's twisting and bruising his right arm, from which a mortification took place; and a number of bruises on his arms and legs, which deprived him of the use of them—inflicted by Mr. Lawson and the Captain jointly, on board; of which he died in the Marine Hospital on Thursday evening.

We stated in our paper of the 16th January, that the crew of the ship Cleopatra, which had just arrived from Africa, had made affidavits before James Bentham, esq. that, in consequence of the cruelties exercised upon them by capt. Butman, the master, and Mr. Lawson, the supercargo of that ship, three men had died on board, and that the rest were miserably bruised and maimed: we at the same time expressed our hopes that these accounts, given by the seamen, were exaggerated. The trial of Capt. Butman and Mr. Lawson came on in the Circuit Court on Monday last, before their Honours Judges Johnson and Bee, upon three indictments for murder, and several for assault; when it was satisfactorily proved to the Jury, that they were not only innocent of the crime of murder, but that the assaults, to which they pleaded guilty, were, in some measure, rendered necessary by the state of the slaves; That coersive measures were necessarily resorted to, to compel the seamen to do their duty, and that the wounds and bruises which they said had been inflicted on them by their officers, were the effect of disease. They consequently were acquitted. We understand that three of the crew, who were witnesses on the part of the prosecution, have been committed for trial, by the Court, for unlawful conduct during the prosecution.

Smith, bound for Barbadoes; treated politely; at 19. 20. long. 52.

List of vessels left at Rio Pongus:

Ship Eleanor, M'Grath, to sail for this port 20th Oct.
Ship Fourth of July, Brown, uncertain
Ship Heart of Oak, ——, unknown
Ship Tartar, Taylor, uncertain
Brig Jupiter, Beaton, 20th Oct.
Schooner Tryal, ——, 20th do.
Schooner Mary Ann, Miller, ready for sea
Schooner Kitty, M'Cawley, 20th Oct.
Brig Little Watt, Clark, Rhode Island, just arrived

Coming over the bar, saw a brig standing in, supposed to be the Washington, Grant, from Gambia.

Brig Sally, Shearman, was in Rio Noonas; to leave the Coast 1st Nov.

Brig Venus, Preble, was to leeward.

Schooner Aurora, captain and mate both dead, was to leeward.

Brig Polly, Hubbell, of Charleston, from Marseilles, said to be bound to Cape Mount, has arrived at Isle de Los.

The ship Betsy and Polly, capt. Bradley, was stranded on the 4th October, near Dr. Butterford's Factory—the ship was taken by the counter tide, when dropping down the river, with boats towing of her, and went upon the rocks; every effort was made to get the ship off before the tide fell, but without effect; when the flood tide made the ship was got off the rocks, but found to be so much injured in her bottom and keel, that there was not a doubt but she would be condemned—the ship had upwards of 300 slaves on board; all saved.

Every vessel in the Rio Pongus is much in want of rice for their slaves and not a ton to be got there. There was no doubt but the greater part would have to go to the Leeward to procure rice, which was very scarce there.

English ship Hind, M'Bride, had been laying ten months in the river. Her Doctor, Sailing Master Mate, Second Mate and Boatswain, had attempted to kill the captain, and go off with the ship, but were detected, by the Doctor's confessing every thing, and all were confined in irons. The Hind had buried about 70 slaves.

The English brig Byam, Williams, had been eight months in the river—most of her people runaway.

388. Case of the Amedie, 1807.[1]

Before the Most Noble and Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of Appeals in Prize Causes.

The Amedie, James Johnson, late Master, Martin Robin, formerly Master.

James Johnson, the Master and Claimant of the Ship and Cargo, consisting of 103 African Slaves, as the sole Property of Samuel Grove, a Citizen of the United States of America — Appellant.

James Bennett, Esq. Commander of his Majesty's Ship Swinger, the Captor, and Charles Bishop, Esq. His Majesty's Procurator-General — Respondents.

(An Appeal from Tortola.)

Appellant's Case.

This is an American Ship, the sole Property of Samuel Grove, of Charleston, Merchant, a Citizen of the United States of America, by whom she was laden at Charleston, with a Cargo of Dry Goods, and [388] [1] Vice admiralty briefs in the possession of the Marine Research Society. For the privilege of examining these records and of printing large parts of them the editor is indebted to the great generosity of Mr. George Francis Dow of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. other Merchandize, also his sole Property, destined to Bonny, on the Coast of Africa, to bring back a Cargo of Slaves, with Directions to the Master, should any Occurrence render it impossible for him to return to Charleston before the 1st of January, 1808, (after which Period the Importation of Slaves into America was prohibited by a Law of the United States), then to proceed to the Port of Matanzas, in the Island of Cuba, where he would receive Instructions to regulate his future Proceedings.

The Vessel arrived at Bonny on or about the 1st October, 1807, where the Cargo was sold, and the Proceeds invested in the Purchase of Slaves for the same Proprietor, with which the Vessel sailed from Bonny, on the 1st November, 1807, destined to Charleston; but the Master, finding he could not possibly reach Charleston before the 1st January, 1808, altered the Course for Matanzas, and, on or about the 20th December, 1807, the Vessel was captured near St. Thomas, by his Majesty's Brig Swinger, James Bennett, Esq. Commander, and carried to Tortola, and in the Vice-Admiralty Court there Proceedings were instituted against the Ship and Cargo as Prize.

On the 15th January, 1808, a Claim was given by James Johnson, the Master, for the Ship and Cargo, consisting of 103 African Slaves, as the Property of the said Samuel Grove.

On the 10th February, the Judge pronounced the Ship and Cargo of Slaves to be liable to confiscation, and condemned the Ship as Prize to the Captor, and the Slaves as Prize to the sole Use of His Majesty; and directed 1000 Dollars to be paid out of the Proceeds to the said Master, in lieu of his Privilege and Interest in the said Cargo.

From this Condemnation an Appeal has been duly made by the said Master and Claimant; and an Appearance having been given for the Respondent and the usual Proceedings had, the Cause has been assigned for Sentence.

Preparatory Examinations.

James Johnson, the Master, says, to the 1st Interrogatory, He is a Citizen of the United States.[2]

3. That the Capture was made about sixty Miles to the Southward and Westward of St. Thomas, on the 21st or 22d Day of this present Month; he believes that the Reason of the Capture was owing to the Vessel's being bound to Matanzas, in the Island of Cuba.

4. That he appointed himself to the Command of the Vessel, in Consequence of the Death of Martin Robin, the former Master,

[2] The marginal notes have been omitted throughout this brief. The preliminary examinations took place Dec. 28-30, 1807. Johnson was born in New York but for the past seven years had lived in Charleston.

who died some Days after the Departure of the Vessel from Bonny, on the Coast of Africa; the late Master was appointed by Samuel Groves; took Possession of her in Charleston.[3]

7. That the present Voyage is the only Voyage that the Deponent has been in the Vessel; it was from Charlston to Bonny, on the Coast of Africa; it is a Settlement exclusively the Property of the Natives, and the Deponent did not see nor does he believe that there are any Whites settled there; her last Voyage began at Charleston, in South Carolina, bound to Bonny; at which Port she took on board her present Lading, with which she was proceeding to Matanzas, at which Place he expected to receive Orders from Mr. Samuel Groves respecting the Disposal of the Cargo; when the Vessel left Bonny it was the Intention of the former Master to proceed to Charleston, provided he could have reached there by the 1st Day of the ensuing Month; and it was Deponent's Intention, after the Death of Captain Robin, to get there if possible by the Time before mentioned, but, on the 22d of the present Month (as near as he can recollect), finding that he could not possibly reach Charleston by the 1st of January next, he determined to proceed to Matanzas as before mentioned; he therefore cannot say where the Voyage would have ended.

8. That her Lading consists of 103 Slaves; they were taken on board at the Port of Bonny, between the 12th Day of September, and the 1st Day of November last past.

9. That Samuel Groves was the Owner of the Vessel, which he knows from his having cleared the Vessel out of the Custom-House, at Charleston, in that Quality.

12. That Martin Robin was the Lader of the present Cargo; Samuel Groves was the Owner thereof, and in Case the said Vessel had gone to Charleston, it would have been consigned to him, but at present he does not know who would have been the Consignee, as he does not know to what Port she would have been ordered to dispose of the Cargo; Mr. Groves is a Native of America, as Deponent believes; he lives in Charleston, and carries on Business there as a Merchant; he does not know how long he has resided there, or where he resided before; he does not know at what Port the present Lading would have been delivered at, in consequence of the Vessel being bound to Matanzas, at which Place he expected to find Orders respecting the Vessel and Cargo, and in Case he had not found Orders there on his Arrival, he would have waited for them; Deponent intended to do so, in consequence of Instructions given to the former Master, and which are now in the Possession of the Captors; he does take upon himself to swear, that he believes that at the Time of Lading the present Cargo, now, and if it shall be restored and unladen at the destined Port, it did, does, and will belong to Samuel Groves before named, and to no other Person; he knows it from his having shipped the outward Cargo, of which the present one is the Return; Captain Robin had a small Boy, besides his wearing Apparel, 18 Doubloons, and a Watch, the Doubloons are in Deponent's possession.

[3] The vessel, with a burden of 111 tons, was navigated by eleven seamen at the time of her capture. Seven of these were natives of New Orleans. Two seamen, in addition to the master, had died on the voyage.

13. That there was no Bill of Lading.

15. That there was no Charter-Party for the Voyage.

20. That in Case the Vessel had arrived at her destined Port, and the Cargo had been there unladen, it would have remained the Property of Samuel Groves, until sold at Matanzas, or at what Port it would have been sold.

29. That the Vessel was steering toward Matanzas when captured; her Course was altered in order to speak the Brig by which she was taken, but not otherwise; her Course was at all Times directed towards the Port of Charleston, to which Place she was destined, to the best of Deponent's Knowledge and Ability, until the 22d Day of the present Month, or thereabouts, when Deponent found that he was not likely to reach Charleston by the 1st Day of the ensuing Month, when he bore up for the Port of Matanzas, agreeably to the Instructions he found on board at the Death of Captain Robin, the former Master.

31. That there are no Guns mounted; there are five or six Muskets, two Blunderbusses, and eight Cutlasses, a Keg of Gunpowder, and some small Shot on board; she was thus armed to keep the Slaves in subjection.[4]

32. That he has declared the Whole of what he knows and believes, according to the best of his Knowledge and Belief, regarding the real and true Property and Destination of the Vessel and her Cargo at the Time of Capture.

33. That the Brig has not sailed under Convoy of any Ship of War or other armed Vessel.

34. That the Brig has not sailed to, or attempted to enter, any blockaded Port.

Joseph Carriere, the Mate,[5] says to the fourth Interrogatory, That the late Master was named Martin Robin; he was appointed to the Command by Samuel Groves, of Charleston, the Owner of the said Brig; that the said Master took Possession of her at Charleston, about five Months ago, and Possession was delivered to him by the said Owner.

[4] This was the usual equipment of the slavers taken as prizes.

[5] The mate was to have received $1000 for his voyage from Charleston to Africa and return.

7. That she sailed from Charleston some Time in the Beginning of August, last, laden with a Cargo of Dry Goods, Invoice at about 12000 Dollars, including all Charges, cleared out for and bound to Bonny, on the Coast of Africa, as her Place of Trade; that she sailed in Company with the Ship Semiramis, of Charleston, Collins, Master, and belonging to the same Owner that the present Vessel does; that both Vessels arrived at Bonny about the 1st Day of October following; that a Captain Joseph Scott, who went out from Charleston in the said Ship Semiramis to Bonny, acted as the Supercargo of both Vessels, appointed by the Owner; that the said Joseph Scott, upon her Arrival at Bonny, sold the Cargoes of both Vessels, and invested the Proceeds in the Purchase of Slaves; that 110 were purchased as the Cargo of the said Brig, and as the Returns of her outward Cargo; that at Bonny one died, and another was drowned; that they sailed from thence on the 1st Day of November last, with 108 Slaves on board; that five of them died on the Voyage, and one since the Capture; that the Master, Martin Robin, he believes died on the 5th Day after their leaving Bonny; that the said Voyage began at Charleston, and was to have ended there, upon the Return of the said Brig; that the late Master had in his Letter of Instructions from the Owner, that if he could not reach Charleston by the last Day of December, he was to put into Matanzas, in the Island of Cuba, there to meet his further Instructions upon which he was to be guided; that the present is the only Voyage he has been upon in the said Vessel.

8. That two Bales of Dry Goods, Part of her outward Lading, still remain on board, which was not disposed of.

9. That Samuel Grove is the sole Owner of the said Brig; he knows him to be so from his giving Directions concerning her at Charleston, when she was there.

12. That Joseph Scott, above-named, the Supercargo of both Vessels, was the Lader of the said Slaves; that he is an Englishman by Birth, and resides in some Port of Great Britain; that he came out to Charleston, where Mr. Grove offered him the Appointment of Supercargo of the said two Vessels, and he accepted it; that the said Grove is the Owner and Consignee of the said Slaves, but he does not know where they were to be delivered, as the Letter of Instructions to the late Master directed, that in Case he could not reach Charleston by the last day of December, he was to proceed to Matanzas, in the Island of Cuba, there to find further Instructions, by which he was to act; that the said Cargo is on the real Account, Risk, and Benefit, of the said Samuel Grove; that Scott, the Lader, has no Interest in the same beyond the Commission he was to derive thereon to his Knowledge; that both Vessels sailed from Bonny together, under the same Instructions; that they parted Company of a dark Night, about ten Days after sailing, and never saw each other again; that he does take upon himself to swear, that he believes that at the Time of the Lading the said Cargo of Slaves, now, and if it shall be restored and unladen at Charleston, or any other Port, it did, does, and will belong to the said Samuel Grove, and to none other; that he believes it was the Determination of the present Master to proceed to Matanzas, according to his Instructions, as the Time was growing short, and as he was limited, not to proceed on for Charleston, unless he could make that Port before the last Day of December; that if he arrived after that Day, the Vessel and Cargo, according to a late Law of the United States, would be liable to Confiscation; that he believes the said Grove to be sole Owner of the said Cargo, as he was the Owner and Shipper of the outward Cargo, and the present is in Return for the same, to the best of his Knowledge.

20. That in Case the said Brig had arrived at her destined Port of Charleston, or any other Port, and the Cargo had been there unladen, it would have remained the Property of the said Samuel Grove, until sold; that he was to have taken the Chance of the Market of any Place the said Brig might have gone to, to effect a Sale of the said Slaves.

29. That the Brig was steering due West when she was pursued and taken, with the Wind about East-North-East; that their Course was direct for the West Indies, for the first Land they could make, in order to take their Departure from thence for Matanzas, to meet the Owner's Instructions; her Course was not altered upon the Appearance of the Man of War; that when they sailed from Bonny their Course was directed for Charleston, but as the Time grew short it was altered for Matanzas, according to the Instructions of the Owner before named; that it was about the 15th Day of December they altered their Course for Matanzas, in Consequence of seeing by the Latitude the Distance they had to run, and thinking it impossible to reach Charleston before the last Day of December, the Time they were limited to arrive there.

Rena Jena, a Seaman, says to the 9th Interrogatory, that Mr. De Poe was the Owner of the Vessel at the Time of Capture; he does not know his Christian Name; he knows it from having heard Captain Robin, her former Master, say so; he does not know, but believes that Mr. De Poe is an American by Birth, and he believes it from having heard her late Master say so; he lives in Charleston; he does [not] know if he is married; he does not know how long he has lived there, or where he lived before; he is a Citizen of America.

12. That Captain Robin, the late Master of the Vessel, was the Lader of the present Cargo; Mr. De Poe is the Owner thereof; he does not know to whom it was consigned; Mr. De Poe is an American by Birth; he lives in Charleston, and carries on Business there as a Merchant; he does not know how long he has lived there, or where he lived before; the present Cargo was to have been delivered at Charleston, upon the real Account, Risk, and Benefit of Mr. De Poe before named; he does take upon himself to swear, that he believes that, at the Time of the Lading the present Cargo, now, and if it shall be restored and unladen at Charleston, the Port of Destination, it did, does, and will belong to Mr. De Poe, and to no other Person or Persons; he grounds his Knowledge thereof from having heard Captain Robin, her former Master say so.

29. That he believes the Vessel was steering for Charleston at the Time of Capture; her Course was not altered upon the Appearance of the Vessel by which she was taken.

Thomas Seaborn, a Mariner, says, to the 9th Interrogatory, That he believes Mr. Groves (does not know his Christian Name) to be the sole Owner of the Brig; he believes so from his shipping and employing Deponent; does not know what Countryman he is by Birth, but he resides and does Business as a Merchant at Charleston.

12. That he believes the former Master, Martin Robin, was the Lader of the said Cargo, and he also believes that Mr. Groves is the Owner and Consignee of the same, and that the Slaves were to be delivered to him at Charleston, on his real Account, Risk, and Benefit; he does not know if the said Lader had any Interest in the said Slaves; that he does take upon himself to swear, that he believes that, at the Time of the lading the said Cargo, now, and if it shall be restored and unladen at the destined Port of Charleston, it did, does, and will belong to the said Mr. Groves, and to none other; that he founds his Knowledge from his being the Shipper and Owner of the outward Cargo, and he believes the present is in return for the same.[6]

. . . . . .

On the Part of the Claimant and Appellant, it is humbly hoped that the Condemnation appealed from will be reversed, and the Ship and Cargo, or the Value thereof, decreed to be restored as claimed, for the following, among other

REASONS,

Because the said Ship and Cargo clearly appear to belong to the American Citizen for whom they are claimed.

Amedie — I. Johnson Wr Bishop } For Judgment

Townley

The Lords pronounced against the appeal affirmed the Sentance appealed from and remitted the Cause.

Before the Most Noble and Right Honorable the Lords Commissioners of Appeals in Prize Causes.

Amedie, James Johnson, Master.

James Johnson, the Master, Claimant of the Ship and Cargo, consisting of 103 Slaves, as the Property of Samuel Groves, described a Citizen of the United States, } Appellant, James Bennett, Esq. Commander of His Majesty's Ship Swinger, the Captor, and His Majesty's Procurator-General, } Respondents.

Appeal from Tortola.
Respondents' Case.

This Vessel, under American Colours, sailed from Charleston for Bonny, a Settlement on the Coast of Africa, with a Cargo of Dry Goods, Rum, and Gunpowder, which Cargo was bartered there for 103 Slaves, with which the Vessel was proceeding to Matanzas in the Island of Cuba, when she was captured on the 22d December, 1807, by His Majesty's Brig Swinger, James Bennett, Esq. Commander, and carried to Tortola, where the usual Proceedings were instituted against the Vessel and Slaves as Prize.

A Claim of James Johnson, the Master, was given for the Vessel and Cargo, as the Property of Samuel Groves, described a Citizen of the United States of America.[8]

The Cause came on for Hearing, when the Judge having heard Counsel on both Sides, assigned the Cause for Sentence whensoever.

The Judge assigned his Reasons, and pronounced the Ship and Cargo of Slaves, Natives of Africa, to have belonged, at the Time of the Capture, to Enemies of Great Britain, and condemned the Ship as Prize to the Captors, and the Slaves to the sole Use of His Majesty; and directed 1000 Dollars to be paid out of the Proceeds to the Master, in lieu of his Privilege and Interest in the Cargo.

From this Sentence the Claimant appealed, and the Evidence in the Cause is as follows:[9]

The Appeal having been proceeded in now comes for Hearing; and it is humbly hoped, on the Part of the Respondents, that your Lordships will be pleased to pronounce against the Appeal, and affirm the Sentence appealed from, with Costs, for the following, among other

REASONS.

1st. Because the Ship was proceeding from Africa, with a Cargo there laden, to Matanzas in the Island of Cuba, being a Port of a Colony then belonging to His Majesty's Enemies, contrary to the Prohibitions of the Order of His Majesty in Council of the 11th Day of November, 1807.

2d. Because the Voyage was contrary to the prohibitory Laws of the United States of America, made for abolishing the Slave Trade, which have been officially notified to your Lordships by the Act of the American Government, in the Case of the Chance, Brown Master; and although such Laws of a Foreign State may not amount to a direct or substantive Ground of Condemnation in a Court of Prize, yet they may and ought to exclude an American Claimant from the Benefit of those Relaxations of the Law of War which, in Favour of Neutral States, have been introduced by His Majesty's Instructions, in regard to their Commerce with the Colonies of His Majesty's Enemies; a Privilege which can only be understood to be granted to Neutral Governments as a Branch of their National Commerce, and not as an Invitation to lawless Individuals to engage in a Trade which the Neutral State itself has prohibited, and desires to discourage.

3d. Because Thomas Scott, the Supercargo and Lader of the Slaves, is admitted to have an Interest therein, which is liable to Confiscation, he being a British Subject, by the Stat. 46 George 3d. cap. 52.[10]

4th. Because there is strong Ground to presume that the Case is fraudulent, and that the Property belonged, at the Time of Cap-consisting of 103 African Slaves, at the Time of the Capture thereof by His Majesty's Ship Swinger, Lieutenant James Bennett, Commander, and brought into the Port of Tortola; for the said Brig, her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, and the Cargo so laden on board, as the sole Property of an American Citizen, and as aforesaid, and for all such Freight, Costs, Charges, Damages, Demurrages, and Expences, as have arisen, or shall or may arise, by reason of the Capture and Detention of the same.

SIMPSON, JAMES JOHNSON.

TORTOLA,
Vice Admiralty Prize Court.

On the 15th Day of January 1808.

Brig Amedee, —— Johnson, Master.

Appeared personally James Johnson, and made Oath, That he is a Citizen of the United States of America, and was Master of the said Brig Amedee at the Time of the Capture thereof by His Majesty's Ship Swinger, Lieutenant James Bennett, Commander, and that the said Brig was so captured on or about the 22d Day of December last past, in the Prosecution of her Voyage from Bonny, on the Coast of Africa, to Matanzas, in case he could not make his Voyage to Charlestown, previous to the 31st Day of December last past, when he was to wait for Orders, with a Cargo of 103 African Slaves: And he further made Oath, That Samuel Groves, a Citizen of the United States of America, was, at the said Capture, and now is, and, if restored, will be the true, lawful, and sole Owner and Proprietor of the said Brig, her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, and of the Cargo laden on board at the Capture aforesaid: And, lastly, the Deponent saith, That no Person or Persons, being a Subject or Subjects, Citizen or Citizens, of the Republic or Empire of France, or of the King of Denmark, or of the Batavian, or Ligurian, or Italian Republics, or a Subject or Subjects of the King of Spain, or the Elector of Bavaria, their Factors or Agents, or any other Person or Persons, an Enemy or Enemies of the Crown of Great Britain, had at the Time of the Capture, or now have, or, if restored, will have in the said Brig, her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, and the Cargo so laden on board, or if the same had arrived at its destined Port, would have had, directly or indirectly, any Right, Title, or Interest in the same, or in any Part thereof; and that the Claim hereunto annexed is a true and just Claim, and he will be able to make due Proof thereof, as he, this Attestant, verily believes.

JAMES JOHNSON.

United States of America, State of SOUTH CAROLINA, City of CHARLESTOWN.

Be it known unto all whom it may concern, that on this 30th Day of June, in the Year of our Lord 1807, and in the 31st Year of the Independence of the United States of America, before me, Abraham Crouch, a Justice of the Quorum in and for the said State, and a Notary Public for Charlestown by lawful Authority, duly sworn and commissioned by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the State, and residing in the City and State aforesaid.

Personally appeared Mr. Samuel Grove, Merchant, who being duly sworn according to Law, on his solemn Oath, did declare, that he the said Samuel Grove, is a resident Merchant of Charlestown aforesaid, and a Citizen of the United States of America; that the Merchandize specified in the annexed Bill of Lading, and by him the aforesaid Samuel Grove, here shipped on board of the Brig. Amedie, whereof Martin Robin is Master, bound from the Port of Charlestown for Africa, is the sole Property of, and shipped on the sole Account and Risk of him the aforesaid Samuel Grove, a Citizen of the United States of America as aforesaid; and that no Ruler, Citizen, or Subject of any of the present belligerent Powers, or of any foreign Prince or State, directly or indirectly, by way of Trust, Confidence, or otherwise, hath any Right, Title, Part, Share, or Interest therein.

SAMUEL GROVE.

In Testimony whereof the said Appearer hath hereunto subscribed his Name, and I, the said Notary, have also hereunto set my Hand, and affixed my notarial Seal, at this City of Charlestown, in the State of South Carolina, on the Day and Year aforesaid.

State of South Carolina. By his Excellency CHARLES PINCKNEY, Commander in Chief in and over the State aforesaid.

To all to whom these Presents shall come, know ye, that Abraham Crouch, Esquire, whose Seal and Signature appear to the Instrument of Writing hereunto annexed, is one of the Justices of the Quorum, assigned to keep the Peace for the said State, and Notary Public, commissioned by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the State.

Therefore all due Faith, Credit, and Authority is, and ought to be had and given to his Proceedings and Certificates as such.

In Testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my Hand, and caused to be affixed the Seal of the State, in the City of Charlestown, this 30th Day of June, in the Year of our Lord 1807, and in the 31st Year of the Independence of the United States of America.

By the Governor.

STEP. LEE, Jun. Secretary of State.

No. 77. Letter of Instructions from Samuel Grove to Captain Martin Robin.

CHARLESTOWN, June 29th, 1807.

Captain Martin Robin, of the Brig Amedie.

Sir, Your having been highly recommended to me as a proper Person to undertake a Voyage to the Coast of Africa, in which Trade I understand you have had much Experience, has induced me to fit out the Brig Amedie under your Care, to go in Company with the Semiramis to Bonny, to trade there, under the Direction of Mr. Jos. Scott, the Supercargo of the Semiramis, and to come back to this Port. From the Experience you have had in the Nature of the Voyage you are about to undertake, and considering in your Discretion and good Conduct, and assisted by the Advice of Mr. Jos. Scott, I do not consider it necessary that I should detail to you the Points which most essentially claim your Attention, as to the putting your Vessel in proper Order, the Precautions required on the Coast, the Care of the Slaves, the Necessity of treating them with Humanity, keeping them amused and in good Spirits, etc. But I have to impress on your Mind the urgent Necessity that you should use every necessary Effort to perform your Voyage within the Time limited by the Laws of this Country, as upon this Event depends the Prospect of a prosperous Adventure. Should any Occurrence intervene to render it impossible for you to return to this Port before the 1st of January next, you will in that Case proceed by the Way of the old Streights of Bahama to the Port of Matanzas, in the Island of Cuba, where you will meet my Instructions, which will regulate you in your future Proceedings. On the Accomplishment of your Voyage, you will receive your full Commissions as given to Captains being Consignees, agreeable to the Regulations of this Port, although you are to receive the Assistance of a Supercargo on the Coast, whose Commission of two per Cent. on the gross Sales is to be a Charge on the Adventure of the Amedie, without any Deduction from your Commission. I have no Doubt but the Adventure will profit by the Aid and Assistance of Mr. Scott in conducting you over the Bar of Bonny, and in trading on the Coast, in Proportion to the Expence of his Commission; and in order the more to secure the Success of the Voyage, should any Accident happen to you or Captain Scott, and that you may contribute one to the other mutual Relief, you have my peremptory Order not to separate, and that you will keep Company with the Semiramis until you return to this Port. In the Event of Death, Sickness, or Inability happening to the Supercargo of the Semiramis, the Conduct of the said Vessel will devolve on you, in Consideration for which you will receive such a Commission as may be deemed equitable by the Merchants of this Port.

It is customary in Voyages to the Coast of Africa, for the Supercargo or Captain to open a Book of Account on Arrival and commencing Trade, in which is kept a methodical Statement of the Distribution of the Cargo and of the Slaves taken in barter; and I have to request you will comply with these Usages, and that you will render regular Accounts of any Disbursements which may be necessary for your Vessel.

Your Brig being ready for Sea, I furnish you with the necessary Papers in regular Order; and as soon as a favourable Opportunity offers to go over the Bar, you will immediately proceed with the Semiramis on the Voyage as above described.

I am, Sir, your most obedient Servant,

SAMUEL GROVE.

Capt. Mn. Robin, of the Brig Amedie, bound to Bonny.

No. 19. Agreement between M. Robin and James Johnson as to Wages.

CHARLESTOWN, June 29th, 1807.

It is hereby agreed between Capt. Martin Robin, Master of the Brig Amedie, and Mr. James Johnson, Mate of the said Vessel, That the said Martin Robin agrees to pay unto the said James Johnson 1000 Dollars for his Services as Mate of the said Vessel, during the Voyage in the said Brig from hence to Africa and back again to Charlestown; and on the said Sum of 1000 Dollars he the said James Johnson is to receive 50 Dollars in advance.

MN. ROBIN.

Extract from the Registry of His Majesty's Vice Admiralty Court at Tortola.

Before James Robertson, Esq. Judge and Commissary of the same Court.

Brig Amedie, Johnson, Master.

Our Sovereign Lord the King against the Brig Amedie, whereof James Johnson was Master, and her Lading, taken by His Majesty's Brig Swinger, whereof Lieutenant James Bennett is Commander, and brought to Tortola; and also against the said Master, Claimant of the said Vessel and Cargo intervening.

Forbes brought in Attestation, with Ship Papers, and four Preparatory Examinations, and prayed the usual Monition, which the Judge, at his Petition, decreed.

Simpson gave in a Claim of the said Master, for the said Brig, her Tackle, Apparel, Furniture, and for the Cargo laden on board, consisting of 103 African Slaves, on Behalf, and as the Property of Samuel Groves of Charlestown, South Carolina, Merchant, with an Attestation annexed.

On the Admission of the Claim of the said Master, for the said Brig and Cargo, Simpson prayed the same to be admitted, and the said Brig and Cargo to be restored as claimed, with Costs, Expences, etc. Forbes prayed the said Claim to be rejected, and the said Brig and Cargo to be condemmned. The Judge having heard the said Claim and Proofs read, and Advocates and Procters on both Sides thereon, assigned the Cause for Sentence whensoever.

For Sentence.

The Judge assigned his Reasons, and by Interlocutory Decree, pronounced the said Brig Amedie, her Tackle, Apparel, Furniture, Boats, Guns, and Cargo of Slaves, Natives of Africa, to have belonged at the Time of the Capture and Seizure thereof, to Enemies of the Crown of Great Britain, and as such, or otherwise, subject and liable to Confiscation, and condemned the said Brig, her Tackle, Apparel, Fu[r]niture, Boats, and Guns, as good and lawful Prize, taken by his Majesty's Brig Swinger, James Bennett Commander; and condemned the said Slaves, Natives of Africa, the Cargo of the said Brig, as Prize of War, to the sole Use of His Majesty, his Heirs, and Successors; directed 1000 Dollars to be paid out of the Proceeds to the said Master, in lieu of his Privilege and Interest in the said Cargo. Simpson notified to the Court, that on the Part of the Claimant, he appealed from the said Sentence of Condemnation. Commission of Appraisement, at the Instance of both Proctors. The Judge then ordered, that the Marshal, with the Assistance of the Appraisers, or any two of them, ascertain and certify to the Court the Number of Male and Female Slaves of the said Cargo, distinguishing those that are in good Health from those that are otherwise, their respective Ages, and those above 14 Years of Age from those of that Age, or under.

500 Dollars reward.

Absconded from on board the ship Cleopatra, at Gadsden's Wharf, on the night of the 24th inst. Twelve New Negroes, of the Congo or Angola nation.

Peter is about 28 years of age, speaks a little English 5 feet 10 inches high; had on a pair of old black nankeen trowsers, and a red flannel shirt.

Jim is about 24 years old, 5 feet 5 or 6 inches high; dress, red flannel shirt, and blue baft trowsers; has a smooth face, and also speaks English.

Frank a boy of 16 or 17 years of age, has his mouth awry—dress red flannel shirt blue woolen trowsers, and red worsted cap.

Nine other Men and Men-Boys, who cannot speak English. they have all red flannel shirts, and blue cloth trowsers, with red worsted caps.

It is supposed that they have been enticed away, by some persons from the upper country, as one who accompanied them, but who could not keep up with the others, was found yesterday on the road near the quarter house. He says that there was a country born negro with them, and who was persuading them that he was taking them back to their own country. They took from the ship, 5 or 6 muskets, and other arms.

Whoever will give such information as will lead to the recovery of the above slaves, will receive 30 dollars for each; and if to the detection and conviction of the Thief, 500 dollars besides.

390. Case of the Africa, 1808.[1]

Before the Most Noble and Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of Appeals in Prize Causes.

Africa, Jeremiah Connolly, Master.

Lieutenant John Mitchell, Commander of His Majesty's Ship Haughty, the Captor, } Appellant, Jeremiah Connolly, the Master, and Claimant of the Ship and Cargo, as American Property, } Respondent.

Appeal from Tortola.
Appellant's Case.

Captured 30th Jan. 1808. This Ship, under American Colours, laden with a Cargo of Dry Goods, sailed from Charleston on the 27th July, 1807, to the River Congo, on the Coast of Africa, where the said Cargo was bartered for 323 Slaves, with which the Vessel was returning, as represented by the Master, to Charleston, when she was captured on the 30th of January, 1808, by His Majesty's Brig Haughty, Lieut. John Mitchell Commander, and carried to Tortola, where Proceedings were instituted against the Vessel and Cargo as Prize.

13th Feb. 1808. A Claim of Jeremiah Connolly, the Master, was given for the Ship and Cargo, as the Property of William Boyd, a Citizen of the United States of America.

14th March. The Cause came on for Hearing, when the Judge, having heard Counsel on both Sides, assigned the Cause for Sentence whensoever.

16th March. The Judge assigned his Reasons, and retained the Claim of the said Master for the said Ship and Cargo, and decreed the same to be restored as claimed; but, considering the peculiar Circumstances of the Case, decreed the Captors not only their Costs, but a Re-imbursement of all the Expences that have been incurred in the Preservation and Safe-keeping the Property in Question.

From this Sentence the following Appeals have been prosecuted.

. . . 1808, 27th May. An Inhibition was extracted by the King's Proctor on an Appeal from so much of the said Sentence as restored the Ship and Cargo.

1809, 9th March. An Inhibition was extracted on behalf of the Claimant from so much of the said Sentence as decreed the Captors their Costs and Expences. . . .[2]

The Consolidated Appeal now comes on for Hearing; and it is humbly hoped, on the Part of the Captor, that your Lordship will reverse the Sentence of Restitution, and condemn the Ship and Cargo as Prize, and otherwise affirm the Sentence appealed from, for the following, among other

REASONS.

Because the Proofs of Property are insufficient.

Because the Voyage was destined to the Colony of an Enemy, under Circumstances, which do not bring the Case within the Intention of the Order of the 24th of June, 1803.

On an Appeal from the Vice Admiralty Court of Tortola.
Case on behalf of the Claimant.

This is an American Ship, the sole Property of William Boyd of Charlestown, Merchant, a Citizen of the United States of America, by whom she was laden at Charlestown, with a Cargo of dry Goods and other Merchandize, also his sole Property, destined to the River Congo, on the Coast of Africa, to bring back a Cargo of Slaves, with Directions to the Master, to use every Means to insure his Return to Charlestown before the 1st of January, 1808, on which Day the Act, prohibiting the Importation of Slaves into America, would become operative; sailed from Charlestown in the Month of July, 1807, and having arrived in the River Congo, there disposed of the principal Part of her outward Cargo, and invested the Proceeds in the Purchase of Slaves for the same Proprietor; sailed therewith, and with a few Articles left unsold of her outward Cargo, from Congo, on the 17th December, 1807, destined to Charlestown, but not intending to go into that Port before the Master should have received Advice from his Owner, whether he could be admitted to an Entry or not, and if not, to what other Port he should then proceed, and on the 29th Day of January 1808, was captured by his Majesty's Brig, Haughty, Lieutenant John Mitchell, Commander, and carried to Tortola, where Proceedings were commenced, by the Captor, against both Ship and Cargo, as Prize.

On the 13th February, 1808, a Claim was given by Jeremiah Connolly, the Master, for the said Ship and Cargo, consisting of three hundred and ten Slaves, four Boxes, and two Bales of return Goods, and two Pieces of Ivory, as the Property of William Boyd.

On the 16th Day of March, 1808, the Judge was pleased to restore the Ship and Cargo, but decreed that the Captors should be paid, not only their Costs, but also a Reimbursement of all the Expences that had been incurred in the Preservation and safe keeping the Property in Question.

From which Decree two Appeals have been interposed, one by the Captor, from the Restitution of the Ship and Cargo, and the other by the Claimant, from that Part thereof by which the Captor's Expences are decreed to be paid, and from the not condemning him in Costs and Damages, which Appeals have been consolidated and regularly prosecuted, and the same now stand assigned for Sentence. . . . . .[3]

On the Part of the Claimant, it is humbly hoped that your Lordships will be pleased to affirm the Sentence of the Court, appealed from, so far as directs Restitution of the Ship and Cargo, and to reverse so much thereof, as has pronounced the Captor's Expences to be due, and to condemn the Captor in Costs and Damages; for among other the following

REASON:

Because the said Ship and Cargo clearly appear to belong to the American Citizen for whom they are claimed, and the Circumstances afforded no Pretext for Seizure as Prize.

America, and Master of the Ship Africa, on behalf of William Boyd, also a Citizen of the United States of America, the true, lawful, and sole Owner and Proprietor of the said Ship, her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, and of the Cargo laden on board at the Time of the Capture thereof by His Majesty's Armed Brig Haughty Lieutenant Mitchell Commander, and brought into the Port of Tortola—For the said Ship, her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, and the Cargo so laden on board, as the sole Property of an American Citizen, and as aforesaid, and for all such Freight, Costs, Charges, Damages, Demurrages, and Expences as have arisen, or shall or may arise by reason of the Capture and Detention of the same.

C. SIMPSON. JEREMIAH CONNOLLY.

Attestation in Support of Claim.

TORTOLA
Vice-Admiralty Prize Court.

Appeared personally Jeremiah Connolly, and made Oath that he is a Citizen of the United States of America, and was Master of the said Ship Africa at the Time of the Capture thereof by His Majesty's Armed Brig Haughty, Lieutenant Mitchell Commander; and that the said Ship was so captured on the 30th Day of January last past, in the Prosecution of her Voyage from Congo on the Coast of Africa to Charleston, with a Cargo of 310 Slaves, 4 Boxes, and 2 Bales of Return Goods, and 2 Pieces of Ivory, and brought into the Port of Tortola. And he further made Oath that William Boyd, of Charleston, also a Citizen of the United States of America, was at the said Capture, and now is, and if restored will be, the true, lawful, and sole Owner and Proprietor of the said Ship, her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, and of the Cargo so laden on board at the Capture aforesaid. And lastly this Deponent saith, that no Person or Persons being a Subject or Subjects, Citizen or Citizens of the Republic or Empire of France, or of the Batavian, or Ligurian or Italian Republics, or a Subject or Subjects of the King of Denmark, or of the King of Spain, or the Elector of Bavaria, their Factors or Agents, or any other Person or Persons an Enemy or Enemies of the Crown of Great Britain, had, at the Time of the Capture, or now, have, or if restored will have, in the said Ship, her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, or in the Cargo so laden on board, or if the same had arrived at its destined Port would have had, directly or indirectly, any Right, Title, or Interest in the same, or in any Part thereof; and that the Claim hereunto annexed is a true and just Claim, and he will be able to make due Proof thereof, as he this Attestant verily believes.

Preparatory Examinations.

The Examination of Abraham Perlu, Surgeon of the said Ship, aged Twenty-Two Years, a Witness produced and sworn.

1st. That he was born in the County of Somerset, State of New Jersey, in North America; it has always been his Place of Residence until about Three Years ago, when he left it; that he has lived Two Years since in New York, and the last Year he has been travelling to the Southern States of North America, once to the West Indies to Port au Prince in St. Domingo, and the last Six Months he has been on the present Voyage; that New York was his last Place of Abode, and he considers it so still, when not at Sea; he has lived there Two Years of the last Seven; he is a Citizen of the United States; has never been admitted a Burgher or Freeman of any Place; that he is not married.

2d. That he was on board the said Ship when she was taken; she had no Commission.

3d. That the Capture was made in about the Latitude of 22 or 23, on the 29th Day of January last: he does not know upon what Pretence it was done; the said Ship was conducted into this Port on the 5th Instant; she sailed under American Colours, and had no other on board besides her private Signal, a Blue Burgee with a White Cross, and an American Pendant hoisted over it, as the Merchant's private Signal, made no Resistance; was taken by his Majesty's Brig Haughty; no other Vessel was in Sight at the Time to his Knowledge.

4th. That the late Master of the captured Ship was named John Connolly; he died at Sea on the 1st Instant, of the Gout in his Stomach; he knew him for about Seven or Eight Months last past; he was appointed to the Command by William Boyd, of Charleston, South Carolina, Merchant, the Owner of the said Ship; he took Possession of her there in the Month of June last, and it was delivered by the said Owner; that the said Master's Place of Abode was in Charleston; he does not know how long he lived there; he informed Deponent he was born in Ireland; that he was a Citizen of the United States; he does not know when he became a Citizen thereof, but Deponent has heard him say, he has sailed out of the United States in that Employ for Fifteen or Twenty Years; that the said Master was married, and his Widow and Children reside in Charleston; that in consequence of the Death of the said Master,

[5] This attachment is hereafter omitted.

Jeremiah Connolly, the Chief Mate, is now to be considered the Master of the said Ship; Deponent has only known him for the present Voyage; that he lives at Charleston; does not know how long he has done so; does not know where he was born, but believes in Ireland; he is a Citizen of the United States, is not married.

5th. That he believes the said Ship is registered 175 Tons; she was navigated by Twenty-three Persons in all, when taken, including the Master, who died Two or Three Days since the Capture; that the Crew consists of different Nations; about Five or Six of them are Americans, the rest are English, Spanish, Dutch, Prussian, and One Italian; they all came on board at Charleston; the late Master shipped and hired them there some Time in the Month of July last; that one of the Crew also died since the said Ship sailed from Congo on the present Voyage.

6th. That neither himself, the late Master, or any of the Officers or Mariners, had or have any Share or Interest in the said Ship or her Cargo; that the deceased Master, he believes, had Two or Three of the Slaves as his Privilege; Jeremiah Connolly, the Master, he believes has also One; he knows of no other Privilege Slaves; Deponent belonged to the said Ship, when taken, in quality of Surgeon, appointed by William Boyd the Owner; he has only known her for the present Voyage; first saw her at Charleston; he believes she was built at Bermuda.

7th. That her Name is the Africa; he does not [know] how long she has been so called, he never knew her by any other; that she had a Passport and Sea-Letter on board, obtained at Charleston, South Carolina, aforesaid; she sailed from there on the present Voyage on the 27th Day of July last, laden with Dry Goods, Hard Ware, Crockery Ware, Gunpowder, Muskets, and Rum; cleared out for and bound to Congo, on the Coast of Africa, as her Place of Trade; that she arrived there some Time in the Month of October following, where the late Master bartered the Cargo he carried out for Slaves, save a small Part that remains on board; that he believes 326 or 327 were purchased, which Number they sailed from Congo with some Time in December last; that the Voyage began at Charleston, but he does not know where it was to have ended; the present is the only Voyage he has been upon in the said Ship; that he has understood at Charleston she made Three Voyages from there to Congo; he believes Two of her Return Cargoes were sold at the Havannah, and one she returned with to Charleston; that he also believes the said Voyages all ended at Charleston, from whence they commenced; the said Ship is under the Direction and Management of Mr. Boyd, the Owner, as to her Employment in Trade; Deponent does not correspond with any Person on the Concerns of the said Ship or her Cargo.[6]

8th. That the Outward Lading consisted of Dry Goods; he believes principally of India Goods, Hard Ware, Crockery Ware, Gunpowder, Muskets, and Rum; he knows not the Quantity thereof, or the Invoice Amount; he believes there might have been as many as from 500 to 700 Muskets; that the present Cargo consists of from 307 to 310 Slaves; that 326 or 327 were purchased as the Cargo, but about 19 of them have died since the Voyage commenced; that the said Slaves were put on board from about the Month of October, when they arrived down, to December when they sailed.

9th. That William Boyd is the sole Owner of the said Ship to the best of his Knowledge; he believes him to be a Scotchman by Birth; he resides at Charleston, and carries on Business there as a Merchant; that he is not married; he does not know how long he has lived there, or where he lived before; that he is a Citizen of the United States, but how long he does not know; that he has heard the said Owner himself say that he was a Scotchman by Birth.

10th. That he knows of no Bill of Sale of the said Ship to the Owner.

11th. That the Slaves were all purchased at Congo, and put on board there.

12th. That the deceased Master was the Lader of the present Cargo; William Boyd, above described, is the sole Owner of the same to the best of his Knowledge, but does not know who was the Consignee thereof, what Countryman he is, or any thing about him, neither does he know where the Slaves were to be delivered, but he believes wherever they were delivered it would have been on the real Account, Risk, and Benefit of Mr. Boyd; that after the Capture, as the Master, who was then living, and the Lieutenant commanding the Brig, were overhauling the Ship's Papers together, the said Master took up a Chart and said, "This is the Chart I have to carry me to New Providence"; that he never heard, previous thereto, where the said Ship was bound, neither does he know what she was going to New Providence for, but he apprehends it was to wait there for Orders from the Owner, or in Expectation to receive them there on her Arrival; he does not know for what other Purpose she was going there, or where the said Voyage was to have ended; that he does not know if the late Master had any Interest in the said Cargo, besides the 2 or 3 Slaves, he believes were his Privilege, and the Commissions he was to derive on the Voyage; that he does take upon himself to swear that to the best of his Knowledge, that at the Time of the lading the said Cargo, now, and if it shall be restored and unladen at any Port, it did, does, and will belong to the said William Boyd, and to none other, save and except the Priv[i]lege Slaves for the former Master and Mate.

[6] Thomas Tilly, in answering the 7th question, was more explicit: "the first Voyage he made in the Vessel was from London to the Coast of Africa, carried Dry Goods, which were bartered with the Natives at Congo River for Slaves; at that Place took on board 325 Slaves, and went with them to Havannah, at which Place they were sold, and returned to London in Ballast; the next Voyage was from London with Dry Goods, which they carried to Congo River, and at that Place bartered them with the Natives for 320 Slaves, which they carried to the Havannah, and disposed of them at that Place; there took on board a Load of Sugar, which they carried to Charleston and delivered it there; the third Voyage was from Charleston to Congo River again; carried Dry Goods, which were bartered with the Natives for 320 Slaves, which they carried back to Charleston, where they were landed and sold; the present is the next voyage."

13th. That he knows of no Bills of Lading being signed for the said Cargo.

14th. That he believes the Papers regarding the said Ship and Cargo to be in this Country, in the Possession or Power of the Captors.

15th. That there is no Charter-Party.

16th. That he cannot specify the Papers which were on board the said Ship when she took her Departure from Congo, he believes they have all been delivered up, or taken Possession of by the Captors; none have, to his Knowledge, been burnt, torn, thrown overboard, destroyed, or cancelled, concealed, or attempted so to be dealt with.

17th. That he does not know if the said Ship has ever been taken and condemned as Prize.

18th. That he has not sustained any Losses yet by the said Capture; that about 4 of the Slaves have died since they were captured, and a Six-oared Cutter destroyed, which was on one of the Quarters of the Ship; no Indemnity or Promise of Satisfaction has been made for the said Loss, or any thing further that might be sustained by the said Capture.

19th. That he heard the deceased Master mention, when at Congo, that the said Ship and Cargo were insured at Lloyd's, but he does not know at what Premium, or the Nature of the Insurance, as the said Master did not mention.

20th. That he believes in case the said Ship had arrived at New Providence, or at any other Port, and the Cargo been unladen, it would have remained the Property of William Boyd above named; he does not know what Market he was to have taken the Chance of for the Sale of the said Cargo.

21st. That the Slaves are all Natives of Africa.

22d. That the whole of them were brought from the Shore of the River Congo.

23d. That he knows of no Papers being in any other Country besides this, or on board any other Vessel regarding the said Ship or her Cargo.

24th. That no Papers were delivered out of the said Ship but to the Captor.

25th. That Bulk has not been broken, otherwise than to get rid of the dead Slaves.

26th. That there were no Passengers on board.

27th. That he believes the Papers found on board to be true and fair, there is nothing to his Knowledge, to affect their Credit.

28th. That he has not written or signed any Letters or Papers concerning the said Ship or her Cargo, except in signing the Ship's Articles in his Capacity as Surgeon.

29th. That he believes the Ship was steering for New Providence when taken, there to receive or wait for Orders from the Owners as he apprehends; her Course was not altered upon the Appearance of the Man of War; but to bear down to speak her upon Sight of her, in order to ascertain the Longitude; it was at all other Times directed, as he apprehends, for New Providence, after leaving Congo.

30th. That he knows nothing concerning the Sales and Transfers of the said Ship.

31st. That there are Two Four-Pounders mounted; they have about One Dozen Muskets, the like Number of Cutlasses, Two or Three Brace of Pistols, and Two Blunderbusses, some Powder and Shot to serve the said Guns, and some ready-made Musket Cartridges; she was so armed for self Preservation, and to keep the Slaves in Subjection.

32d. That he has declared the whole of what he knows and believes regarding the real and true Property and Destination of the said Ship and her Cargo at the Time of Capture.

33d. That the said Ship has never, to his Knowledge, sailed under Convoy.

34th. That she has never sailed to or at[t]empted to enter any Port that he knows of.

ABR'M PERLU.

The Examination of the said Master, aged Twenty-five Years, a Witness produced and sworn.

1st. That he was born in Ireland; he has lived in Charl[e]ston, in South Carolina, for the last Seven Years; he lives there at present, and has been living there for the last Ten Years; he was formerly a Subject of his Britannic Majesty, he now considers himself a Citizen of the United States; he was admitted a Citizen of the United States in December, 1800, and at that Time took the Oaths to that Government, before Fed[e]ral Court, held at Charleston; he has lived at and been sailing out of Charleston ever since his Admission; he paid Twenty-two Dollars for his Admission; he is not married.

2d. That he was on board the Ship at the Time of Capture; she had no Warlike Commission.

3d. That the Capture was made on the 30th Day of this present Month, in Lat. 22 deg. 50 min. or thereabouts; he was informed that the Capture was owing to the Laws of America not allowing them to import Slaves after the 1st Day of January, this present Year; the Vessel was sent into this Port; she sailed under American Colours, and had none of any other Sort on board; made no Resistance; the Capture was made by His Majesty's Brig Haughty; there was no other Vessel in Sight at the Time of Capture.

4th. That he is himself at present the Master of the Ship, the former Master, John Connolly, having died on the 2d Day of this present Month, and previous to his Death he appointed Deponent to the Command of the Ship; the former Master was appointed to Command of the Ship by William Boyd; he took the Possession in Charleston on the 2d Day of June last, Mr. Boyd delivered him the Possession; he lives in Charleston; the Master's fixed Place of Abode was at Charleston, he had been living there upwards of Sixteen Years; he was born in Ireland; he was married, and his Family lived in Charleston.

5th. That he does not know the Tonnage of the Vessel; she was navigated by Twenty Persons besides himself, Thirteen of them are Americans, the others are Danes and Swedes, they all came on board at the Port of Charleston on the 25th or 26th Day of July last past; the former Master shipped them.

6th. That neither himself, or any of the Officers or Crew of the Vessel, have any Part, Share, or Interest in her or her Lading; he has heard the late Master say that he had an Interest in the Cargo, but he does not know what it is; Deponent has One Slave as an Adventure, the Doctor has One Slave, and the Third Mate has Two Slaves; he belonged to the Vessel at the Time of her Capture in Quality of Mate; he has known her about Four Years, he first saw her about that Time in Charleston; she was built in Bermuda.

7th. That the Name of the Ship is the Africa; he does not know, but believes she has always been called by that Name; she had a Sea Letter on board; it was obtained from the Custom House at Charleston; the first Voyage he made in the Vessel was from Charleston in South Carolina to the River Congo; carried Dry Goods, which were sold at that Place, and there took on board a Cargo consisting of 323 Slaves and 2 Teeth of Ivory, and returned direct to Charleston, w[h]ere they were sold; the present is the next Voyage, it was from Charleston to a Place called Talltrees in the River Congo, at which Place the Cargo, consisting of Dry Goods, was delivered, and the present Cargo, consisting of 323 Slaves, and 1 or 2 Ivory Teeth, were taken onboard, with which he was proceeding to Charleston when taken; it was not the Intention of the former Master to go into that Port before he had received Advice from the Owner respecting their admitting him to an Entry, Charleston or not; in case they had not been admitted to an Entry at Charleston he supposes they would have gone to the Havannah to dispose of the Cargo, from the Circumstance of her having sold Two Cargos of Slaves there some short Time before he shipped on board her; the last Voyage began at Charleston and it was to have ended there; the Vessel sailed from Talltrees on the 17th Day of December last past, as near as he can recollect; the Vessel sails under the Management and Direction of William Boyd with respect to her Employment in Trade; he does not correspond with any Person upon the Concerns of the Vessel or her Cargo; she was built at Bermuda.

8th. That the Lading which the Vessel carried out on her first setting sail on her last Voyage consisted of Dry Goods; her present Cargo consists of 323 Slaves; they were taken on board between the 1st Day of November and Middle of December last past.

9th. That William Boyd was the Owner of the Vessel at the Time of the Capture; he knows it from his having employed Deponent; Mr. Boyd is a Native of Scotland; he lives in Charleston; he is not married; he has been living at that Place Twelve Years to Deponent's Knowledge; he does not know where he lived before; he is a Citizen of America.

10th. That there was a Bill of Sale for the Vessel to her aforesaid Owner; he does not know when it was made; it was made at Charleston; he does not know who were the Witnesses thereto; there was no Engagement entered into concerning the Purchase further than what appears upon the Bill of Sale; he believes it is among the Papers given up to the Captors.

11th. That the whole Cargo was taken on board at Talltrees, in the River Congo, between the 1st November and Middle of December last.

12th. That John Connolly, the former Master, was the Lader of the present Cargo, William Boyd was the Owner and Consignee thereof; the Lader was a Native of Ireland, the Owner and Consignee a Native of Scotland; he lives and carries on Business in Charleston; he has been living there Twelve Years to Deponent's Knowledge, he does not know where he resided before; the whole of the Lading was to have been delivered at the Port of Charleston in South Carolina, as far as Deponent knows, has heard, or believes, and on the real Account, Risk, and Benefit of William Boyd aforesaid; but in case she would not be admitted to an Entry at the Port of Charleston he believes that she would have been ordered by the Owner to proceed to the Havannah, to dispose of the Slaves; it was the Intention of the former Master (as far as he knows) to proceed to Charleston, and had the Vessel not been captured Deponent, after succeeding to the Command, would have continued on to Charleston, to abide the Orders of the Owners;[7] he does take upon himself to swear that he believes, that at the Time of the lading the present Cargo, now, and if it shall be restored and unladen at the destined Port, it did, does, and will belong to the Person before asserted to be the Owner thereof, and to none others; he grounds his Knowledge thereof from his having been the Owner of the Outward Cargo, of which the present one is the Proceeds.

13th. That there were no Bills of Lading for the Cargo.

14th. That he believes all the Papers respecting the Vessel and her Cargo are in this Island.

15th. That there was no Charter-Party for the Voyage.

16th. That he does not know what Papers were on board the Vessel when she sailed from the River Congo; none have been burnt, torn, thrown overboard, destroyed, or cancelled, concealed, or attempted to be so dealt with by himself or any other Person, to his Knowledge.

17th. That he has heard and believes that the Vessel was taken and condemned at Guadaloupe some Time ago (he does not know when) on account of her having been English Property.

18th. That he has not sustained any Loss by the Capture; the Ship has lost a Long Boat by being cut away by Orders of the Captor; the Commander of the Brig has promised to pay for her if the Ship is given up; he has received no Indemnity or further Promise of Satisfaction for any thing he may lose thereby.

19th. That he does not know if the Vessel or her Cargo are insured.

20th. That in case the Ship had arrived at Charleston, her Port of Destination, and the Cargo had been there unladen, it would have remained the Property of William Boyd until sold.

21st. That the Cargoes are Natives of Africa.

22d. That the whole of the Slaves were taken from the Shore of the Kingdom of Emmbooma.

23d. That all the Papers respecting the Vessel and her Cargo are in this Island.

[7] Thomas Tilly's statement was: "it was the intention of Captain John Connolly to go into the Port of Charleston with the Slaves, although he had understood upon the Coast of Africa that Vessels with Slaves would not be permitted to an Entry at Charleston after the 1st Day of January last, and he at the same Time observed to Deponent that he expected to be seized by the Custom-House Officers at Charleston, but was in hopes of getting clear by protesting against Wind and Weather, which occasioned a longer Passage than he expected."

24th. That no Papers have been delivered out of the Vessel at Sea, or carried away in any Manner, except those given up to the Captors; every Paper has been given up.

25th. That Bulk has not been broken.

26th. That there are no Passengers.

27th. That all the Papers found on board the Vessel are entirely true and fair, none of them false or colourable; he knows of no Matter or Circumstance to affect their Credit; William Boyd obtained the Sea Letter for the Vessel from the Custom-House at Charleston for this Vessel only, and upon his own Oath; it is to last as long as she remains his Property; he does not know what Fee was paid for it; the Ship was at Charleston when the Sea Letter was obtained; no Person on board had a Let-Pass or Letter of Safe Conduct.

28th. That he has not written or signed any Letters or Papers respecting the Vessel or her Cargo.

29th. That the Ship was steering the best Course she could for Charleston when taken; her Course was not altered upon the Appearance of the Vessel by which she was taken, except to speak her, for which Purpose they bore up; her Course was at all Times, when the Weather would permit, directed to the Port of Charleston; the Ship was not sailing beyond or wide of the Port of Charleston, her Port of Destination, at the Time of Capture, or at any Time before.

30th. That he does not know who sold the Vessel to her present Owner, or when it was done, but he believes it was about Four Years last September, it was at Charleston; he believes that it was for 9000 Dollars; he believes in his Conscience that the Sale and Transfer has been fairly and truly made, and not done for the Purpose of covering or concealing the real Property; and he verily believes that if restored she will belong to Mr. Boyd and to no other Person or Persons; there is no private Agreement to return the Vessel to her former Owner at the Conclusion of the War, or at any other Period.

31st. That there are Two Guns mounted, Seventeen Muskets and some Pistols on board, and also some Powder; she was thus armed in order to keep the Slaves in Subjection.

32d. That he has declared the whole of what he knows and believes, according to the best of his Knowledge and Belief, regarding the real and true Property and Destination of the Vessel and her Cargo at the Time of Capture.

33d. That the Ship has not sailed under Convoy of any Ship of War or other armed Vessel.

34th. That the Ship has not sailed to or attempted to enter any blockaded Port.

Thomas Jefferson, President of the United States, of America.
To all who shall see these Presents, Greeting.

Be it known, that Leave and Permission are hereby given to John Connolly, Master or Commander of the Ship called Africa, of Charleston, of the Burthen of 178 40/95ths Tons, or thereabouts, lying at present in the Port of Charleston, bound for Africa, and laden with Dry Goods, Gunpowder, Spirits, Cutlery, Iron, Rice, etc. to depart and proceed with his said Ship on his said Voyage, such Ship having been visited, and the said John Connolly having made Oath before the proper Officer that the said Ship belongs to one or more of the Citizens of the United States of America, and to him or them only.

In witness whereof I have subscribed my Name to these Presents, and affixed the Seal of the United States of America thereto, and caused the same to be countersigned by Simeon Theus, Collector at Charleston, the 23d Day of July, in the Year of our Lord Christ 1807.

By the President, TH. JEFFERSON.

ton for seven years but resided in Georgia. Tilly was born in Bristol, England, had lived in Charleston three years; Burton was born and lived in New Jersey. Burton testified that the present master was a nephew of the former one; Tilly, that William Boyd, the owner, was a Scotsman who had lived in Charleston about twenty-five years; Burton, that he believed the cargo was to be delivered at New Providence on the account of Boyd. Otherwise their evidence differs but little from that of the surgeon and master. Affidavits as to the Ship Papers, and the certificate of ownership of the vessel, are also omitted.

the said Master with Goodness, and to treat him in a becoming Manner, permitting him, upon the usual Tolls and Expences in passing and repassing, to pass, navigate, and frequent the Ports, Passes, and Territories to the end to transact his Business where and in what Manner he shall judge proper; whereof we shall be willingly indebted.

In Witness and for Cause whereof we affix hereto the Seal of our Office at CHARLESTON, July 23d, 1807.

CHARL[E]STON, 24th July, 1807.

Captain John Connolly.

Dear Sir,

The Ship Africa, under your Command, being cleared, and ready to proceed on a Voyage to Angola for Slaves, I have to call your Attention to the following Instructions for your Government in conducting the same.

Herewith you have Invoice and Bill of Lading of a well assorted Cargo, for the Purchase of at least 350 Slaves in the River Congo, for which River you will proceed the first Opportunity.

From the very ample Investment with which you are provided I flatter myself you will be able to command the Trade over any other Vessel that may be in the River at the same Time; which I beg you will endeavour to do by every Means possible, so as to insure your Return here previous to the 1st of January, on which Day the Act prohibiting the Importation of Slaves goes into Operation, as there is not a Moment to be lost. I do not mean when I mention the Number of Slaves the Cargo is equal to purchase to bind you down to that Number, but leave this, as well as every thing else that may tend to insure Dispatch, to your own Discretion, and the Time that may remain for completing the Voyage.

I wish you to purchase as many young Men and Men Boys, and as few Females and small Slaves, as possible; in this, however, you must also in a great Degree be regulated according to Circumstances, but on no Account bring any old Men or fallen-breasted Women. It is better to return without Slaves than to croud the Ship with such.

I would by all means recommend your leaving Africa at latest by the 15th November, in which Case, from the Africa's fast sailing, there can be no Doubt of your reaching this in due Time. If however you should be on the Coast, and from contrary Winds unable to make Charleston, you will in that Case bear away for any Port you can fetch in the United States before the 1st of January, and report the Ship at the nearest Custom-House, as bound here, but put in by Stress of Weather, and by so doing the Prohibitory Act will not attach to the Africa, although she may not reach Charl[e]ston until after that Day. You will take Care to bring with you a Certificate from the Custom-House, where you may have reported of having done so.

During the Purchase and Middle Passage you will no doubt see the Propriety of treating the Slaves with every Attention and Indulgence that Humanity requires and Safety will permit.

The Ship's Articles will point out the Wages that you, your Officers, and Ship's Crew are to receive; in Addition to which you are to receive 5 per Cent. on the Gro. Sales of the Slaves, (out of which you are however to allow, on your own Account, to Mr. Tilly, the Trade Mate, £100;) also I am to allow him Two averaged Slaves of the Cargo, Mr. Connolly, the Chief Mate, one, Doctor Perlu one, and 50 per Cent. Head Money for each Slave, etc. Besides the foregoing it must be perfectly understood that you, the Officers, and Crew, are to have no other Privileges, nor is any private Trade Adventures to be carried on during the Voyage.

By the Invoice you will observe there is Cloathing already made up for 280 Slaves, and likewise a Quantity of Negro Cloth sufficient to make at least 80 other Suits, which you will have ready previous to your coming on the Coast.

Omit no Opportunity of writing me, mentioning your Proceedings, the Number of Slaves on board, Quantity of Cargo expended, etc. Also, after having completed your Purchase, write me by every Vessel that may be in the River bound either here or to the West Indies, covering a Bill of Lading for the whole Number of Negroes and other Cargo then on board, so as to enable me to recover the Loss from the Underwriters in case of Accident to the Africa.

Wishing you Health and every thing agreeable during the Voyage.

I remain, dear Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
WM. BOYD.

N. B. There is a Mistake in the Articles respecting your Wages: You are to have the same as Captain Caruth had, say £6 per Month.

Extracted from the Registry of His Majesty's Vice Admiralty Court at Tortola.

Before James Robertson, Esquire, Judge and Commissary of the same Court,

Ship Africa, Jeremiah Connolly, Master.

Our Sovereign Lord the King against the Ship Africa, Jeremiah Connolly Master, and her Cargo, consisting of African Slaves, taken by His Majesty's Brig Haughty, Lieutenant John Mitchell, Commander, and brought to Tortola; and also against the said Master, Claimant of the said Ship and Cargo, intervening.

10th February, 1808. Forbes brought in Two Attestations, with Ship's Papers and Five Preparatory Examinations, and prayed the usual Monition, which the Judge, at his Petition, decreed.

13th. Simpson gave in a Claim of the said Master for the said Ship, her Tackle, Apparel, Furniture, and Cargo, on behalf and as the Property of William Boyd, of Charleston, South Carolina, Merchant, with an Attestation annexed.

Monday, 14th March. On the Admission of the Claim of the said Master for the said Ship and Cargo, Simpson prayed the same to be admitted, and the said Ship and Cargo to be restored as claimed, with Costs and Expences, etc.

Forbes prayed the same Claim to be rejected and the said Ship and Cargo to be condemned. The Judge, having heard the said Claim and Proofs read, and Advocates and Proctors on both Sides thereon, assigned the Cause for Sentence whensoever.

For Sentence.

Wednesday, 16th March. The Judge assigned his Reasons, retained the Claim of the said Master for the said Ship and Cargo, and decreed the same to be restored as claimed, but considering the peculiar Circumstances of the Case, decreed the Captors not only their Costs, but a Reimbursement of all the Expences that have been incurred in the Preservation and safe keeping the Property in question.

Forbes notified to the Court, that on the Part of the Captor he appealed from the said Sentence of Restoration.

Simpson notified also, that he appealed from that Part of the said Sentence which made against his Party. Commission of Appraisement at the Instance of both Proctors.

MARK D. FRENCH, Not. Pub. and Dep. Registrar.

[391] [1] Vice Admiralty briefs, in the possession of the Marine Research Society.

(On an Appeal from the Court of Vice-Admiralty of the Island of Barbadoes.)

Case on Behalf of the Appellant.

This is an American Ship which sailed from Charlestown on the 22d Nov. 1806, (long before the Act prohibitory of the Slave Trade passed in America,) bound to Rio Pougas, on the Coast of Africa, there to trade for Slaves, Bees Wax, and other Productions of the Coast, and return therewith to Charlestown. She arrived at Rio Pongas, in the latter End of January, 1807, and remained trading until January in the following Year, the Master being able to procure only 72 Slaves on Account of his Owner, but having taken upwards of 90 on Freight.

On the 2nd of February 1808, when proceeding for the Island of Martinique (the Importation of Slaves into America being prohibited from the 1st January) the said Ship was captured by His Majesty's Ship of War Ulysses, J. W. Neesham, Esq. Commander, and carried into Barbadoes.

Proceedings were commenced in the Court of Vice Admiralty at that Place against the Ship and Cargo.

1808, 15th Feb. A Claim was given for the Ship and Cargo as the Property of Fredireck Tavel of Charlestown, Merchant, a Citizen of the United States of America, and for Freight, etc.

9th March. The Cause came on to be heard, when the Judge was pleased to condemn the Ship and Cargo as Prize.

It is understood that the Slaves on Freight, the Property of the Master, Supercargo, and Passengers on-board, were given up to them upon Payment of Freight, which the Captors received under this Decree.

17th October. Daniel Hooffstetter, of London, Merchant, gave a Claim in this Court, on Behalf of the said F. Tavel, for the Ship and Cargo, and interposed an Appeal, which has been duly prosecuted, and now stands assigned for Sentence before your Lordships. . . .[2]

The Proctor of the Appellant will humbly pray your Lordships to pronounce for the Appeal, to reverse the Sentence appealed from, to retain the principal Cause, and therein to admit the Claim of Mr. Hooffstetter, and to decree the Ship and 72 Slaves to be restored, or the Value thereof paid, and to pronounce Freight to be due, on the Remainder of the Cargo, for (among many others) the following

[2] Brief extracts from the evidence of James Taylor, M'Guire, J. P. White, and I. Williams are here omitted, also the list of Ship Papers, letter of instruction, and bill of lading.

REASONS:

Because the same clearly appear to be the Property of the American Citizen, for whom they are claimed, and engaged in lawful Trade.

Respondents' Case.[3]

Captured, 2d Feb. 1808. This Vessel, under American Colours, sailed from Charleston on the 22d November, 1806, laden with Tobacco, Brandy, and India Stuffs, bound for Rio Pungos, on the Coast of Africa, where she arrived on the 24th of January, 1807, and disposed of the said Cargo, and in return took in 168 Slaves, and sailed from Rio Pungos on the 9th of January, 1808, and was captured on the 2d February following, whilst proceeding to Martinique, by His Majesty's Ship Ulysses, C. J. W. Nesham, Esquire, Commander, and carried to Barbadoes, where Proceedings were instituted against the Vessel and Cargo as Prize.

1808. Feb. 15th. A Claim of Thomas Sandford was given for the Vessel and Cargo, as the Property of Frederick Tavel, of Charleston.

March 9th. The Cause came on for Hearing, when the Judge at Barbadoes was pleased to condemn this Ship and Cargo as Prize to the Captors.

Proceedings in this Court.

1808. 7th October. An Inhibition was extracted on an Appeal of Daniel Hoofstetter, of London, Merchant, Claimant of the Ship and Cargo as the Property of the aforesaid Frederick Tavel, and such Appeal has been proceeded in.[4] . . .

The Appeal having been proceeded in, now comes on for Hearing; and it is humbly hoped, on the Part of the Respondents, that your Lordships will be pleased to pronounce against the Appeal, and affirm the Sentence appealed from, with Costs, for the following, among other

[3] The usual introductory statement of appellant and respondent is here omitted.
[4] The evidence presented, consisting of extracts from the examinations of James Taylor, Patrick M'Guire, J. P. White, and Isaac Williams, and the Ship Papers are omitted. These extracts are not identical with those in the case of the appellant.

REASONS.

Because the Ship was proceeding from Africa with a Cargo of Slaves to the Enemy's Colony, under a false Destination to Charleston.

Because such a Trade, under any Circumstances, is contrary to the Laws of America, and not within the Order of Council of 24th June, 1803.

Because Part of the Cargo is admitted to belong to a British Subject, and is as such liable to Confiscation by Stat. 46 Geo. III. ch. 52.

Joint Appendix[5]

Claim of Mr. Hooffstetter, given in this Court. 27th October 1808.

The Claim of Daniel Hooffstetter, of London, Merchant, for and on Behalf of Frederick Tavel, of Charlestown, Merchant, a Citizen of the United States of America, the true, lawful, sole Owner and Proprietor of the said Ship, her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, and the Goods, Wares and Merchandizes therein laden, at the Time the same were seized and taken as Prize by His Majesty's Ship of War Ulysses, C. J. W. Neesham, Esq. Commander, and carried into Barbadoes, in the Vice Admiralty Court of which Place they were, on or about the Month of March last past, but within Twelve Months of the present Time, condemned. For the said Ship and Goods, as the true, lawful, sole and entire Property of the said Frederick Tavel, and for all such Loss, Costs, Charges, Damages, and Expences, as have arisen and been incurred, or shall or may arise and be incurred, by Reason of the Capture, Detention, and subsequent Condemnation thereof, as aforesaid.

DANIEL HOOFFSTETTER.

Affidavit in Verification annexed.

Appeared Personally, Daniel Hooffstetter, of London, Merchant, and made Oath that he is duly authorized to make the Claim hereto annexed, and that he verily believes that the said Ship, her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, and the Goods, Wares, and Merchandize therein laden, at the Time the same were seized and taken as Prize by His Majesty's Ship of War Ulysses, C. J. W. Neesham, Esquire, Commander, and carried into Barbadoes, in the Vice Admiralty Court of which Place the same were, in or about the Month of March last past, but within Twelve Months of the present Time condemned, were and now are the true, lawful, sole and entire Property of Frederick Tavel, of Charlestown, Merchant, a Citizen of the United States of America, on whose Behalf the same are claimed, and that no Person or Persons, belonging to or being a Subject or Subjects of, or inhabiting within any of the Territories of the French or Batavian Governments, or the Countries now or lately styling themselves the Italian and Ligurian Republics, the Kings of Spain, Prussia, or Denmark, the Emperor of Russia, the Ports and Territories of Tuscany, the Kingdom of Naples, the Port and Territory of Ragusa, or those of the Islands lately composing the Republic of the Seven Islands, and all other the Ports and Places in the Mediterranean and Adriatic Seas, which are occupied by the Arms of France, or her Allies, their Factors or Agents, or any Person or Persons whomsoever, Enemies of the Crown of Great Britain and Ireland, had at the Time of the Capture aforesaid, or now have, any Right, Title, or interest in the said Ship or Goods, or any Part thereof. And he lastly saith, he verily believes the Claim hereto annexed to be a true and just Claim, and that he shall be able to make due Proof and Specification thereof.

Claim of Thomas Sandford, given in the Court below.

The Claim of Thomas Sandford, of the Island abovesaid, Esq. on Behalf of Frederick Tavel, of Charlestown, South Carolina, in North America, the true and lawful Owner and Proprietor of the said Brigantine or Vessel Tartar, with the Cargo on board her at the Time of her Capture and Detention, by His Majesty's Ship of War Ulysses, for the said Brigantine or Vessel, with her Cargo on board, as the sole Property of the said Frederick Tavel, a Citizen of the United States of America, and for all such Freight, Costs, Charges, Damages, Demurrage, and Expences, as have arisen, or shall or may arise, by Reason of the Capture and Detention aforesaid of the said Vessel Tartar and her Cargo.

Affidavit annexed to the said Claim. Dated Feb. 15, 1808.

On the fifteenth Day of February, one thousand eight hundred and eight, appeared personally James Taylor, Master of the said Brigantine, and made Oath, that he is a Citizen of the United States of America, and that on the second Day of February, in the present Year, the said Brigantine was captured and detained by His Majesty's Ship of War Ulysses, and sent into Carlisle Bay, in this Island, and he saith that Frederick Tavel, of Charlestown, South Carolina, in North America, is the true and lawful Owner of the said Brigantine or Vessel, with the Cargo on board, excepting twenty-nine Slaves, belonging to Deponent and the Supercargo; and he further made Oath and saith, that the Claim hereto annexed is just and true, and that due Proof thereof, as he believes, can be made.

Examinations in Preparatory.

First Witness, James Taylor, the Master. Deponent for Answer to the first Interrogatory saith, That he was born in Boston, in America, and has been living for these last Seven Years past in Charles Town; has lived there eight or nine Years; is a Citizen of the United States of America, is not a Burgher of any Town or City in the World, is a S[i]ngle Man.

To the second, Was present when the Brig of which Deponent is now examined was seized and taken; she had not any Commission of War.

To the third, Saith that in Latitude 13° 24′, on or about the 2nd of February instant, said Vessel was seized; cannot state on what Pretence or for what Reason she was so taken, as none was assigned; was brought into Carlisle Bay, Barbadoes; sailed under American Colours, and had none other on board; made no Resistance; was taken by His Majesty's Ship Ulysses; two other of His Majesty's Ships of War were in sight at the Time of the Capture.

To the fourth, Deponent is himself Master of the Vessel taken; was appointed to the Command of said Brig by Frederick Tavel; took Possession of her at New York, in February 1806; was given Possession by said Tavel; he lives in Charles Town in America.

To the fifth, Saith the Vessel is one hundred and sixty Tons Burthen; the Number of Mariners, including Officers, seven; three shipped at Charles Town, in November 1807, the rest in Africa, at Rio Pongas, were hired by this Deponent.

To the sixth, That he hath no Interest in the Vessel; hath an Interest in the Cargo of thirteen Slaves on board her, which are his Property; the Super Cargo has fifteen Slaves on board; no other Officers or Mariners have any Property in Vessel or Cargo; this Deponent belonged to the Vessel in Capacity of Master; has known her for three or four Years; first saw her in Charles Town, three or four Years ago; cannot state where she may have been built.

To the seventh, That the Name of this Vessel is Tartar; she has been so called ever since she was built; she had not a Passport or Sea-brief on-board; she touched at the Rio Pongas in Africa, during the Voyage in which she was taken; her last Voyage began at Charlestown, and was to have ended there; the first Voyage this Ship has made since Deponent being Master, was from Charlestown in America, to the Rio Pongas in Africa, laden with Tobacco and Rum; she sailed from Charlestown on the 21st February, 1806, and arrived in Rio Pongas, on the 4th April, in the same Year; the Cargo was delivered at Rio Pongas; she there took on-board one hundred and one Slaves or thereabouts, and sailed from thence on the 6th Day of August 1806, to Charlestown, where she arrived on the 3d Day of October in the same Year; the said Cargo of Slaves was there put on Shore; she sailed last from the Rio Pongas in Africa, on the 7th Day of January, in the present Year 1808.

To the eighth, That the Lading on-board at the Time of her setting Sail on her present Voyage from Charlestown, consisted in Tobacco, Brandy, and India Stuffs, the Quantities of each Sort this Deponent cannot set forth; laden with this Cargo she left Charlestown on the 22nd of November 1806, bound to the Rio Pongas, in Africa, where she arrived on the 24th Day of January 1807, the Cargo was there unladen and bartered for Slaves; saith that 168 Slaves were then laden on-board the Ship; with them on board she left the Rio Pongas on the ninth of January, in the present Year 1808, and was seized and detained as aforesaid with said Slaves; a very small Proportion of Ivory on-board.

To the ninth, That Frederick Tavel is the Name of the Owner of this Vessel at the Time she was seized and taken; he knows so by the Papers of the Vessel, and from having sailed in said Frederick Tavel's employ betwixt four and five Years; believes that Tavel is a Native of Switzerland; he resides with his Wife and Family at three Miles distant from Charlestown in America; Deponent has known him to be living there six Years; cannot say where he may have resided before; is a Citizen of the United States of America.

To the tenth, That there was a Bill of Sale made for this Vessel from a Mr. Hemly to Mr. Tavel, at Charlestown, in November 1805; that said Bill of Sale was drawn by a Notary-Public, whose Name is Crouch, at the Custom House, Charlestown; cannot say in the Presence of what Witness it may have been signed; no further Engagement was entered into concerning the Purchase, than what may appear upon the Bill of Sale; saith that 5500 Dollars was the Amount of the Purchase Money; Deponent last saw the aforesaid Bill of Sale in Charlestown, and believes it to be in the Possession of said Mr. Tavel there.

To the eleventh, Saith the outward-bound Cargo was put on-board at Charlestown, during the Space of three or four Days the Slaves were put on-board at the Rio Pongas, on the Coast of Africa, at different Times during the Space of twelve Months and upwards.

To the twelfth, That aforesaid Frederick Tavel, a Mr. Holman, a Mr. Llangley, and Deponent, were Laders and Owners of the outward-bound Cargo, consisting in Tobacco, Brandy, and India Stuffs; Mr. Tavel's Property was consigned to the Supercargo, Francis Roux; Messrs. Holman and Langley were Passengers on board the said Ship from Charlestown to the Coast, and took Charge of their own Property; Mr. Tavel is a Native of Switzerland as aforesaid; Mr. Holman was born in Africa, and is now resident there; Mr. Langley was by birth an American; since died on the Coast of Africa; that the said Lading was delivered on the Coast of Africa, on the real Account of the Shippers; that the Slaves now on-board belong to Mr. Tavel, Mr. M'Guire, Patrick Kearson, Samuel Sammo, Mr. White, the Supercargo Mr. Roux, and Deponent; that said Tavel is an American Citizen; he cannot state where he was born; that Patrick Kearson is also an American Citizen; the Place of his Birth is unknown to Deponent; that Mr. M'Guire is, Deponent believes, also an American Citizen; Samual Sammo is by Birth an Englishman, as Deponent believes, and resident on the Coast of Africa; though a naturalized American; Francis Roux was born in Saint Domingo, though a naturalized American; Mr. White is an American Citizen, the Place of his birth unknown to Deponent; the distinct Interest of each of the aforesaid Persons as follows, Mr. Tavel's Proportion between sixty and seventy Slaves, Mr. M'Guire's thirty-three, Mr. Kearson's ten, Mr. Sammo's fifteen, Mr. White's six, Mr. Roux fifteen, Deponent thirteen; Deponent can take upon himself to swear, that at the Time of Lading said Slaves, and at the present Time, and also if they be restored, they did, do, and will belong to the Persons asserted in the Answer to this Interrogatory to be the Owners thereof, and none other.

To the thirteenth, Saith each of the aforesaid Shippers had three Sets of Bills of Lading, all of same Tenor and Date, signed by Deponent for their respective Number of Slaves, on-board the said Ship, none of those were false or colourable, and none were signed in any Manner different from those which were on-board the Ship at the Time she was taken.

To the fourteenth, Saith that there are not in Great Britain any Letters, Bills of Lading, Invoices, or Instruments relating to this Ship and the Slaves on-board her, to Deponent's Knowledge.

To the fifteenth, Saith there was not any Charterparty signed for this Voyage in which the said Ship was taken.

To the sixteenth, That the usual Ship Papers, and some Private Letters, were on-board at the Time of the Seizure of the Ship; no Papers whatsoever were burnt, torn, thrown overboard, or concealed at such Time.

To the seventeenth, Saith he hath heard and believes that this Vessel has been seized as Prize by a French Privateer while in St. Domingo, and tried and condemned as such in the Island of Cuba.

To the eighteenth, Deponent hath as yet sustained no Loss by the Seizure and Detention of this Ship.

To the nineteenth, Cannot answer if the said Ship and Goods, or any Part, be insured or not.

To the twentieth, In case the Ship had arrived at the destined Port, the Cargo, on being unladen, would still have been the Property of the aforementioned Persons already asserted to be the Owners.

To the twenty-first, Saith the Slaves are all Natives of the Windward Coast of Africa.

To the twenty-second, Saith that the outward-bound Cargo was taken from the Shore at Charlestown, the Slaves were taken also from the Shore in Africa, and neither transhipped from any Vessel.

To the twenty-third, Saith that he believes there are in America some Letters and Papers relating to this Ship and the Cargo; he Deponent hath written two or three Letters to Mr. Tavel aforesaid, previous to and since the Capture.

To the twenty-fourth, Saith that the Whole of the Papers were taken away by the Captain at the Time of Capture, being delivered up by him, Deponent.

To the twenty-fifth, Saith that some of the Slaves have been put on Shore since the Capture of the Vessel in this Port, by an Application to the Court of Vice Admiralty in this Island for that Purpose made.

To the twenty-sixth, Saith that the aforesaid M'Guire and White, mentioned in Deponent's Answer to the twelfth Interrogatory in this his Examination, as part Owners of the Slaves on-board, were Passengers on-board said Ship, at the Time of the Capture thereof; cannot say what may be their Occupation; they came on board at the Rio Pongas, in Africa, and were destined to Charlestown, upon what Business Deponent doth not know; they had an Interest as aforesaid in the Slaves on-board.

To the twenty-seventh, Saith that all the Papers were true and fair, that he Deponent knows of no Matter or Circumstance to affect their Credit.

To the twenty-eighth, Nothing.

To the twenty-ninth, Saith that the Ship was steering towards Martinique at the Time she was pursued and taken; that her Course was not altered upon the Appearance of the Vessel by which she was taken; that her Course was not directed to the Port to which she appears destined by the Ship's Papers; that the Reason of altering the Destination to Martinique was, that after leaving Rio Pongas, the Vessel was becalmed, and Deponent concluding from this Circumstance that the Slaves and Crew on-board would be in Want of Food and Provisions, if the Ship continued the Course for Charlestown, determined to bear away for Martinique; that she was distant from Martinique about Twelve Leagues.

To the thirtieth, Saith that he only knows of the Transfer of this Vessel from Mr. Hamly aforesaid, to her present Owner, Frederick Tavel, for the Consideration of 5500 Dollars as aforesaid; that he believes that Sum to have been actually paid, and the Transfer duly made, and not for the Purpose of covering the Property, and that if she be restored she will belong to said Mr. Tavel and none other.

To the thirty-first, That a few Muskets, some Cutlasses, two or three Pistols, and a small Quantity of Powder, were on-board at the Time of Capture, and no other warlike Stores.

To the thirty-second, Saith that the real and true Property of said Vessel is American, and the Destination Charlestown, in America; the Deponent saith that if he could have met with an advantageous Offer, he would have sold his Proportion of Slaves at Martinique, the Vessel being destined to that Island, for the Purpose of procuring Food and Provisions as aforesaid.

Instructions from F. Tavel to F. Roux, the Supercargo. Dated 15th Nov. 1806.

For Francis Roux, Supercargo on board the Brig Tartar, James Taylor, Master, from the Port of Charleston to Rio Pongas, Coast of Africa, and back to Charleston. The Brig Tartar is bound direct from Charleston to Rio Pongas. Arrived safe in that River, Francis Roux is hereby instructed to apply immediately to all the Factors there, and make his Trade as quick as possible, with such with whom he may meet the greatest Advantage, and above all the quickest Delivery of Slaves in return of the present Cargo under his care. Francis Roux is directed to make his Trade as much as possible at Rio Pongo, not to any other Places of the Coast except in Cases of absolute Necessity, to say, only when he should find no Possibility of obtaining there Slaves in return, he will avoid as much as it will lay in his Power to deliver his Merchandizes without receiving Returns thereof. He will try to dispose of the Whole of his Cargo at once, for a prompt Delivery of the Slaves in return in such Bargain, with proper Security for its Execution on the Part of the Factors or Factor, Francis Roux will trade liberally. Francis Roux will leave nothing behind him on the Coast, whatever may be the Circumstances. The Brig Tartar must bring back the whole Returns of his present Cargo; moreover he will observe my Underwriters not allowing the said Brig more than four Months stay on the Coast of Africa; she must by all Means set sail therefrom before that Time expires. The better to enable Francis Roux to execute and fulfil my Orders for prompt Return, I hereby authorize him to trade for Bees Wax, not exceeding one-third Value of his Cargo. This in Case he should find the Slaves too scarce, and [16] An attestation of Tavel and the sea-letter of the Tartar are omitted.

Bees Wax more easy to be had and at reasonable Price. The Brig having any Room left for Slaves when near his Departure from the Coast, and the whole of mine shipped, will take as many as he can on Freight.

Such as he may take on Freight must be marked or stamped according; none to be taken except their being American Property.

Those belonging to the Cargo must also be marked F T, and those that may be shipped on board by James Taylor, Captain, for Returns of his 4 Hhds. Tobacco, shall bear his Marks, in order to have Mortality, if any, supported by proper concerned.

Whenever one or more Slaves shall be sent on board, James Taylor will give his Receipt thereof per Triplicate, viz.

Received on board the Brig Tartar, bound from this Place to Charleston, Slaves on Account and Risk of Frederick Tavel, Merchant there, Rio Pongo, ditto. These Receipts must be forwarded by every Opportunity, and one Copy thereof left in the Hands of one Factor at Rio Pongo; this being the only Title which would authorize me to receive for the Underwriters, should any Accident happen to my Brig, either on the Coast or on return Passage.

In the Obligations which Mr. Roux will receive in Payment of his Trade, he will have it stipulated as much as it will lay in his Power.

1st. The Quality of the Slaves to be prime, from the Age of 14 to 20.

2nd. The Obligations on the Part of the Traders to bring themselves their Slaves on board the Vessel.

3rd. To have the Slaves delivered at the shortest Time possible, and express a Penalty in case they should not be delivered in the specified Time.

I particularly recommend to Mr. Roux Quickness of Actions; prime Slaves; liberality in Trade, when those Points can be obtained; Care and good Food for return Cargo; Information by every Opportunity as to his Situation, his Hopes, Success, or Misfortunes.

May the Omnipotent grant him Health and Success.

CHARLESTON, November 15th 1806. (Signed) FREDK. TAVEL.

P. S. Should Mr. Francis Roux meet with his Death on his present Voyage, I hereby appoint Mr. John L'Engle, Passenger on board the Brig Tartar, to be his Successor, and to take the Management of my Property on the same.

(Signed) FREDK. TAVEL.[17]

[17] Similar instructions to James Watts, supercargo, dated Feb. 15, 1806, are included among the Ship Papers. Watts was directed to give preference first to John Hollman, and then to Lawrence or Gardner. The final paragraphs of his instructions are not found in those to Roux: "Finally, Captain James Taylor having my full Confidence, as well as Mr. Watts, and wish the latter will confer with the former upon every

392. Minutes of the Privy Council, 1735.[1]

April 3, 1735.

May it Please Your Majesty, The Trustees for establishing the Colony of Georgia in America in pursuance of the Powers and in Obedience to the Directions of them Given by Your Majestys Most Gracious Charter Humbly Lay before Your Majesty the following Law Statute and Ordinance which they being for that Purpose Assembled have prepared as fit and necessary for the Government of the said Colony, And which they most Humbly Present under their Common Seal to Your Most Sacred Majesty in Council for Your Majesty's Most Gracious Approbation and Allowance.

An Act for rendering the Colony of Georgia more Defencible by Prohibiting the Importation and use of Black Slaves or Negroes into the same.

Whereas Experience hath Shewn that the manner of Settling Colonys and Plantations with Black Slaves or Negroes hath obstructed the Increase of English and Christian Inhabitants therein who alone can in case of a War be relyed on for the Defence and

The Trustees had determined upon the law here quoted, along with one prohibiting the use of rum and brandy, and one for maintaining peace with the Indians, at their meeting on Jan. 9, 1735 (ibid., pp. 197-198). See ante, no. 96, for Col. William Byrd's opinion of this action. Security of the same, and hath Exposed the Colonys so settled to the Insurrections Tumults and Rebellions of such Slaves and Negroes and in Case of a Rupture with any Foreign State who should Encourage and Support such Rebellions might Occasion the utter Ruin and loss of such Colonys, For the preventing therefore of so great inconveniences in the said Colony of Georgia. We the Trustees for Establishing the Colony of Georgia in America humbly beseech Your Majesty That it may be Enacted And be it Enacted that from and after the four and twentieth day of June which shall be in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven hundred and thirty five if any Person or Persons whatsoever shall import or bring or shall cause to be imported or brought or shall sell or Barter or use in any manner or way whatsoever in the said Province or in any Part or Place therein any Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes such Person or Persons for every such Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes so imported or brought or caused to be imported or brought or sold Bartered or used within the said Province Contrary to the intent and meaning of this Act shall forfeit and lose the Sum of fifty pounds Sterling Money of Great Britain to be recovered in manner hereafter mentioned one half to the said Trustees for Establishing the Colony of Georgia in America to be applied for the Benefit of the said Colony as the Common Council of the said Trustees or the Major part of them for that purpose present and assembled shall think fit and proper and the other half to such person or persons as shall sue for the same. And be it further Enacted that from and after the said four and twentieth day of June in the Year of Our Lord One thousand Seven hundred and thirty five all and every the Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes which shall at any time then after be found in the said Province of Georgia or within any Part or Place thereof in the Custody house or Possession of Whomsoever the same may be shall and may be Seized and taken by such person or persons as for that purpose shall be authorized and Impowered by the said Common Council of the said Trustees or the Major part of them who shall for that purpose be present and Assembled and the said Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes so seized and taken shall be deemed and adjudged and are hereby declared to be the Sole property of and to belong only to the said Trustees and their Successors and shall and may be Exported Sold and disposed of in such manner as the said Common Council of the said Trustees or the Major part of them for that purpose present and Assembled shall think most for the benefit and good of the said Colony Provided always That if any Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes shall run away from his Master or Mistress in Carolina or any other of His Majesty's Dominions into the said Province of Georgia if the person or persons to whom such Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes shall belong shall within the Space of three months next after such Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes shall have been Seized and taken as aforesaid enter his or their Claim or Claims to such Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes in the Court of the Town of Savanah and shall pay all such Costs and Charges as shall have been expended in apprehending or taking such Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes and also shall make Satisfaction for such Damages and Mischiefs as they or any of them shall have done or Committed on the persons or possessions of any of the Inhabitants whilst within the said Province of Georgia That then and in every such Case the said Court of the Town of Savanah shall and are hereby directed to restore to such owner or owners so claiming as aforesaid all and every such Black or Blacks Negroe or Negroes And be it further Enacted that all Fines Forfeitures and Penaltys which shall be incurred and become forfeited by Virtue of this Act shall and may be recovered in any Court of Record in the said Province of Georgia by Action of Debt Bill Plaint or Information. . . .[2]

393. Diary of the Earl of Egmont, 1735-1738.[1]

Wednesday, 3 [September 1735]. The Scots settled at Joseph's Town having applied for the liberty of making use of negro slaves, we acquainted one of their number, who came over to solicit this and other requests made by them to us, that it could not be allowed, the King having passed an Act against it, of which we read part to him. . . .

Monday, 17 [November 1735].[2] A letter was read from Mr. Samuel Eveleigh that he had quitted his purpose of settling in Georgia, and was returned to Carolina, because we allow not the use of negro slaves, without which he pretends our Colony will never [393] [1] Hist. MSS. Comm., Eighteenth Report, Egmont MSS., II. 193. From this time for nearly fifteen years, contention over the question of the admission of negro slaves continued. The Diary of the Earl of Egmont, in which he summarized discussions of the Trustees, letters and reports received from Georgia, and conversations of those returned from the colony, gives many illustrations of the arguments used to break down the determination of the Trustees or to support their decision. Here Egmont was digesting a discussion of the Trustees.

Tuesday, 6 [June 1738].[4] One thing sworn by him [James Howell] is that he heard proclamation made in St. Augustine that all negroes who did or should hereafter run away from the English should be made free, which proclamation had effect accordingly, for several negroes who ran away thither, and were sold there, were thereupon made free, and the purchasers lost their money. . . .

This proclamation concerning the negroes shews the prudence of the Trustees in not suffering the use of negroes in Georgia. . . .

394. Remonstrance of the Inhabitants of Savannah, 1738.[1]

Savannah, 9th December, 1738.

To the Honorable the Trustees for Establishing the Colony of Georgia in America.

May it please your Honors: We whose names are underwritten, being all settlers, freeholders and inhabitants in the province of Georgia, and being sensible of the great pains and care exerted by you in endeavoring to settle this colony, since it has been under your protection and management, do unanimously join to lay before you, with the utmost regret, the following particulars.[2] . . . Timber is the only thing we have here which we might export, and notwithstanding we are obliged to fall it in planting our land, yet we cannot manufacture it for a foreign market but at double the expense of other colonies; as for instance, the river of May, which is but twenty miles from us, with the allowance of negroes, load vessels with that commodity at one half of the price that we can do; and what should induce persons to bring ships here, when they can be loaded with one half of the expense so near us; therefore the timber on the land is only a continual charge to the possessors of it,

[3] Egmont MSS., II. 449. Egmont was digesting the journal of Thomas Causton, chief magistrate of Savannah.

[4] Ibid., p. 492. The report from a committee of correspondence of an affidavit by Capt. James Howell, before the governor and council of South Carolina, Apr. 21, 1738.

[394] [1] Ga. Hist. Soc., Collections, II. 217-220. Egmont's summary of the petition is to be found in Egmont MSS., III. 50-53, and in Ga. Col. Recs., V. 154.

[2] The protestants first demonstrate that they cannot command a livelihood by the cultivation of the soil; next, that such restrictions have been laid upon trade as to make it impossible for them to gain any advantage from it. The need for negroes is not mentioned until they turn to the possibilities of profit in timber.

though of very great advantage in all the northern colonies, where negroes are allowed, and consequently, labor cheap. We do not in the least doubt but that in time, silk and wine may be produced here, especially the former; but since the cultivation of the land with white servants only, cannot raise provisions for our families as before mentioned, therefore it is likewise impossible to carry on these manufactures according to the present constitution. It is very well known, that Carolina can raise every thing that this colony can, and they having their labor so much cheaper will always ruin our market, unless we are in some measure on a footing with them. . . . Your honors, we imagine, are not insensible of the numbers that have left this province, not being able to support themselves and families any longer. . . .

But we for our parts have entirely relied on and confided in your good intentions, believing you would redress any grievances that should appear; and now, by our long experience, from industry and continual application to improvement of land here, do find it impossible to pursue it, or even to subsist ourselves any longer, according to the present nature of the constitution; and likewise believing you will agree to those measures that are found from experience capable to make this colony succeed, and to promote which we have consumed our money, time and labor; we do, from a sincere regard to its welfare, and in duty both to you and ourselves, beg leave to lay before your immediate consideration, the two following chief causes of these our present misfortunes, and this deplorable state of the colony, and which, we are certain, if granted, would be an infallible remedy for both.[3] . . .

2d. The want of the use of negroes, with proper limitation; which, if granted, would both occasion great numbers of white people to come here, and also render us capable to subsist ourselves, by raising provisions upon our lands, until we could make some produce fit for export, in some measure to balance our importation. We are very sensible of the inconveniences and mischiefs that have already, and do daily arise from an unlimited use of negroes; but we are as sensible that these may be prevented by a due limitation, such as so many to each white man, or so many to such a quantity of land, or in any other manner which your Honors shall think most proper.[4]

[3] The first essential was free title to the land, which the Georgia settlers were not given.

[4] The remonstrance, signed by 117 residents of Savannah, called forth many counter-representations but did not move the Trustees from their position. For their answer, of date June 20, 1739, see Ga. Hist. Soc., Collections, II. 232-233.

395. Diary of the Earl of Egmont, 1739.[1]

Wednesday, 17 Jany. 1738/9. 1. Col. Oglethorpe[2] wrote again to the Trustees, to shew further inconveniences arrising from the allowing the use of Negroes, viz. 1. That it is against the principles by which the Trustees associated together, which was to releive the distressed, whereas we should occasion the misery of thousands in Africa, by setting Men upon using arts to buy and bring into perpetual slavery the poor people, who now live free there. 2. Instead of strengthning, we should weaken the Frontiers of America. 3. Give away to the Owners of slaves that land which was design'd as a Refuge to persecuted Protestants. 4. Prevent all improvements of silk and wine. 5. And glut the Markets with more of the American Comodities, which do already but too much interfere with the English produce.

Savannah 12th March 1738/9.

Gentlemen, . . . Mr. Williams is very angry, and hath got the poor People of Savannah, many of whom are deeply in Debt to him, to sign the Petition for Negroes, which affirms that white men cannot work in this Province.[2] This Assertion I can disprove by hundreds of Witnesses, all the Saltzburghers, the people at Darien, many at Frederica, and Savannah, and all the Industrious in the Province. The idle ones are indeed for Negroes. If the Petition is countenanced the Province is ruined. Mr. Williams and Doctor Talfeur[3] will buy most of the Lands at Savannah with Debts due to

[2] Oglethorpe had been deputy governor of the Royal African Company in 1732 but seems never to have been in sympathy with its trade in blacks. W. B. O. Peabody, in his Life of James Oglethorpe (Library of American Biography, second ser., II.), pp. 223-224, attributes his aversion to the slave trade to his experience with Job ben Solomon; see this work, II. 420-427.

[396] [1] Ga. Col. Recs., vol. XXII., pt. 2, pp. 111-112.

[2] On Jan. 2, 1739, William Stephens wrote to the Trustees concerning Mr. Williams: "but as to the Use of Negroes, I have some reason to think his Aim is more extensive than appears openly; for as he is in Partnership with his Brother and others at St. Hitts [Kitts] and Bristol, who trade much in importing Negroes into the West Indies; tis not hard to conceive what would follow, in case it were in the Power of the Landholders here to alienate such Lands; who for want of money to purchase Slaves, would not want Credit to get 'em upon Land Security; the consequence whereof need not be named." Ibid., vol. XXII., pt. 1, p. 368.

[3] "There is one Talfeur an Apothecary Surgeon who gives Physick and one Williams of whom I wrote to you formerly, a Merchant who quitted planting to sell rum. To these two, almost all the Town is in debt for Physick and Rum and they have raised a strong spirit to desire that Lands may be alienable and then they would take the Lands for the Debts, monopolize the Countrey and settle it with Negroes." Oglethorpe to the Trustees, July 16, 1739, Ga. Hist. Soc., Collections, III. 79-80.

them, and the Inhabitants must go off and be succeeded by Negroes. Yet the very debtors have been weak enough to sign their Desire of Leave to sell.[4]

397. Diary of the Earl of Egmont, 1739-1740.

[Tuesday], 13 March 1738/9.[1] The Saltsburgers at Ebenezer wrote and sign'd a Counter-representation to that sent by the Inhabitants of Savannah, earnestly desiring of Genl. Oglethorpe that Negroes and change of Tenure may not be allow'd of in the Province. In it they express their happy condition, and desire the encouragement they had might be given to others to joyn them.[2] . . .

Saturday, 17 [March 1738/9].[3] . . . 4. Mr. Stephens' journal[4] from 21 November to 2 January following, the remarkable of which are. . . .

That the inhabitants of the northern district had likewise framed a representation signed by 110 hands, among which was John Brownfield, our Register, Dr. Tailfer and Robert Williams, which the latter designed to bring with him to England and lay before the Trustees, wherein they take upon them to demonstrate that no person can carry on any improvement of land on the foot they now are without certain loss, and that they must be allowed negroes. . . .

Sunday 29 [April 1739].[5] This evening Lieut. Col. Cochrane and Capt. Thompson just arrived from Georgia came to see me. . . .

[4] This refers not to the exclusion of negro slaves but to the form of tenure of the Georgia landholder. It will be seen in the passages which follow how closely united the Trustees and the settlers believed negro ownership and land ownership to be.

[2] "The pretended content and satisfaction of the people of Ebenezer, without negroes, will plainly appear to be the dictates of spiritual tyranny, and only the wretched acquiescence of people, who were in truth unacquainted with the privilege of choosing for themselves" ("A Brief Account of the Causes that have retarded the Progress of the Colony of Georgia in America", London, 1743, in Ga. Hist. Soc., Collections, II. 93). Opposition to the introduction of negroes was also frequently expressed by John Martin Bolzius, pastor at Ebenezer. Mar. 14, 1739, Bolzius to Verelts: "I take the Freedom to beseech the Honourable Trustees not to allow any Negro-man or Woman to be carried to and imploy'd at our place or Neighbourhood, seeing that the Consequences of it would be very bad and the Ruin of poor Labourers. White people, if industrius and to follow the Direction of God Gen: III. 19 [in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread] are capable enough to plant here every sort of Country-Grain without hurting their Health in the Summer season; of which is Witness my whole Congregation." Ga. Col. Recs., vol. XXII., pt. 2, p. 121.

[3] Egmont MSS., III. 37; Ga. Col. Recs., V. 138, where the date is Mar. 16. While the substance of the diary as printed in the Georgia Records agrees with that in the Egmont MSS., the wording is seldom identical.

[4] Col. William Stephens was sent to Georgia in 1737, as "Secretary to the Trustees in Georgia". In this office he remained until the government was reorganized in October, 1740, when he was made president of the county of Savannah. A considerable part of his duty was to send to the Trustees a full account of Georgia affiairs, and Egmont writes frequently of the receipt of portions of Stephens's journal. The printed Journal is to be found in Ga. Col. Recs., IV., and Supplement.

That there are many among them mutinous for negroes, and for leave to have their tenure changed into fee simple, that they may sell or manage [mortgage] them to procure negroes.

That Mr. Robert Williams who indeed has been the best improver of land, has his own private advantage in procuring negroes to be suffered, because he traffics in them, but that as the Spaniards declare all negroes that run from the English free, and as Georgia is so near to Augustine, it would undo the Colony to suffer the people to have negroes, and enslave them to the merchants who should furnish them with negroes. . . .

Mr. Verelts . . . gave me several letters to peruse, brought by Thompson 19th August. . . .

2. A counter petition from the settlers at Darien (now called New Inverness) to that sent us from Savannah for having negroes, wherein these of Darien set forth the inconvenience of having negroes. Signed by 18.

3. A letter from Mr. Oglethorp to the Trustees from the camp at St. Simons, dated 16 January, against the admitting of negroes. . . . . .

6. Captain Hugh Mackay's deposition, 19 January 1738-9, that white men can work in Georgia in the heat of summer without injury or complaint.

7. Captain Demere's deposition to the same effect, 19 January 1738-9.

8. Lieut. George Dunbar's deposition to the same effect, 20 January 1738/9.

Wednesday, May 2 [1739, Common Council].[6] . . . We discoursed concerning the late application for negroes from sundry persons in Georgia, and I found everyone present much against it. . . .

Wednesday 9 [May 1739].[7] . . . Mr. Oglethorp's letter to me was to exhort the Trustees not to give way to negroes, or to a permission for the people to sell their land. . . .

Mr. Stephens' journal acquainted us that a conspiracy had been discovered in South Carolina (where they were four to one of the white inhabitants) to cut their masters' throats

Wednesday 16 [May 1739, Georgia Board].[8] He [Capt. Hugh Mackay] told me . . . they [the people of Frederic and Darien] were not for having negroes, for assuredly if they had they should not be able to prevent their running to the Spaniards.

Thursday 7 [June 1739, Robert Hows in answer to questions].[9] That he had long refused to sign the representation for negroes, because he feared they would take the work from white men's hands and impoverish them, as in the case of Charleston, where the tradesmen are all beggars by that means, and besides, there would be danger from negroes rising and cutting their throats; but the promoters of that application said the negroes should not be allowed to work at anything but producing rice (a labour too hard for white men), and in felling timber. . . . That they [the Scots] prevailed on others to sign on assuring them there should not be above two or three negroes to one white man. He granted on my reasoning with him, that the proposal was indiscreet considering our nearness to the Spaniards to whom the negroes would fly. . . .

Wednesday 27 [June 1739].[10] . . . We ordered two hundred copies of the Trust[ee]s' reply to the late application from Savannah for the use of the negroes, to be printed, in order to disperse it in the province.

Wednesday 12 [September 1739, Letter received from Hugh Anderson late overseer of the Public Gardens, who soon after moved to Charleston].[11] He said that without negroes and liberty to mortgage their lands for obtaining them the colony must sink; that people had spent all their substance in improving and were beggared by the dearness of wages to white servants, and the small return of their labours. . . .

It appeared to us that it was only calculated to persuade us to agree to a change of tenure and admission of negroes. . . .

Monday 5 [November 1739, Talk with Mr. Thomas Stephens].[12] We then talked of negroes, concerning whom he said that the people of Darien and Frederica, and of Ebenezer too, who had remonstrated against negroes, were all in their hearts for having them, but that they had been practised upon to declare against them, and particularly, Mr. Cuthbert, who commands some rangers, had been threatened to be turned out if he did not certify against them; and after he had done it, he wished his hand had been off before he signed.

He said he had read the Trustees' answer to the memorial in favour of negroes, which others who had seen it said was not satisfactory. . . .

Mr. Verelts then coming in we talked no more of these matters. He told me Mr. Williams, the great projector of the remonstrance in favour of negroes, was come, and was to be with him this morning. . . . . .

Wednesday 14 [November 1739].[13] Dined . . . with Mr. Ausperger late Surveyor at Frederica . . . as for being allowed to have negroes and liberty to sell, we could not gratify him; but if ever negroes should be allowed, they should be allowed him one of the first. He seemed satisfied, but said that negroes would be an advantage to the colony and might be allowed cautiously, as no more than an equal number to the whites, and to no danger of their cutting the white men's throats. . . .

Monday 4 [February 1740].[14] . . . I asked him [Thos. Stephens] what remedies he had proposed; he replied, the allowance of a limited number of negroes, and a change of our officers.

I said that as to negroes he would not find our Trustee for allowing them, that we wanted them not for the works, labours or produces we intend to carry on, and our nearness to the Spaniards would endanger their cutting the throats of the white men. Besides his father on whose good sense and observation we greatly relied, had ever expressed his aversion to negroes, and certainly, if they had lately rose in Carolina and cut the throats of 34 white men, for which 50 of them were put to death, as the last accounts inform us, how dangerous must it appear to suffer negroes in Georgia, where there are so [few] white men, and at a time when Spain makes all free that fly to Augustine.

He replied, he knew that without negroes the colony must drop: that let our produces be what they will, they cannot turn to account but with their help, and as to his father's opinion, he was afraid to write all the truth, being in fear of Mr. Oglethorpe, who is so ambitious, positive and vindicative that it was dangerous to thwart him in his views. That if an equal number of negroes were allowed in Georgia to that of white men there would be no danger. That laying it down as fact that the colony cannot subsist without them, all arguments of danger should give way thereto.

I said, the people were not able to buy or borrow them if the colony be in truth in so bad a state as he would have one think, and that supposing a man had credit for one he must be answerable to the merchant who should furnish him with one, in case the negro should die or run away, and so be utterly undone.

He said, the chance was not so great, for in four years the work of a negro would pay the price of him, and then the negro would be his own; but should the case happen that the negro ran away or died before, it was only the undoing of one man, while many others would thrive by theirs, . . .

Wednesday 20 [February 1740. Present] [15] Mr. Digby, Egmont, Mr. Lapotre, Mr. Sloper, Chr. Towers, Lord Tirconnel, Mr. Vernon, Mr. Smith, Lord Shaftesbury, Sir William Heathcote. . . . There was laid before the gentlemen a computation of the difference between a person employing ten white men and ten negroes, by which young Mr. Stephens who drew it up pretended in figures and by distinct articles to show that by the labour of ten white servants the owner must be a loser in four years time of 119 l, but he who employs negroes a gainer of 193 l. But several of our gentlemen took notice that the estimate was partially made in favour of negroes, and Captain Dempsey, who was present and is well acquainted with Georgia, assured that white men if industrious could support themselves by their labours without negroes, and that if they were suffered, there would not be 50 out of 500 who would be found remaining after two months, for they would fly to the Spaniards at Augustine, and that it will not be fit to allow of negroes till all Florida be in our hands, for then the negroes will have no place to retire to, the Havannah being so far distant. I observed it was not the inclination of any gentlemen present to favour the admission of negroes. . . .

Friday 9 [May 1740].[16] . . . Lieut. Horton dined with me this day, to whom I read the state of Georgia which Mr. Thomas Stephens had wrote so disparagingly to the Trustees, at which he took great offence and said it was full of falsities and slander. . . .

2. That the people of Frederica had prepared a petition against the introduction of negroes and delivered the same into his hands, but that he advised them to drop it as wholly unnecessary since there was a law against it which they might be sure would not be repealed by the Trustees.

3. That there were a few Scots at Darien who wished for negroes, but it was only to satisfy their countrymen in the northern division, for they were such as, if they had negroes, never designed to cultivate.

19. That negroes would absolutely be the destruction of the colony if introduced, and the people were now all sensible of it. . . .

Thursday 26 [June 1740. At Georgia Office].[17] . . . We had a debate about contenting the inhabitants of our Province by further alteration of their tenure, and allowing of negroes in some shape or other.

Mr. Lapotre was against it, but Mr. Vernon seemed inclined to do both, alleging as to negroes, that our law concerning them does not forbid free negroes from settling among us, but only the using them as slaves. That the preamble of the Act shows the prohibition is only of slaves, and by the law of England a free negro is as much a subject as a white man, and may set up any trade.

Mr. La Roch said the same, but it ought to be well considered before we allowed of free negroes to come into the province, for under colour of that, slaves flying from Carolina passed through our colony to Augustine, could not be known for slaves and therefore could not be taken up.

I said I was as yet against allowing free negroes for the reason Mr. La Roche gave, and because they working cheaper would thereby discourage and drive away white servants, though possibly being free, they might refuse to hire themselves at a cheaper rate than white men, in which case no prejudice could come, and I thought there was no danger of their running away or making insurrections, since they could go nowhere to better themselves, but on the contrary would be made slaves of.

Tuesday, July 1 [1740]. We [Mr. Verelts and Egmont] then discoursed of the admission of free negroes, and it seemed to us on reading the Negro Act that the negro slaves are forbid yet free negroes are not; for though it is forbid to use negroes, yet it is said, contrary to the intent of the Act, and by the preamble it appears the Act was only made against the use of negro slaves. I desired him to get the Attorney General's opinion thereon, for if the use of free negroes were allowed in our Province, they might perhaps hire themselves to the inhabitants at lower wages than the white servants, and it might content the inhabitants without their being slaves, and enable them to cultivate their lands, the dearness of labour being the great complaint.

399. Diary of the Earl of Egmont, 1741.

Tuesday 6 [January, 1740/1].[1] . . .

3. He [Thos. Stephens] said, the Scots were gone away undone by not being allow'd negroes. . . .

6. He then said the colony would come to nothing without negroes, and it was impossible for the people to maintain themselves without them. I answer'd his father thought otherwise, and we had many letters from private persons (not to us but to their relations and parents), declaring they could live by their labour: he said, they were hired to write so to their friends, and their friends hired to shew us those letters. . . .

7. He said he had a scheme for improving the silk that would bring tons yearly to England. I told him, I supposed negroes were at the end of it: he reply'd, yes. Then said I, I shall not hearken to it: for I am so sensible that they would cut the inhabitants' throats, I would not for the world be accessory thereto. He said, he would be but for 2 negroes to one white. I said, that was too many; but what must the poor widows and orphans do, how would they be safe? . . .

[399] [1] Egmont MSS., III. 174-175; Ga. Col. Recs., V. 423-427. The Records give the date as Jan. 5.

Friday 6 [February 1740/1].[2] Richd. Lawley . . . gave me a very bad account of the colony.

1. That every one of the Jews were gone, and that Industrious Man Abraham De Lyon, on whom were all our expectations for cultivating vines and making wine. He said the reason was, the want of negroes, which cost but 6 pence a week to keep, whereas his white servants cost him more than he was able to afford: besides the money the Trustees ordered to be lent him, was paid him by driblets of 5 l. or 10 l. at a time which did him no service.

4. That the people gone away were really industrious, the Scotch excepted in the Northern division but they found without negroes they were not able to subsist. . . .

7. That every one is sensible of the want of negroes, and Frederica, tho' at first they were by the importunity of Lieut. Horton against having them, yet they afterwards gave him a petition to have negroes, which he would not take. N. B. This is the reverse of what the Lieutenant told the Trustees. . . .

16. . . . the want of negroes to fell trees makes lumber so dear that the Islands will not take it off the inhabitants' hands, so that having nothing to truck with, all trade is lost, and the people reduced to beggary, and discouraged from labour.

18. That if negroes were allowed, the colony would people apace, for 'tis very healthy and pays no taxes, so that Planters would bring their negroes from all quarters, and take up land and cultivate.

19. I said, the 50 acre lott would be destroyed for no merchant would lend them a negro on only 50 acres for security: he answered, the owners might become overseers of the other plantations, and besides, a number of rich planters would find employment for the lesser white men. I said, the negroes would be always running to the Spaniards, since they were assured of being made free and protected: he said, the regiment might guard the rivers and prevent it. . . .

Thursday 19 [March 1741].[3] . . . After dinner, Mr. Crockat, a merchant of Charleston (one of the 4 evidences summoned to appear tomorrow to witness against the Trustees) came to us, whom we questioned what he was summoned for. He replied he knew not, but Mr. Stephens had been with him. We asked him his opinion of

1. Negroes in Georgia. He said, the inhabitants should have negroes, and that at a moderate allowance, as 4 negroes to a family of 4 whites: but not as in Carolina, where there are too many, in so much that they had passed a law against introducing more into Charleston.

[2] Egmont MSS., III. 188-189; Ga. Col. Recs., V. 451-453.
[3] Egmont MSS., III. 201-202; Ga. Col. Recs., V. 475-478.

2. We asked him, what number of negroes and white men in Carolina? He said in 1737 there were 22,000 negroes, and about 5000 whites fighting men.

3. We asked him whether he thought Georgia having no negroes, did not prevent the negroes of Carolina from running to the Spaniards? He replied, he knew of none we had stopt.

4. I said, Captain Gascoign stopt 3, and Mr. Christie two.

5. I asked him the price of a negro. He said, one with another, 20 l. I told him a person who settled in Georgia had sold his 2 negroes for 42 l. each.[4] He replied, here and there a particular negro might be worth that, and he has one he would not sell for 70 l.

6. I asked him if he thought a freeholder in Georgia of 50 acres only could be credited with a negro. He said no. Why then (replied I) what must become of them if landholders of 500 acres should use them, and they have none? He replied they might be overseers to the negroes of the richer men. I said, a few might find that employment, but what must the rest do? He replied, all the white men in Georgia might find that employment in Carolina. I said that would depopulate Georgia. He replied no: for if we allowed negroes, there would a thousand come to settle there, and people who had negroes would help white men to live. That the colony would be stronger with 1000 negroes to 1000 white men, than with 500 white men without negroes.

7. We said, negroes might cut the throats of our people, and run to the Spaniards. He said, if negroes are well used, they never run. We said, negroes who were thought so faithful by their Carolina masters, as to be trusted to be masters of petiaguas, and overseers of others have run: to which he replied nothing. . . .

10. That a man may keep 6 negroes for one white Servant.

11. He owned that where there are negroes, a white man despises to work, saying, what, will you have me a slave and work like a negroe? But he said, if such white man had negroes of his own he would work in the field with them.

12. I told him I knew of 3 white men who left Charleston or some other part of Carolina last year, and came to Georgia to take land, complaining they could not live in Carolina by reason the negroes underwrought them. He said he believed they went for some other reason. . . .

14. He owned that Carolina had too many negroes and the laws against their number were not, neither could be kept to. I said, that would be the case in Georgia, if negroes were allowed there under limitations. . . .

[4] The Records (p. 475) gives this as "2 Negroes for 80 £".

16. He said that 40 years ago much silk was made in Carolina, but they had left it because rice was more profitable. I said if negroes were allowed in Georgia the people would also follow rice and not go on the silk. . . .

Saturday 14 [November 1741].[5] . . . Mr. Bofine is very lately returned from his plantation at Purysburg . . . told me. . . .

5. That without negroes they could not cultivate rice.

6. That having no rice, the only thing left for export is lumber, but the West Indies will not take their lumber, because Georgia is not allowed to import rum in exchange, which yet is drunk in as great quantity as if it had free access, on which account the people are very uneasy. . . .

400. Journal of Colonel William Stephens, 1741.[1]

Saturday [Oct. 24, 1741]. Some of the People of Augusta having Plantations on the Carolina Side of the River, as well as in Georgia, where they find it more advantageous to settle, and carry on the Trade with the Indians, together with making great Improvement on their lands; by such Means they have an Opportunity of sliding two or three Negroes now and then at a Pinch into their Plantations, where during their skulking a while (which is not hard to conceive, considering the great extent of the Township of Augusta, by reason of large Tracts of Land) they are not presently to be discovered.

Savannah Decr. 31st 1741.

. . . What they so positively affirm, that they are at least 100 Negroes made use of by the Inhabitants of Augusta, without which, not one Settler would live on that Side of the River; is another Instance of their Labour to magnify Molehills into Mountains; for notwithstanding their quick Sightedness beyond all others, I could never make such a Discovery: 'tis confess'd, I have had Hints given me of some secret Contrivances that way: and Notice has been taken by what Arts it has been conceal'd: one Remark more particularly was lately made by me, how such Practices crept in by Stealth (vide 24th Octr.) but I hope these bold Assertors will not offer to maintain, that any the least Connivance (much less Approbation) has been shewn towards such clandestine Doings; nor deny that they have not only been countenanc'd, but also strictly forbidden, by those in Authority here: and Caution given to prevent it: and is it probable then, that such a Num-

402. Diary of the Earl of Egmont, 1742.

Saturday 16 [January 1742].[1] . . . I found him [Mr. Bofine] now of opinion that it would endanger the Colony to have negroes.

At parting, he desired me to write favourably of him to General Oglethorpe, with whom he desired to live in friendship. I told him I would, and if he would be against negroes in Georgia, the General would soon be his friend. . . .

11 March 1742.[2] Mr. Keneth Baillie . . . inform'd me. . . .

8. That 'twere not safe to allow of Negroes whilst Augustine remains in the Spaniards hands, but if taken it is necessary they should be allow'd, for the white Men are not able to work some hours in the Sumer, and by frequent sickness are so great an expence to the Inhabitants, that their labour will not quit cost. . . .

14. That Benjamin Mackintosh who had left Darien had taken a plantation at Purysburg, and for encouragement had 4 Negroes imediately advanced him. . . .

16. That numbers who had left the Colony would return if Negroes were allow'd, and many from Carolina would do so too.

17. That if allow'd, it would not be so easie for them to run away as we imagine, because generally confind to their Masters Plantation, and unacquainted with the woods: and that they never go but when led by other Negroes who know the roads and passes.

18. That our white Inhabitants are mortified to think that they really fare harder than the Negroes, who being allow'd land and Sunday to work for themselves are no charge to speak of to their Masters, and sell the little produces they raise for money.

403. Colonel William Stephens to Benjamin Martyn, 1742.[1]

Savannah 1 Decr. 1742.

S'r, . . . I do not conceive that from what you are pleased to write in your last, concerning Negros, it is expected I should enter into the Argument of their utility comparatively with white men, and take upon me to give reasons why the honble. Trust[ees] have not thought it hitherto expedient to allow the use of 'em in this Colony; since I find That already done so judiciously, and with such clear Strength of Reason publish'd to the World in the Year 1741; That I think it unanswerable: but for as much as I observe from what you write, that several Gentlemen of Eminence in Trade had given to the Trust[ees] their Opinion in favour of Negros, under proper Regulations and Restrictions; what they are pleased to expect from me now (I think) is, my opinion how Negros can be admitted here consistently with the safety of the Province: which therefore is the Point I am to stick to.

If tis meant without exception as to time, I apprehend the answer is so obvious, and past all controversy, that twill admit of no disquisition: for during the War we have with the Spaniards, and Augustine remaining in their hands, it is impracticable with Safety to make use of Negros in Georgia; which is a Frontier of such a nature, that I conceive it impossible, even for the General, to prevent their escape to the Enemy; tho' his whole Regiment were appointed to keep a Guard for that purpose; as his Excellence has at this time, divers Troops of Rangers appointed by him, to watch and examine persons of all kinds, passing to, and fro' wherever they are found: nevertheless Negros, seeking for liberty, were they now among us, would soon find means, by untrodden paths thro' a Wilderness of thick Woods, to flee to Augustine so near us as tis; more especially when they will not only obtain their promised freedome, but also have Arms put into their hands, and become a part of their Army to fight against us.

Presuming what I have so far said, to be undeniable; it is next to be considered with what safety they can be admitted in time of Peace. As I have always professed my own natural Aversion to keeping Slaves; and still (were it in my choice) would rather prefer keeping of white Servants, if they might be had for moderate Wages; perhaps I may be looked on as prejudiced in my opinion: but since it has fullyly appeared, that there is little or no likelyhood of supplying this Colony wth a competent number of those, to make such improvement in Cultivation of Land as is to be wishd, and at this very time most of our ablest young people, have rather chosen to go into the Publick Service, (either in Scout boats, or as Rangers etc.) than labour in clearing and improving of Land, which too many of 'em shew an aversion to. For these reasons, if the Use of Negros is admitted after the War; tis natural that I should (among others) be dealing for a few also: and in such case I am to offer such regulations and restrictions as occurr to me necessary to be observed, for the future preservation and advantage of the Colony: which I shall endeavour, with due deference to better Judgments, and with a perfect impartiality.

1. If Augustine remains in the Spaniards hands at the conclusion of this War (the contrary of which must be wishd for, by all good Englishmen, who have experienced already too much what a Thorn they are in our side in times of Peace) it ought not to be supposed but that due care would be taken in a Treaty of Peace, effectually to prevent any runaway Negros from being received or entertaind by the Spaniards, either at Augustine, or in any other of their Settlements on Florida: wherein too much care can not be had to prevent their eluding such an Article again, as has been formerly practiced, and which they are very fond of. But in case of any future Rupture betwixt the two Nations, and Augustine still in the hands of the Spaniards; what the consequence then might be, of the negro's revolting to the Enemy, who by that time might probably be some thousands in Number; I must leave to the consideration of those, whose capacitys reach far beyond mine.

2. As to the proportion necessary for the safety of the Colony, how many Negros may be allowed towards carrying on Plantation Work; I conceive that any number not exceeding 4 at most will require one white man, of Growth and Strength sufficient for bearing Arms in defence of his King and Country, always to attend; and either work with 'em, or at least constantly inspect 'em: as well to see them properly employd in the Day time, as to secure them at nights: for which reason such white man must make his abode on the Plantation: and in that case, if the Owner himself shall at any time chuse to continue on his Plantation, to see his own Work carried on, he may be understood to be such a White man as here meant; otherwise he must employ one for that purpose: and whether he himself or a Servant under him be so employd; strickt care should be taken, that Arms of all kinds be kept out of the power of Negros coming at them.

3. Whereas the reason given for the use of Negros has been principally, if not wholly, an Impossibility of clearing land to any degree, and cultivating it without 'em: it tacitly implys, that they are not wanted on any other occasion: which indeed I think: and therefore they ought not to be allowd in Towns, or any where, but on Plantation work: under which term it is to be understood, that rowing in a Boat on his Masters Service, or going to and from one Town or place to another, on the same, is included; since it may conduce to the improvemt. of his Plantation: for a greater liberty would be a great discouragement to labouring white people coming to live among us; who by such means would find little Room to work; as many of our Deserters to Carolina have sadly experienced, contrary to their Expectations: where Negros take off all occasion of white men being hired: and if the case is so, with respect to Day labourers only; much more then ought there to be here a total prohibition of Negro's occupying or learning any trade; which must inevitably contribute to the unpeopling of this Colony. Nor should the Master of such Negros be permitted to let them out to hire for wages which would confirm the practice of converting them to no other use, that putting so much money in his pocket, wherewith to live idle, and voluptuously; as tis most notorious was the case of too many among us formerly who were the first, that upon their Servts. times expiring, and that Fond failing began to be clamorous, and to perswade the World to believe, they were driven hence thro' fear of starving.

These thoughts of mine (such as they are) I have ventured to offer, in Obedience to their Honours commands: humbly submitting it to their Judgments, whether they are of any Validity or not: as also what other determination they'll please to come to, in divers circumstances which will naturally occurr to their considerations; such as what age Negro Children must be of, before they are deemd sufficient to be accounted able Slaves etc.

Ebenezer Dec. 24th 1745.

Revd. and Dear Sir, Besides the Blessings, the Lord was pleased to impart to my Soul in your and Mrs. Whitefield's Conversation, I felt many Griefs and troubles in my heart Since my Return from Bethesda and Savannah, arising from the unhappy News, I heard at Savannah and from your Self, that you are induced to petition the Honble. Trustees for giving their Consent to the Introduction of Negroes into this our Colony, for which you think to be Under Necessity with Respect to the Maintainance of the Orphan House. Dont be amazed, Sir at my Boldness to write to you in this Secular Affair, in which I would not meddle at all, if not the Love to your Worthy person, to my Congregation and to this Colony Oblidged me to it. For the Introduction of Negroes inconsistent with the prayseworthy Scheme of the Honble. Trustees our Lawful and Bountiful Superiours, will be very Mischievous to the happy Settling of this Colony, and Especially to the poor white Labouring people in many Respects, and the Sighs of them would be unprofitable for you or any other, who joins with the principles and aims of the Wishers for Negroe Overseer. A Common white Labourer white Man of the meaner Sort can get his and his Family's Livelyhood honestly in Carolina, except he embraces the Sorry Imploy of a Negroe Overseers. A Common white Labourer in Charles-Town (I am told) has no more Wages, than a Negroe for his work Viz. 7 s. Cur. or 12 d. Sterl. a Day, for which it is in my Opinion impossible to find Victuals, Lodging and washing, much less Cloaths. In case he would Settle and Cultivate a plantation, is not all good and Convenient Ground at the Sea Coasts and Banks of the Rivers taken up in Large Quantities by the Merchants and Other Gentlemen? Consequently the poor white Inhabitants are forced to possess Lands, remote from the Conveniencys of Rivers and from Town to their great Disappointment to Sell their produce. Being not inclined to give their Produce of their Plantations or Other Sort of Work for Such a Low price, as Negroes can afford, they find no market, then they are discouraged and Obliged to Seek their Livelihood in the Garrisons, Forts, Scout-Boats, Trading Boats or to be imploy'd amongst the Negroes upon a Gentleman's Plantation, or they are forced to take Negroes upon Credit, of which they will find in Process of time the Sad Consequences on Account of their Debts. I hear the Negroes in Carolina learn all Sorts of trade, which takes away the bread of a poor white trades' man Like wise.

[404] [1] Ga. Col. Recs., XXIV. 434-444. Two years later the Reverend John Bolzius wrote to Benjamin Martyn, "They call me the fountain of all evils, which they fancy to fall upon them on account of the prohibition of Negroes". Ibid., XXV. 200.

I have Considered the Strength of your Arguments by which you seem to be induced to promote the Introduction of Negroes, as far as it lyes in your power.

First you think the Providence of God has Appointed this Colony rather for the work of black Slaves than for Europians, because of the hot Climate, to which the Negroes are better used than white people.

But, Dear Sir, give me Leave to say, that every honest Labourer amongst us will testify the Contrary and that in some parts of Germany in the Middle of the Summer being the Only Season there to make Hay, and to bring in their Crop, is as hot as here. And if it be so, that in the 3 Months of the Summer it is too hot for white people to work with the hoe in the field, is it so with the plow Can they not Chuse the Morning and Afternoon Hours for Labouring in the Field? Have they not 9 Months in the Year time Enough to prepare the Ground for Europian and Countrey Grain? Which preference they enjoy not in the Northern Parts, by Reason of the Deep Snow and the Exceeding Cold Weather.[2] . . .

II. Your Second Argument for the Introduction of Negroes was, that the Trustees have laid out about 250,000 Pounds Sterl. for Establishing this Colony, and almost to no purpose.[3] . . . There are so many Thousands of Protestants in Germany, who would embrace eagerly an Invitation to this Colony, if they could meet with Encouragement, as they will in time, and it is a Thousand pity, that you will help to make this Retirement and Refuge for poor persecuted or Necessitous Protestants, a Harbour of Black Slaves, and deprive them of the benefit to be Settled here. . . .

III. Your third Argument was, that you have laid out great Sums of Money for Building and Maintaining the Orphan House, which you could not continue without Negroes, and this be the Case of Other Gentlemen in the Colony.

[2] The writer argues that the inhabitants are really better off than those of the northern colonies, where haying must be done in the heat of summer.

[3] Bolzius's answer here is that the colony has been settled with the wrong kind of inhabitants.

But let me intreat you, Sir, not to have regard for a Single Orphan House, and to Contribute Some thing Mischievous to the Overthrow of the prayseworthy Scheme of the Trustees with Respect to the whole Colony.[4]

IV. Your Last Argument for Negroes was, as I remember, that you intended to bring them to the Knowledge of Christ.

But, Sir, my Heart wishes, that first the White people in the Colony and Neighbourhood may be brought to the Saving and Experimental Knowledge of Christ. As long as they are for this World, and take Advantage of the poor black Slaves, they will increase the Sins of the Land to a great Heighth. If a Minister had a Call to imploy his Strength and time to Convert Negroes, he has in Carolina a Large Field. Dont believe, Sir, the Language of those persons, who wish the Introduction of Negroes under pretence of promoting their Spiritual Happiness, as well as in a Limited Number and under some Restrictions. I am sure, that if the Trustees allow'd to one thousand White Settlers so many Negroes, in a few Years you would meet in the Streets, So as in Carolina, with many Malattoes, and many Negroe Children, which in process of time will fill the Colony. The Assembly in Carolina have made good Laws and Restrictions in favour of the White people, but how many are, who pay regard and Obedience to them? not better would fare the Restrictions and Good Laws of the Trustees. I will not mention the great Danger, to which we are exposed by the Introduction of Negroes with Respect to the Spaniards, and it is a Groundless thing, to say, that one of the Articles of Peace with Spain must be not to give Shelter to the Negroes at Augustine, who would run away.[5] . . .

405. Repeal of the Act excluding Negroes, 1750.[1]

May it please Your Majesty,

The Trustees for establishing the Colony of Georgia in America in pursuance of the Powers and in Obedience to the Directions to them

[4] The burden of the writer's answer is that it would be better to sacrifice an orphan's home than to drive from the colony all the poor laboring people.

[5] The danger from the Spanish and the Providence which had thus far preserved the colony occupy the remainder of the letter. Determination to have negroes was waxing in the colony. On June 11, 1746, John Dobell wrote to the Trustees: "My Lord they are stark Mad after Negroes, and this is the Cause that they endeavour to Poison and spoil all the Trustees good Designs. This is the Cause why Coll. Stephens stirred up his son to act openly against the Trustees, and this is the Cause why he continues the same opposition against the Trustees to this Day secretly." Ga. Col. Recs., XXV. 72.

[405] [1] Ga. Col. Recs., I. 56. In May, 1748, the president and assistants of Georgia wrote to Secretary Martyn that some people of South Carolina had petitioned for Georgia lands, intending to introduce negroes, and that already several families had moved into Georgia with their negroes. The order had been given to seize the negroes, but given by Your Majesty's most Gracious Charter humbly lay before Your Majesty the following Law Statute and Ordinance which they being for that purpose assembled have prepared as fit and necessary for the Government of the said Colony and which They most humbly present under their Common Seal to Your most Sacred Majesty in Council for your Majesty's most Gracious Approbation and Allowance.

> An Act for repealing an Act Intituled (An Act for rendering the Colony of Georgia more defensible by prohibiting the Importation and Use of Black Slaves or Negroes into the same) and for permitting the Importation and Use of them in the Colony under proper Restrictions and Regulations, and for other Purposes therein mentioned.

Whereas an Act was passed by his Majesty in Council in the Eighth Year of his Reign Intituled (an Act for rendering the Colony of Georgia more defensible by prohibiting the Importation and Use of Black Slaves or Negroes into the same) by which Act the Importation and Use of Black Slaves or Negroes in the said Colony was absolutely prohibited and forbid under the Penalty therein mentioned and whereas at the time of passing the said Act the said Colony of Georgia being in its Infancy the Introduction of Black Slaves or Negroes would have been of dangerous Consequence but at present it may be a Benefit to the said Colony and a Convenience and Encouragement to the Inhabitants thereof to permit the Importation and Use of them into the said Colony under proper Restrictions and Regulations without Danger to the said Colony as the late War hath been happily concluded and a General Peace established. Therefore we the Trustees for establishing the Colony of Georgia in America humbly beseech Your Majesty that it may be Enacted And be it enacted That the said Act and every Clause and Article therein contained be from henceforth repealed and made void and of none Effect and be it Further Enacted that from and after the first day of January in the Year of Our Lord One thousand seven hundred and fifty it shall and may be lawful to import or bring Black Slaves or Negroes into the Province of Georgia in America and to keep and use the same therein under the Restrictions and Regulations hereinafter mentioned and directed to be observed concerning the same And for that purpose be it Further Enacted that from and after the said first day of January in the Year if this were done it would drive Georgia inhabitants into Carolina. They advised the Trustees to give up the attempt to exclude negroes (ibid., XXV. 290-294). Of the attitude of the magistrates toward the incursion of negroes Alexander Heron wrote, "Its well known to every one in the Colony that Negroes have been in and about Savannah for these several Years that the Magistrates knew and wink'd at it and that their constant Toast is the one thing needful by which is meant Negroes" (ibid., p. 295). For deliberations preliminary to this repeal see ibid., pp. 347-348.

of Our Lord One thousand seven hundred and fifty it shall and may be lawful for every Person inhabiting and holding and cultivating Lands within the said Province of Georgia and having and constantly keeping one white Man Servant on his own Lands capable of bearing Arms and aged between sixteen and sixty five Years to have and keep four Male Negroes or Blacks upon his Plantation there and so in Proportion to the Number of such white Men Servants capable of bearing Arms and of such Age as aforesaid as shall be kept by every Person within the said Province And Be It Further Enacted that every Person who shall from and after the said first day of January in the Year of Our Lord One thousand seven hundred and fifty have and keep more than four Male Negroes or Blacks to every such Male Servant as aforesaid contrary to the Intent and true Meaning of this Act shall forfeit the Sum of Ten pounds Sterling Money of Great Britain for every such Male Negroe or Black which he shall have and keep above the said Number and shall also forfeit the further Sum of Five pounds of like Money for each Month after during which he shall retain and keep such Male Negroe or Black the said several Sums of Ten pounds and Five pounds to be recovered and applyed in such manner as is hereinafter mentioned and be it Further Enacted that no Artificer within the said Province of Georgia (Coopers only excepted) shall take any Negroe or Black as an Apprentice nor shall any Planter or Planters within the said Providence lend or let out to any other Planter or Planters within the same any Negroe or Negroes Black or Blacks to be employed otherwise than in manuring and cultivating their Plantations in the Country. . . . And be it Further Enacted that all and every Negroe and Negroes Black and Blacks which shall be imported into or born within the said Province of Georgia shall be registered in a proper Office or Offices to be kept for that Purpose within the said Province and that no Sale of any such Negroe or Negroes Black or Blacks shall be good or valid unless the same be duly registered as aforesaid. And that Inquisitions shall be made and taken once in every Year (or oftner if need shall be) into the several Registers thereof by Juries to be impannelled for that purpose within the several Districts of the said Province who shall immediately after such Inquisition make their several Reports and Returns to the President and Magistrates of the said Province and whereas the permitting Ships with Negroes or Blacks to send them on Shore when ill of contagious Distempers (particularly the Yellow Fever) must be of the most dangerous Consequence Therefore for the Prevention of so great a Calamity be it further enacted that no Ship which shall bring any Negroes or Blacks to the said Province shall land any Negroe or Negroes Black or Blacks within the said Province until such Ship shall have been visited by the proper Officer or Officers of the said Province for that purpose and shall have obtained a Certificate of Health And that no Ship which shall come to the said Province with Negroes or Blacks shall come nearer to the said Province than Cockspur at the Mouth of the River Savannah but that every such Ship shall first anchor and remain there until such Ship shall have been visited by the proper Officer or Officers And if upon Inspection any such Ship shall be found to be infected such Ship shall perform such Quarantine in Tybee Creek in the River Savannah as by the President and Assistants of the said Province shall be from time to time ordered and directed. And to the End that due Care may be taken of the Crews of such infected Ships and of the Negroes brought therein be it further enacted that a Lazaretto be forthwith built within the said Province under the Direction and Inspection of the President and Magistrates thereof on the West Side of Tybee Island in the said River Savannah for the Use and Convenience of the said Colony where the whole Crews of such infected Ships and the Negroes brought therein may be conveniently lodged and assisted with Medecines and accommodated with Refreshments to be provided at the Expence of the Captain of the Ship And in Case any Master of a Ship shall attempt to land any Negroes in any other Part of the Colony except as aforesaid he shall for the said Offence forfeit the Sum of Five hundred pounds Sterling Money of Great Britain And in Case he shall land any Negroes before his Ship is visited and the proper Certificate of Health obtained or not perform the full Quarantine directed he shall for the said Offence not only forfeit the like Sum of Five Hundred pounds but also the Negroes on board the said Ship The said Forfeitures to be recovered and applied in such manner as is herein after mentioned and be it further enacted that if any Person or Persons shall not permit or even oblige his or their Negroe or Negroes Black or Blacks to attend at some time on the Lords Day for Instruction in the Christian Religion in such Place and Places as the Protestant Ministers of the Gospel within the said Province shall be able to attend them contiguous to the Residence of such Negroe or Negroes Black or Blacks such Person or Persons shall for every such Offence forfeit the Sum of Ten pounds Sterling Money of Great Britain to be recovered and applied in such manner as is hereinafter mentioned. . . . To which the Common Seal was affixed the Eighth day of August 1750.

[13] "For sale at Sunbury, on Tuesday the 28th of May, A Parcel of about Fifty Likely Slaves, all in perfect health, and picked out of several large cargoes from Gambia. Sunbury, May 20, 1765. ANDREW DARLING and Co." (Ga. Gazette, May 23, 1765). The Experiment's entry may have been in 1763, not 1765.

[14] "George Baillie and Co. have just imported in the snow Leghorn Galley, from the West-Indies, a Parcel of Prime Grain Coast Slaves. Barreled pork or rice will be taken in payment." Ibid., Feb. 14, 1765.

[15] One vessel which brought negroes to Savannah in April does not appear in this list: "A schooner from Jamaica, Alexander Mills master, is put into this port, having negroes on board with the smallpox. His Excellency the Governor has ordered the negroes to be put on shore at a convenient place in Tybee creek, and the vessel to perform quarantine of ten days, in the mean time using all proper means to cleanse it from the infection." Ibid., Apr. 25, 1765.

[19] The prohibitive act in force in South Carolina after Jan. 1, 1766, accounts for the disposal of these negroes in Savannah. The effect of the Carolina duty on the Georgia market is noticeable in returns here given. There was also direct trade from Savannah to Africa in 1766. The snow Bance Island, James Hay, sailed from Savannah for Africa June 30, 1766. Ibid., July 2, 1766.

[25] At the Savannah customhouse 22 negroes were entered between Oct. 10 and Jan. 5, and 28 between Jan. 5 and Apr. 5, 1767 (Ga. Gazette, Jan. 14, Apr. 15, 1767). No vessel in this list explains the following: "On Tuesday the 17th inst. will be sold at Savannah, About 40 Likely New Negroes, Consisting mostly of Men and Women, Lately from Gambia and Sierreleon. The conditions of sale will be, payment of one third the value on delivery of the slaves; for the remaining two thirds credit will be given to the first of January, paying interest and giving approved security. ALEX. WYLLY. N. B. Rice will be received in payment at market price, if delivered in 15 days from the days of sale (ibid., Mar. 11, 1767). From another list three may be added to the Savannah entries: Dec. 29, 1766, Two Friends, John Bound, owners, Baptist Looby, Jos. Farley, jr., 37 from Antigua; Jan. 2, 1767, Mary Ann, Samuel Smith, owners, Jeremiah Pinniston, Samuel Smith, 10 from St. Eustatius; Jan. 3, 1767, Betty, John Higgin, owner, William Glover, 10 from Montserrat.

[27] No vessel here named exactly meets the conditions described in an item which appeared in the Newport Mercury, Oct. 5, 1767, and in the Mass. Gazette and News Letter, Oct. 8, but the Prince George is probably the Guineaman referred to: "From Georgia we learn that a Guineaman is arrived there with two hundred healthy slaves, and had not lost one during the whole voyage from the coast." The cargo of the Prince George was sold by Inglis and Hall, who announced it as 160 on its arrival. Ga. Gazette, Sept. 9, 1767.

[28] The customs entries in the Gazette record the Jenny, Cowey, from Africa with slaves, also, "The Schooner Susannah, John Huxtable master, arrived at Tybee last night from Charlestown, with upwards of 90 new negroes on board" (ibid., Nov. 25, Dec. 30, 1767). One more vessel we know visited Georgia in 1767: "Capt. Patrick Redmond . . . relates that he sailed from Jamaica master of the Schooner Beggars Bennison, with Negroes for Georgia, where he could not sell them, when he left that place for Newbern, but in a storm of the 16th and 17th of October he sprung a leak, which gained on them till she was half full of water, when on the first of November for the preservation of their lives, they run the schooner ashore on Core Bank, about ten miles N. E. of Cape-Lookout, where the vessel is lost, but the people, Negroes and rigging, were saved except three Negroes, who died on the Beach" (ibid., Jan. 20, 1768). On Dec. 16, 1767, were advertised "About Thirty Likely New Negroes to be sold on Wednesday next by COWPER and TELFAIRS". With the new negroes brought in by ones and twos from the West Indies there is no way of determining their African source. A casual examination of the notices for runaways appearing in the Gazette between 1765 and 1769 does not yield much information as to origin: five are designated as of the Angola country, one, of the Gambia country; two are Bamba or Bumba born; one, of the Suroga country; four are Ebo negroes; four Cormantines; one, of the Kishee country; seven from the Congo country (of three of these the advertisement reads, "not Angola's frequently called Congo's"); one, from the Fellah country; sixteen, Guinea born. These are from a total of forty-eight advertisements.

[407] [1] This list and those similar to it which follow have been compiled from the advertisements in the Georgia Gazette. A "List of ships cleared in Senegambia, 1767-1778" gives five Georgia vessels, but there is no hint as to whether they were slave vessels (C. O. 5: 150, pp. 681-691). In September, 1768, the Mercury of Georgia sailed for Africa. S. C. Gazette, Sept. 19, 1768.

[2] The customs entries note the arrival of the Venus, the Harlequin, and the Elizabeth but no advertisements of their cargoes have been discovered. Ga. Gazette, July 27, Sept. 14, 28, 1768. The Venus itself, was advertised for sale on Aug. 24.

[3] Cowper and Telfairs advertised thirty new negroes for sale on Sept. 30. Ga. Gazette, Sept. 21, 1768.

[5] The Georgia Gazette of Oct. 26 mentioned the arrival of two unnamed schooners and a sloop with slaves, while in the issues of Nov. 2 and 9 Inglis and Hall and John Graham and Co. announce parcels for sale (those of Graham being from Guinea and the Gold Coast), but make no reference to the vessels which brought the negroes. Near the end of the year Georgia placed a duty on incoming negroes that had been more than six months in any of the West India or Continental colonies. The money was to be used to rebuild the lighthouse on Tybee Island. Ga. Col. Recs., XIX. 83; Ga. Gazette, Dec. 28, 1768.

408. James Lucena to Aaron Lopez, 1768.[1]

Dear Sir, This will be delivered to you by Captain Nathaniel Waldron. He is to proceed from this port to the Windward Islands there to procure a Cargo of Molasses, and other produce, and then he is to proceed to Rhode Island, and deliver to you what Cargo and money he may have belonging to me, to be invested in Rum, and what you think proper for the intended Voiage to the Coast of Affrica. If Captain Waldron proceeds the Voiage round, he is to have the time he first takes in any part of the Cargo, the customary wages and privelege given in general from Rhode Island to a Master of a Vessell of the burthen of myne. The mate John Brown is also to have the customary wages and privelege of Rhode Island, to begein from the time the Molasses Cargo is delivered.

And neither of them are to receive of you any wages for the west India and Affrica Voiage being agreed the whole to be paid here. I desire you to let me know the time when the alteration of their Wages takes place, as the wages they now go for are very high.

As this Letter will not come to hand this long while, I will take other opportunity to write more at large and Remain, Sir,

P. S. As we are not acquainted what are the customary wages and privelege to the Coast of Affrica is left to you to determine it.

410. Minutes of Meetings of the Council, 1773.[1]

At a Council held at his Honor the Presidents house on Friday the 12th March 1773.

Present: His Excelly. Sir James Wright Baronet

The Honble. { James Habersham, Noble Jones, Jams. Ed. Powell, Grey Elliott, Anthy. Stokes } Esqrs.

His Excelly acquainted the Board, He had received Information, that the Brig Ann Zachariah Witherdon Master who Arrived at Tybee on the 10th Inst. with Negroes from the Island of Antigua, has the small Pox on board; And therefore he desired the opinion of the Board thereon, in pursuance of and agreeable to the several Acts of the General Assembly now in force, and such cases provided. His [410] [1] Ga. Col. Recs., XII. 356-359.

Excelly further Acquainted the Board, that Messrs. Joseph Clay and Co. to whom the above Vessell and Negroes are consigned, had applied to him for Permission to have such of the Negroes on board the said Vessell as have not yet had the Disorder Inoculated. In order that the Difficulties and Inconveniency's of a long Quarantine and the danger of Spreading the disorder maybe the more easily Avoided; And also that the said Vessell after landing the Slaves and being well and sufficiently cleansed and fumigated so as to prevent as much as may be the retention or spreading the Infection (And which they Undertake shall be done) might be permitted to come up to Town after such a time as may be thought proper.

The Board taking the several Matters aforsd into Consideration, Were Unanimously of Opinion that, this his Excelly. should permit such Inoculation, and that the Vessell upon proof of her being Cleansed and fumigated, might be allowed to Come up to Town, fourteen days after landing the Negroes, And also Unanimously Advised his Excelly. to Issue the following orders

That the Brign. Ann be carried into and Moored in Tybee Creek there to be Cleansed and fumigated and remain during the space of fourteen days, and that the Slaves therein be put on shore at the Lazaretto there to be Inoculated, and there to remain at least 40 days after the last person Infected shall have recovered, and that the Slaves so put on shore be prohibited and restrained from going beyond the Marsh on Tybee Island which divides the publick land from the other part of the Island; and that it be strictly enjoyn'd that such Slaves as may die during the Quarantine be buried in some Convenient place on the publick land, at least five feet beneath the Surface, and that no person or persons whatever be permitted to go on board the said Vessell or to land within the space or limits above described under the pain of being obliged to remain and perform the same Quarantine as the said Vessell, or the Slaves on shore shall perform, and also of the penalty's by Law in such Cases Inflicted. That all provisions and Necessaries that may be wanted by the Crew on board the said Vessell, or the Slaves on Shore be landed at the Oyster bank below the Lazaretto and that when any boat shall be sent down therewith the Commander of the Scout boat be directed to put a proper person on board such boat so sent down, with orders to prevent any person therein from Landing or having any Intercourse with the persons on board the said Vessell, or with those on shore, and that the Commander of the Scout boat and the Keeper of the Lazaretto be appointed to Inforce these orders pursuant to the Quarantine Act. And that the Person or persons who shall Inoculate the Slaves to be landed as aforsd shall perform a Quarantine of ten days after the last of the said Slaves who may have the small pox is thoroughly recovered.

N B.—Charge copy for Atty. General. . . .

At a Council held at his honor the presidents house on Monday the 15th March 1773.[2]

His Excelly. Acquainted the Board that Messrs. Joseph Clay and Co. to whom the Slaves in the Brig Ann Capt. Witherdon, (among whom the Small pox has appeared) are consigned, had made Application to him, that such part of the orders Resolved upon the 12th Instant with respect to the Quarantine of the said Slaves and Vessell as regarded the Person or Persons Inoculating the said Slaves should be Altered, And that the Person or Persons so Inoculating might after the Inoculating be permitted to return up to Town. The Board taking the same Consideration, Advised his Excelly. that the orders should be, that the person or Persons who shall Inoculate the said Slaves be Required and directed, after he or they have Inoculated such of the Slaves as may be thought Necessary, to remain for ten days at Cockspur or Elsewhere, on the sea shore after he or they have Changed his or their Cloaths, before he or they return to Savannah. . . .

413. Sir James Wright to Lord Dartmouth, 1775.[1]

My Lord, . . . The Council of Safety Seems to be the Executive Branch in each Colony, Subject to the Provincial Congress, and the General and Parochial Committees Dispense Law, and Exercise the Powers of the Several Courts, just as it seems Right in their own Eyes, for how far they have any Regard to the true Principles of Either Law or Equity; your Lordship will Judge from the following case, which was determined two or three days ago only, Viz., a Ship arrived here from Senegal with a Cargoe of 204 Slaves, the Captain was immediately ordered not to proceed to Town, or to Attempt to land any of the Negroes without leave of the Committee, and he was then Directed to Petition the Parochial Committee which he did, and Although he had not only Law, but many Equitable and Substantial reasons on his side, yet he was Ordered to depart the Port immediately on which he by Petition appealed to the General Committee, and they Affirmed the Orders of the Parochial Committee, and the Captain is Compelled to proceed to Sea just at the Equinox, which may be the loss of the lives of numbers of them as we often have very Tempestuous weather at this Season, and indeed the Vessell and Cargoe may Probably be lost, and all Perish, and if not the Poor Creatures are so dispirited at the thoughts of being carried to sea again that they are growing sickly and many of them will certainly dye before they can get into another Port. The Captain intends for St. Augustine if the weather permits and at best supposes the Loss to the owners will be near if not quite 3000 Sterling. . . .

Savannah in Georgia the 14th of Octr. 1775.

My Lord, . . . On the 25th instant my Lord an Inquiry was made whether the Vessell with the Negroes (mentioned in my letter No. 58) was Sailed, and she having been Prevented from Sailing by contrary winds and bad weather it was hinted by 2 of the General Committee that if another Application was made, Possibly they might be Suffered to land and an application was accordingly made and the next day the 26th a Permit was sent down by the General Committee, to their Officer to let the Negroes be brought up, and on the 28th they were landed. Several had Dyed in the mean time, and many Were then unable to Stir, and the Cargo in General I Suppose one third less in value than when the Vessell arrived and thus Your Lordship sees, how the Kings Port and mens Property are in the Absolute power of these People, Whether this proceeded from a Motive of Humanity or whether from an Apprehension of the Consequences of being

414. Joseph Clay to Scott, Dover, Taylor, and Bell, 1783.[1]

Savannah, April 15, 1783.

. . . The produce of your Island will always bring reasonable prices but Negro's in my opinion will yield a great profit I shoud have no doubt of getting 60 a 70 for good Windward Coast Negro Men and for Women or leeward Coast Negro in proportion. . . .

415. Joseph Clay to Joachim Noel Fanning, 1783.[1]

Savannah, April 23, 1783.

. . . Trade will expand here beyond conception Negro's will be in great demand and will bring high prices the best way for you to place your money here will be by Commerce as you may thereby do it with some profit if you choose this mode I will be concern'd with you in any way you please either to dispose of anything you may choose to consign to me on your own Account on Commission, or to take a part with you in the concern as you may think proper. Dry Goods will answer very well Negro's from Africa will do far better, and something may be done from the W. Indies particularly the french Islands. . . .

416. Joseph Clay to James Jackson, 1784.[1]

Savannah, February 16, 1784.

. . . the Negro business is a great object with us, both with a View to our Interest individually, and the general prosperity of this State and its commerce, it is to the Trade of this Country, as the Soul to the Body, and without it no House can gain a proper Stability, the Planter will as far as in his power sacrifice every thing to attain Negroes, and those who have the disposal of them, will always command their Crops, which is every thing to a Merchant; the prices with us are tempting to the adventurer, until importation takes place immediately from the Coast, many will be sent in from the W I. Islands, we have a small Cargo on hand from there at this time, but this is not the Channell we woud wish to attain them

417. J. and T. H. Perkins to W. Stevenson, 1792.[1]

[Boston,] Dec. 1, 1792.

We have agreed with the owners of the Snow Clarissa to perform a voyage from one of the Windward Islands to Havanna. Capt. Wm. McNiel (nephew of Daniel) carries a cargo from Georgia and with the proceeds he is to purchase 15 Slaves, in Order to gain admittance into the Havanna. . . . They must be all new Negroes.[2] . . .

[2] In 1789 the Speed(well) from St. Croix brought in two new negroes; the Fanny, three negro men from Montserrat; in 1790, the Sally, three negroes from St. Martins, the Anne, twelve from Jamaica. Library of Congress, Savannah Customs Records.

[417] [1] L. V. Briggs, History and Genealogy of the Cabot Family, I. 391. Stevenson was a correspondent of the Boston house of Perkins, located in St. Eustatius.

[2] Despite Northern disapproval slaves continued to be imported into Georgia. The New York Journal of Sept. 8, 1792, stated that one Georgia paper advertised in a single issue two cargoes, which amounted to 560 negroes. The following is probably one of these: "Savannah August 2. The Ship America, Capt. Connolly is arrived here from Sierra Leona, with upwards of 200 slaves, who will soon be exposed for sale. Capt. Connolly informs of a ship having been picked up at sea, between Cape Mount and the river Sierra Leona, with 3 or 4 white men, and 80 or 90 slaves on board, supposed to belong to Rhode Island" (ibid., Sept. 1, 1792). "Savannah, (Georgia) May 31. The master, supercargo, mate, and four seamen, of the schooner Dolphin of Boston, have been committed to the jail of this city, for kidnapping Negroes at Martinico, and selling them at this port" (Salem Gazette, July 10, 1792). The Favorite, J. McIver, owned by G. Howell of London, may have delivered slaves in Georgia during 1792 (Catterall, Judicial Cases, II. 276). Meanwhile, South Carolina had renewed its determination not to allow the entry of negroes (N. Y. Journal, Sept. 5, 1792). The next year Georgia passed a restrictive act, which did not accomplish complete prohibition. DuBois, p. 236.

[419] [1] L. C., Savannah Customs Records, 1795. In 1794 the schooner Nancy, Vincent Hyer, owned by William Macleod of Charleston, brought from the Banana Islands 62 negroes. The name of the consignee in this record has completely disintegrated.

[2] The slaves, "laden in River of Gambia", were "shipped by Isaac Gorham for Robert Watts, Savannah".

[3] This schooner, 102 tons, Massachusetts built, belonged to Thomas Johnston, John McCown, and William Sprowl of Bristol (R. I.?).

[4] One assumes that the slaves were loaded at the Bananas, though the maker of the manifest writes it, "Port of Beanunas". The negroes were: 88 men, 48 women, 76 boys, 25 girls. The Fortunas of Savanna, Edward Johnston, from Port au Prince, brought in seven slaves for Charleston.

421. News Item relating to Slave Trade, 1797.[1]

Savannah, September 14 [1797.].

On the 12th inst. arrived at Cockspur, the schooner Exuma, Capt. Daniel Callaghan from New Providence. The 9th inst. in lat. 29 39. long. 79 42, picked up the long boat of the armed ship General Nichols, Captain Michael Morrison belonging to Grenada. The General Nichols left New-Providence on the 2d inst. with Negroes, supposed for this port, and in a heavy gale of wind on the 18th foundered. The long boat and yawl had hardly time to get from her, when she went down with 122 of the cargo. In the long boat, were saved 5 whites and 35 negroes, and when they got along side the Exuma, had nothing to eat or drink. The yawl (having sails) with the Captain, Mr. Peter Morris, Supercargo, five other whites, and three negroes, parted company with the other boat immediately after leaving the ship, and has not yet been heard of. It is hoped, from the favourable weather a few days past, that they may have made some port to the southward.[2]

422. Memoir on the Company of the West, 1717 (?).[1]

. . . La traitte des Negres de Guinée avoit toujours esté en compagnie jusqu'au mois de janvier 1716. que sur les instances des négotians la liberté de ce commerce leur fut accordée, mais indépendamment des raisons generalles qui obligent de joindre plusieurs affaires ensemble pour former une compagnie dont les puissances estrangeres ne prissent point d'ombrage, il a esté reconnu que la liberté de ce commerce n'est pas avantageuse aux Colonnies en ce qu'il faut qu'elles soient fournies annuellement d'un nombre de negres suffisant et a peu pres egal ce que l'on estime a six ou sept mil negres par an, la Compagnie du Senegal en fournit 1500. et il convient d'assurer le surplus par un envoy egal en telle sorte qu'il n'en arrive pas trop dans une année et trop peu dans une autre, enfin il faut remarquer que ces trois partyes de commerce qu'on réunit en une mesme compagnie n'ont jamais esté libres, que par une infinité de raisons qui seroient trop longues à expliquer il ne convient pas quelles le soient et que bien loin que cette compagnie gesne le commerce comme elle sera tres considerable et ouverte a tous ceux qui vouderont y entrer personne ne peut avoir sujet de s'en plaindre. . . .

423. Instructions to Captain Herpin, 1718.[1]

Instruction pour le sr. Herpin Commandant du Vaisseau "L'aurore" destiné pour la Traitte des Negres à la Coste de Guynée.

Le Sr. Herpin Capitaine de la fregatte L'aurore mettra à la voille de St. Malo du premier Vent favorable pour aller à la Coste de Guynée y faire la Traitte des Negres;

Ledit sr. herpin fera son premier atterage Entre le Cap de Monte et le Cap Mezurade, il fera son Eau à Mezurade et prendra dans le mesme Lieu du Bois et de l'eau en quantité suffisante pour aller à l'amérique.

Il Evitera d'aller a Festre à cause des dangers auxquels sont Exposés les Chaloupes pour y faire de l'eau.

Aprés avoir fait son Eau et son bois au Cap Mezurade, il continuera sa Route pour Juda,[2] il poura toucher en passant à Cabolahou, Jacques Lahou et Jacques Jacques au Cap Ste. appolonie et y Traitter quelques Negres en observant de ne demeurer que deux a trois jours en chaque endroit, il peut mesme Traitter du Ris dans les Endroits cy dessus nommez.

En partant du cap Ste. appolonie il prendra le large, et ne regagnera la Coste que Vers lampy,[3] auquel lieu il poura demeurer dix à douze jours, et il y Traittera le plus de Negres quil luy sera possible.

dans les differents Endroits ou ledit Sr. herpin fera la Traitte des Negres il fera en sorte d'en Traitter quelques Uns qui sachent cultiver le Ris, il traittera aussy Trois ou quatre Barriques de Ris propre à semer qu'il remettra à son arrivée à la Colonie aux directeurs de la Compagnie.

Led. sr. herpin se rendra Ensuite a Juda et Se concertera avec le sr. Bouchel Tant pour faire les présents ordinaire au Roy que pour achever sa Traitte qu'il fera avec le plus de diligence quil sera possible, observant de ne Traitter aucun Negre ny Negresse qui ayt au dessus de 30 ans, autant qu'il sera possible ni au dessous de huit. Nous estimons qu'elle peut estre de 400 Negres, son Vaisseau estant assez grand pour les Contenir et ayant de marchandises pour les Traitter.

Le Sr. herpin observera de faire toute la diligence possible dans Sa Traitte en quelques lieux quil la fasse, puisqu'il scayt que la santé des Nègres et la bonté du Voyage dépendent du peu de tems que les Negres sont a Bord.

Il observera Encore pendant le Tems qu'il sera dans le Rade de Juda de faire faire de l'eau pour remplacer celle qui aura été consommée depuis son départ du Cap mezurade, et pour la Consommation qu'il en fera dans ladite Rade.

On Sçay que l 'eau est assez difficile à faire à Juda, mais au moyen d'un Vat et Vient qu'on Etablit à Terre et à la chaloupe que est mouillée en dehors de la Barre on en peut facilement faire deux chaloupées par jour.

Quand ledit Sr. herpin aura finy sa Traitte il fera voille pour la Colonie, et nous luy deffendons sous quelque prétexte que ce puisse estre de Toucher aux isles de fernande et de Poo, de Corisque, du Prince, de St. Thome et danabou [5] non plus qu'au Cap de Lopo, les Relaches dans les lieux cy dessus ne sont que pour faire de l'eau et du Bois, nayant besoin ny de l'Un ny de l'autre à son départ de Juda, il allongeroit son voyage et il Exposeroit son Equipage et ses negres aux maladies qui sont ordinaires dans ces lieux la.

Nous ordonnons au s. herpin, a Tous ses officiers et au chirurgien de prendre grand soin de la santé des nègres d'Empescher la débauche des Negresses avec les Negres et l'Equipage, de les faire tous Entretenir proprement de faire nettoyer et grater Tous les jours l'Entrepont afin qu'il ne s'y Engendre point de Corruption.

Comme il est moralement Impossible que le Sr. herpin n'ayt pas besoin de raffraichissement dans la Route de Juda à la Colonie Tant pour son Equipage que pour les Negres, il relachera a la grenade et il prendra les raffraichissements dont il aura besoin et il en tirera des lettres de change sur le Sr. Deshayes Caissier de la Compagnie à Paris.

Led. Sr. herpin Evitera absolument de relacher à la Martinique, Guadeloupe, St. Domingue, ny à aucune colonie francoise ou Etrangere.

Il fera le moins de séjour qu'il poura à la Grenade, et il prendra toutes les precautions possibles pour Eviter les forbans.

Comme nous ne doutons pas que le Sr. herpin ne trouve à la Coste de Guynée des Vaisseaux Portugais, il Tachera de traitter avec Eux du Tabac de Bresil jusques à la concurrence de deux à trois cent livres pesant, il en distribuera aux negres avec Economie et il remettra le Reste Entre les mains des directeurs à la Colonie.

Le Sr. herpin arrivé a la Colonie mouillera à l'Isle dauphine, ou à la Vuë de lad'e isle, il Envoyera dabord sa chaloupe à terre avertir les directeurs de son arrivée, Ensuite il leur delivrera ses negres et suivra en tous les ordres quils luy donneront.

Ledit s. herpin fera le moins de sejour qu'il poura à la Colonie Il Embarquera les marchandises qui seront prestes dans les magazins de la Compagnie, et il reviendra directement à la Rochelle, et pour qu'il ne soit point obligé de relacher en revenant il prendra des Vivres pour deux mois et demy.

Il Evitera pendant sa Route soit en allant soit en revenant de reconnaistre aucun Vaisseau et il prendra grand soin de les Eviter tous.

Si pendant le Cours du voyage le Seigneur disposoit du Sr. herpin, nous Etablissons le Sr. Gascherie pour Commander en sa place et au deffaut de Tous les deux ce sera le Troisième qui aura la Commandement du Vaisseau, Nous Enjoignons aux Uns et aux autres d'observer les ordres cy dessus, et aux Equipages de leur obéir.

Nous ordonnons au s. herpin et a Tous autres officers de Régir et Gouverner leur Equipage suivant les ordres du Roy les uz [usages] et coutumes de la mer.

Au surplus, nous recommandons au Sr. herpin et a Tous ses officiers de menager en Tout les mtz [marchandises] de la Compagnie, d'autant qu'ils peuvent compter qu'elle recompensera ceux qui le meriteront, et qu'il le fera punir ceux qui ne se comporteront pas bien.

Dans les Cas non preveus dans les presents ordres la Compagnie s'en Rapporte à la prudence dudit s. herpin.

En cas qu'il reste à M. herpin des marchandises de Traitte après avoir fait sa Carguaison de negres il délivrera lesd. marchandises au directeur du Comptoir de Juda dont il prendra un Receu par duplicata au bas de l'Etat des marchandises qu'il luy aura laissé, Il Emportera Un de ces receus avec luy dans la Colonie, et envoyera l'autre par le premier Vaisseau qui partira de Juda pour france et pour les isles et luy remettra la lettre qu'il trouvera cy joint.[6]

429. Directors of the Company of the Indies to the Comte de Maurepas, 1729.[1]

1729 Octobre 26, Paris.

Monseigneur, Nous avons reçeu la lettre que vous nous avez fait l'honneur de nous Ecrire le 25 de ce mois par laquelle nous voyons que le Sr. de la Rigaudière de la Clisse cy devant capitaine de la Mutine, vous a porté ses plaintes de ce que la Compagnie ne luy a payé pour gratification que 5 ll. par teste de noir de ceux qu'il a remis à la Louisianne au lieu de 7 ll. qu'elle paye ordinairement, et cela sous pretexte qu'il êtoit destiné pour St. Domingue.

Cet officier, Monseigneur, partit de L'Orient au mois de may 1725: Il etoit porteur d'une deliberation de la Compagnie qui fixoit la gratiffication pour les Noirs que les Capitaine remettroient aux Colonies de l'Amerique à 5 ll. par tête, il a été payé sur ce pied la somme il en convient.

Il est vray que depuis pour porter les Capitaines à avoir plus d'attention à la conservation des noirs, et a engager même ceux des vaisseaux du Senegal a se rendre directement a la Loüisianne sans relacher, la Compagnie s'est determinée à accorder aux Capitaines qui vont du Senegal à la Loüisianne la même gratiffication de 7 ll. par tête de noir qu'elle accorde aux Capitaines qui vont de Juda aux Colonies d'Amerique, mais il ne s'en suit pas que cette Deliberation qui n'a été prise par la Compagnie que plus de 8 mois apres le depart du Sr. de la Clisse doive avoir un effet retroactif en sa faveur, La Comp'e à executé, les Conditions qu'elle avoit accordé au Sr. de la Clisse lors de son depart quoy qu'elle ait eu lieu de se plaindre de la conduite de cet officier comme nous avons eu l'honneur de vous le faire connoître par un memoire que la Compagnie vous remit par sa lettre du 17 Novembre de l'année derniere, nous vous Suplions de trouver bon, qu'elle rejette sa demande qui tres mal fondée.[2]

1730, Janvier 14, Paris.

M.R. M. Raudot

Les directeurs de la Compage. 1730

Monseigneur, Nous avons reçeu la lettre que vous nous avez fait l'honneur de nous ecrire le 11 de ce mois.

Les nouvelles plaintes du Sr. de la Clisse au Sujet de la gratification qu'il demande sur les Negres qu'il a introduits a la Loüisianne ne sont pas mieux fondées que toutes celles qu'il a cy devant faites: C'est un deffaut de Refflexion en luy de vouloir Etablir son droit sur la deliberation de la Compagnie du 28 Juin 1724 et de pretendre en consequence a 7 ll par teste de noir, tandis qu'il n'est fait mention que de 5 ll. dans cette même piece qu'il cite comme luy etant avantageuse.

Ce qui est plus certain que tout ce que le Sr. de la Clisse avance, c'est que la Compagnie n'a deliberé d'accorder 7 ll. pour les negres qui Seroient introduits du Senegal a la Loüisianne que le 19 du mois de decembre de l'année 1725, avant le Sr. de la Clisse, ainsy que de son tems, et jusques a la datte du 19 décembre 1725, aucun Capitaine n'a eu du Senegal a la Loüisianne plus de 5 ll. par teste de noir.

Le Sr. de la Clisse est party de Lorient Le 30 may de la même année 1725; par consequent dans le tems que la Gratiffication n'Etoit que de 5 ll. par negre.

Il est encore vray que son vaisseau avoit ordre d'aller a St. Dominigue, et que la Compagnie changea sa destination, parcequ' ayant apres que les habitans de cette isle avoient retenus deux navires negriers qui alloient a la Loüisianne, Elle jugea a propos de remplacer ces Cargaisons par celle du Sr. de la Clisse et du navire l'aurore, a qui elle deffendit de toucher a St. Domingue.

L'ordre de ce changement de destination est en datte du 30 may qui est le même jour du depart de Lorient, il fût envoyé au Sr. de la Clisse au Senegal, ou il le reçut au mois de Juillet Suivant, il en partit le 27 9bre de Sorte que touttes ces dattes sont anterieures au 19 Xbre qui est celle de la deliberation des 7 ll. par teste de noir, La Compagnie n'a jamais pretendu donner un Effet retroactif a cette disposition, et le Sr. de la Clisse est encore moins fondé que tout autre de se l'imaginer.

Quand bien même toutes ces raisons ne seroient pas invincibles, la Compagnie aura l'honneur, Monseigneur, de vous observer que les gratifications qu'Elle accorde pour les negres sont toujours sous la condition qu'Elle sera contente de la conduitte de ses officiers, et non autrement. Il s'en faut de beaucoup qu'Elle ne l'ait Eté de celle du Sr. de la Clisse; ainsy sans rapeller les pieces qu'Elle a eû l'honneur de vous remettre contre luy le 17 9bre 1728. Nous nous croyons obligés de rejetter Sa demande qui ne nous paroist fondée en aucun cas.[2]

431. Proposition made by the Company of the Indies, 1732.[1]

1732, Décembre 13.

Proposition de la Compagnie des Indes de s'acquitter envers le Roi en fournissant des nègres à la Louisiane N. S.

La Compagnie des Indes qui doit payer a la marine du Roy, Suivant l'Etat cy joint, et dans les termes y Enoncés a commencer du premier janvier 1733 Jusqu'au premier Juillet 1741 Inclusivement la Somme de huit cens quatre mil cinq cens dix livres dix huit Sols, propose d'en acquitter partie Successivement et par Compensation au moyen d'un transport equivalent de Noirs du Senegal a la Louisianne, et ce aux conditions suivantes:

1° Chaque cargaison de noirs sera assortie de deux tiers de males et d'un tiers de femelles.

2° Il y en aura aumoins quatre cinquiesmes des ages depuis quinze jusqu'a trente ans, Et il ne pourra y avoir qu'un cinquieme depuis dix ans jusqu'a quinze, que si neamoins dans la totalité d'une Cargaison, Il se trouvoit quelques masles d'un age au dessus de trente ans et de trente cinq ans au plus, Ils ne pourront estre rebutés, sinon dans le cas ou sur cent noirs, Il y en auroit plus de six de l'age au dessus de trente ans.

3° Une negresse enceinte ne Sera point de rebut a moins qu'elle ne fut agée de plus de trente ans.

5° S'il arrivoit qu'il y en eut quelques uns de mis au rebut Ils pourront estre librement rembarqués dans le navire de la Compagnie sans que celuy qui sera preposé a la reception des cargaisons de noirs du Senegal a la Louisianne, ou tels autres quels qu'ils soient, puissent les retenir d'autorité aux prix qu'il leur plairra de les Arbitrer.

6° Chaque noir, negresse, negrillon et negrite sera Exempt de defauts Notables et Essentiels.

7° La livraison s'en fera par teste, sans entrer dans aucune regulation, Et sans autre Egard qu'aux Stipulations cy dessus.

8° Le preposé a la reception sera tenu d'en prendre livraison a l'Isle nominée la Balise, et non ailleurs dans les dix jours a compter du jour de l'arrivée du navire de la Comp'e aud. lieu.

9° Faute par le preposé a la Reception d'en prendre livraison dans led. terme des d. jours, tous noirs, negresses, negrillons et negrites, qui viendront a mourir passé ce tems là, Seront et demeureront pour le Compte de la Marine du Roy; a l'Effet de quoy il en sera dressé proces verbal en bonne et deüe forme par les officiers de l'Etat Major du Navire de la Comp'e.

10° Le navire de la Compagnie des Indes ne pourra estre astraint et obligé qu'a un mois de planche a la Balise, tant pour la livraison de Sa Cargaison que pour son Expedition, ni estre retenu aud. lieu en quelque cas ou pour quelque raison que ce puisse estre.

11° Sera tenu le preposé a la Reception aussitôt aprés la livraison, d'en donner aud. lieu dela Balise, et non ailleurs, son reçû par duplicata et triplicata au Capitaine du Navire de la Compagnie, ou a son defaut, a celuy qui aura fait lad. livraison.

12° Lesdits Noirs, Negresses, Negrillons et Negrites Indistinctement seront payés a la Comp'ie des Indes a raison de Six Cens livres chaque teste.

13° A la seule presentation du reçû du susd. preposé a la reception, le tresorier general de la Marine du Roy en exercice, auquel led. reçû sera remis, sera tenu de delivrer sans delay, pour le montant de lad. livraison Suivant le prix cy dessus, au Caissier general de la Compagnie des Indes quittance en forme de pareille Somme sur celles qui resteront veües, et qui Seront a payer par lad. Compagnie a la Marine de Sa Majesté pour raison de la retrocession de la Louisianne aux termes tant des dites deliberations de lad. Compagnie et de la Soumission de Ses Sindics et directeurs des 24 janvier 25 avril 1731, et 20 aoust 1732, que des arets du Conseil d'Etat des 27 mars 1731, et 2e 7bre 1732, Sur ce Intervenus.

432. Reply to the Proposition of the Company of the Indies, 1732.[1]

1732 Décembre 30.

Réponse du Ministère de la Marine à la proposition de la Compagnie des Indes de s'acquitter envers le Roi en fournissant des nègres à la Louisiane N. S.

[432] [1] M. des Col., C 2, 25: 98-99.

La proposition d'acquitter partie de la somme de 804,510 ll. 18 s. que la Compagnie des Indes doit payer a la Marine a commencer du p'er Janv 1733 jusqu'au premier Juillet 1741 Inclusivement, paroit pouvoir Egalement Convenir a la Comp'e et a la Colonie; il n'est question que d'en regler les Conditions, et de fixer le tems de cette fourniture, et Sur quels termes de payement elle sera compensée. Les trois premieres parties qui Echoient les pre. Janv. et 1'er Juillet 1733 et le 1'er Janvier 1734 montant a 225,000 ll. ne peuvent Entrer dans cette compensation, parcequ'outre qu'il n'y aura point de fourniture avant ce tems, la marine a besoin de ce fonds pour des depenses qui interessent la Sûreté de la Colonie.

Il seroit a Souhaitter que toute la fourniture ne fut pas en negres Senegalais, les habitans ont besoin de negres pour travailler a la terre, on Scait que Ceux du Senegal n'y sont pas propres, Ils sont fort bons domestiques.

L'assortiment proposé de 2/3 de mâles et du tiers de femelles, paroit convenable.

La proposition de 4/5 aumoins depuis 15 Jusqua 30 ans, et le cinquieme de 10 ans Jusqua 15, paroit aussi convenable, pourvu que cela soit assorti.

Les 3 et 4 Art. ne souffrent aucune difficulté.

Les 5 et 6 sont dans le même cas.

Le 7 qui Contient que la livraison l'En fera par terre, Sans entrer dans aucune regulation, ne paroit pas convenir, Il seroit même prejudiciable a la Comp'e, parceque la reception pouvant dependre des officiers preposés par le Roy, Il pourroit arriver que par un motif de zele ou autrement, Ils refuseroint d'en recevoir la plus grande partie, ce qui prejudicieroit a la Compagnie tant par la prolongation de la Negotiation, que par la mortalité des negres qu'il faudroit transporter aux Isles.

Il est d'ailleurs plus regulier de traiter a la Charge de la Regulation, et Cela est plus dans l'ordre, et pour le Roy, Et pour la Comp'e. Cela leve aussi toutes les difficultés.

On ne peut acquiescer a la proposition de recevoir les negres a la Balise, les officiers du Roy qui seront preposés pour la reception, resident a la Nouvelle Orléans, les magasins y sont ainsi que les Secours pour la Nourriture, et c'est la ou se fait le commerce, Il seroit difficile que ces officiers se transportent a la Balise, parcequ'en tous tems leur presence Est Indispensablement necessaire a la Nouvelle Orleans, ou la livraison des negres doit se faire, et non ailleurs; on ne comprend point quels peuvent Estre les motifs de la Comp'e dans cette proposition, elle est contre la bonne regle et elle peut estre prejudiciable a la Comp'e qui ayant encore des effets a recouvrer dans la

Colonie, les prendra d'autant mieux a la nouvelle Orléans, quelle n'y a plus de batimens pour les transporter a la Balise.

Le mois de relache paroit suffisant, pourveu que ce soit a la Nouvelle orleans, et quant a la retenüe des navires, Il n'y a point d'aparence que cela arrive; mais En tout cas Si le service du Roy, et la Seureté de la Colonie Exigeoint qu'on Eut besoin de Vaisseaux de la Comp'e, Il Seroit juste de la dedomager de la depense du retardement.

Le prix de 600 ll. demandé par la Comp'e paroit bon pourveu que ce soit par teste de Negre pris d'Inde et non autrement; en le reglant sur ce pied la, la Compagnie y trouvera plus d'avantage que Si elle les vendoit 1000 ll. même 1200 aux Isles, parcequ'outre que se payant en france par ses mains, elle ne Courra point les risque des retours, les voyages des vaisseaux seront plus courts, et elle evitera la perte aumoins de 35 ou 40 pour Cent Sur la Vente des Sucres et autres Effets qui Seroint donnés aux Isles En payement des Negres qui ne Seroint d'ailleurs vendus qua terme; ainsi le prix de 600 ll. piece d'Inde paroit raisonnable et avantageux a la Comp'e.

Si le Roy se determinoit a Consentir qu'ils fussent Receus Indistinctement par teste, ce qui ne convient pas pour les Raisons expliquées, on Estime que le payement ne pourroit Exceder 400 ll. a 450 ll.

La proposition qu'il Soit donné quittance a la Comp'e par le tresorier general de la Marine, en justiffiant de la remise des Negres aux officiers preposés pour la perception est juste.

Il sera necessaire Si la Convention a lieu, que la Comp'e prene une deliberation conformement a ce qui sera reglé, Et qu'elle Soit [pr]omologuée par un arret.

433. Memoir of the Company of the Indies, 1733.[1]

1733, Janvier 13.

Mémoire de la Compagnie des Indes au sujet de sa proposition de s'acquitter envers le Roi en fournissant des nègres à la Louisiane. N. S.

Memoire

La proposition, que la Comp'e des Indes a faite a la marine du Roy au sujet d'un transport de Noirs du Senegal a la Louisianne, est fondé sur les plus mûres reflections, l'affaire a été bien pesée et bien examinée; et la campagnie ne S'est fixée en presence de Monseigneur, aux treize articles que la proposition contient, quapres avoir moins consulté sur chaque article son Interest propre, que le desir d'Estre de quelque secours et de quelque utilité a la Colonie de la Louisianne. la Compagnie a fait en cela d'ellemême tout ce qu'elle pouvoit faire; Et il ne semble pas que la proposition conviene a la marine du Roy a en juger par sa reponse que Monseigneur a donné En Communication a la Comp'e. Monseigneur est donc Suplié de permettre a la Comp'e de se desister de toute veüe d'Entrer la dessus en traité avec la Marine de Sa Majesté, ou de Sen tenir Invariablement aux articles proposés, auxquels il ne Sçauroit estre apporté de changement qui ne soit d'un tres grand prejudice pour Elle.

[433] [1] M. des Col., C 2, 25: 225. Endorsed: "Envoyé a M. de Maurepas le memoire cy joint reponse au Sien. Sur la proposition de la Compe. de transporter des Negres a la Louisiane, pour s'aquiter envers le Roy."

434. Comte de Maurepas to Vaudreuil and Salmon, 1752.[1]

Le Comte de Maurepas, Ministre de la Marine, à de Vaudreuil, gouverneur, et Salmon, ordonnateur à la Louisiane

M. M., Je reponds a la lettre de M'rs de Bienville et Salmon du 24 mars d'er, concernant le projet des S'rs Du Breüil et Dalcourt pour l'introd'on d'une cargaison de Negres a La Louisianne.

Ce projet n'a pas pu s'executer avec les S'rs Pascaud de la Rochelle, ces Neg's s'estant arrestés a des difficultés qui estoient insurmontables. Le Sr. Dalcourt s'est determiné a f're un armem't pr. son compte et celuy du S'r Du Breüil; mais il s'est trouvé obligé d'en reduire l'objet a une Cargaison de 200 Negres. Il a pour cet effet achepté un Bastiment qu'il doit f're armer a la Rochelle; Et pour luy faciliter la traite des Noirs, j'ay engagé la Comp'ie des Indes a les luy f're livrer dans son comptoir du Senegal, au prix dont il est convenu avec elle, et payable en francs, moytié comptant, et l'autre moytié au mois de Juillet prochain. Il doit se rendre Incessam. a la Rochelle pr. presser son armem't; et je ne sais encore s'il ne prendra pas le party d'aller luy mesme au Senegal. Quoy qu'il en soit, j'ay deux choses a vous prescrire au sujet de cette entreprise.

La p'r est de la favoriser en tout ce qui pourra dependre de vous. Les S'rs Dalcourt et Du Breüil S'y sont sans doute portés dans l'esperance d'y trouver de benefice; mais outre qu'il est juste qu'ils puissent en effet en retirer, c'est que cela est d'ailleurs a desirer pour l'avantage mesme de la Colonie, puisque s'ils venoient malheureusem't a y echouer, il n'en faudroit pas davantage pr. degouter entiérem't les armateurs de france non seulem't de la traite des noirs a La Loüis'e, mais peut estre mesme de tout commerce avec cette Colonie; car enfin il n'est gueres possible que ce comm'ce puisse se soutenir si les retours de la Colonie n'augmentent pas, Et ces retours, loin d' augmenter, ne pourront au contraire que diminuer, si elle ne reçoit pas des Secours de Negres.

[434] [1] Arch. Nat., Col., B 7, 4: 630-630 v., 631-631 v. Dalcour's project for carrying negroes to Louisiana had been under consideration for some time, Sept. 25, Oct. 2, 1741. Col., B 73: 63, 134.

Les avantages que j'ay procurés aux S'rs Dalcourt et Du Breüil doivent vous f're sentir de plus en plus combien cet objet me tient a coeur; je suis persuadé que vous y concourrés de vostre mieux. Je dois ajouter a cet egard qu'en tenant la main a ce que ces deux particuliers n'abusent pas du besoin que les Blancs ont de Negres pour les leur vendre a un prix exorbitant, il convient aussy que vous fassiez entendre aux haans q'ls doivent s'ex'er de leur part non seulem't pr. cette cargaison mais encore pr. celles qu'on pourra leur porter dans la suite, les dep'es et les risques des armemements de cette espece estant d'un objet bien plus considerable pr. la Loüisiane que pour les Isles.

La 2'de chose que j'ay a vous recommander, c'est de veiller a ce que les S'rs Dalcourt et Du Breüil prennent de justes mesures pr f're passer en france les fonds necessaires pr le payem't q'ls doivent faire au mois de Juillet prochain de la 2'de moytié du prix des Negres que la Comp'ie des Indes doit leur faire livrer. Ce payement doit estre de 30m ll; Et s'ils n'y satisfaisoient pas, je serois oblige d'y f're suppléer des fonds de la Marine, la Comp'ie ne s'estant determinée a leur faire ce credit, qu'a cette condition. Vous aurés agreable de me rendre compte de ce qu'ils feront sur cela, et M'r Salmon aura Soin de me prevenir particulierement des effets qu'ils feront embarquer Sur le V'au du Roy.

Au Surplus, Soitque cette enterprise reüssisse ou qu'elle echoüe, je suivray les autres vües que j'ay pr. procurer des Negres a La Colonie. J'avois pensé a y en faire introduire une cargaison pr. le compte du Roy, afin de retirer les papiers de Caisse qui ont esté repandus dans le public; Et j'avois demandé a M'rs de Bienville et Salmon de me mettre en estat de prendre un party sur cela, en me faisant Savoir au juste le cours de ces papiers et a quel prix pourroient estre vendus les negres payables avec ces effets. Mais ils ne m'ont pas donné ces ecclaircissements et je sens qu'ils ne pourroient pas le faire par la confusion avec laquelle les papiers de Caisse ont esté repandus dans le public, ce qui est la source du desordre qui regne et dans les finances et dans le Commerce de la Colonie.

J'attens que M. Salmon ayt constaté l'estat des choses a cet esgard, et que vous puissiés satisf're a ce que j'avois demandé sur l'Idée d'un Envoy de Negres pr. le Compte du Roy.[2]

[2] "Dup'ta a Mr. Salmon a V'les le 22, 8bre 1742." Endorsed: "Je reponds, M. a vos lettres des 3 et 4 avril et du 18 Juin d'ers. . . . Vos apprendrés par une depesche commune a vous et a M. de Vaudreüil l'arrangement qui a esté fait par le S'r Dalcourt avec la Comp'ie des Indes p une cargaison de 200 negres. La lettre de change de 30,000 ll. luy a esté remise et Sera aquitteé a son echeance." Apparently 182 Guinea slaves were brought in during the next year (Sept. 26, 1743, Vaudreuil to Comte de Maurepas, Col. F 3, 128). Dalcour's negroes, obtained from the Company of the Indies, he had not yet paid for in April, 1745. Comte de Maurepas to the Directors of the Company of the Indies, Col., B 82: 34, 55.

435. Comte de Maurepas to M. de Fulvy, 1742.[1]

Le Comte de Maurepas, Ministre de la Marine, à de Fulvy.

Le S'r Dalcourt m'a representé, M. qu'au lieu de 200 negres qu'il avoit dabord demandés a la Compagnie des Indes, la fourniture a esté portée à 220; mais que par le traité qui a esté passe a cette occasion il a esté reglé qu'il donneroit des Suretés pour le payem't du prix de ces 20 Negres d'augmentation; Et il m'a demandé de pourvoir a cet objet qui est de 6000 ll. Par les mesmes motifs qui m'ont desja fait agir sur cette entreprise je ferai encore agréer au Roy que si le Sr. Dalcourt manquoit de satisfaire au payement du prix de ces 6000 ll. dans les termes qui ont esté stipulés par le traité passé avec lui, je pourrai y faire Suppléer par le Tresorier general de la Marine au mois de jan'er de l'année 1744 en mesme temps que je ferai faire le payement des 30,000 ll. Supposé que le Sr. Dalcourt n'y satisfit pas, Si cet arrangement convient a la Compagnie, je vous prie de vouloir bien me le marquer.

436. Memoir on the Commerce of Louisiana, 1754.[1]

La Louisiane 1754 [Sept. 15?] Détails sur le commerce á faire a la Louisiane

Memoire de Commérce sur la louisiane avec les opérations qui en Résultent

. . . Mais ce commerce Ne peut se faire avec avantage sans celuy de Negres, dont Je vay proposer les opérations, parce que le pays manqu'ant de Negres, tous les habitants mettent tout En Reserve pour En avoir, Et s'attendent que la Cour ou le commerce leur En Enverront, En sorte qu'on peut s'assurer qu'ils faciliteront une pareille Entréprise, Non Seulement par la preferance de L'achat de leurs Besoins, mais encore en portant leurs Revenus davance, pour Etre assurés d'avoir des negres; Et lon pourroit sassurer d'avoir par la, une Espéce d'Exclusion tacite pour ce commerce; Ils me l'ont fort promis, Et je crois qu'on peut y faire fonds avec assurance.

Peu de tems avant le depart du premier Navire En carguaison pour la Louisiane, Il faut expedier un Navire de 170 Th'x ou Environ de 330 Negres pour guinée a la botte [coste?] dor avec ordre quil prenne de la Junesse autant quil sera possible, sçavoir les deux tiers En malles et l'autre En femmes, quil ny aye pas plus de 15 a 20 Negrillons ou Negrittes, Et que le Reste soit de l'age depuis 15 Jusqua 25 années, Et fournir de bons Vivres pour que les Negres ne souffrent pas, Et qu'il passe au cap pour suivre les avis que le gereur de la louisiane, y aura Laissés pour sa Gouverne; Il prendra un julotte

pour la louisiane, pourra Meme faire descendre quelques Negres a terre pour Rassurer le Reste de la carguaison sur leur sort. Et la, leur distribuera a chaqu'un un Rechange, cest a dire une chemise Et une culotte aux malles, Et une chemise Et une Juppe aux femmes, ce petit contentement leur faira Entreprendre avec plus de plaisir la traversée pour la louisiane, ou on leur promettra des les Mieux habiller; Et cet habillement les garantira des Cousins Et de la Bigaille, qu'ils sentiront En montant le fleuve; il Raffraichira ses vivres s'il En est besoin, Et partira le plustot possible pour la louisiane, ou il trouvera a la Balize qui est l'entrée du fleuve, les avis Necessaires du gereur de la louisiane pour Monter promptement sa carguaison, Et d'ou il donnera un Etat Exact de sa carguaison pour que le gereur puisse les Vendre Et distribuer En arrivant.

Lon Voit par ce compte, qu'on a fait pour 20,000 ll. d'Envois de moins que Ne monte la Vente de la carguaison; cette somme servira non seulement a L'achat de partie de L'habitation proposée, mais aussy pour Tenir lieu des deptes Retardées, dont cependant on fait partie de la Remise par le Navire En carguaison pour la Louisiane ainsy quil a Eté Expliqué dans le compte de cet armément En Carguaison

Le compte de cet armément Est doublé sur le tableau En 1755 parce qu'il faut qu'un mois au plus tard apres L'armément du prémier Negrier pour la Louisiane, il en parte un pareil avec les memes opérations affin qu'il puisse arriver avant les froids a la Louisiane; Il en est tres Necessaire de prendre ces précautions dans les Commencement, affin de Mettre En usage tout ce que peut contribuer a la Reussitte de cette Entreprise, par la craintequ'on ne fut découragé s'il arrivoit dans les commencements des accidents qu'on N'auroit pas prevus, mais dans la suitte par les precautions que l'on prendra, et les Etablisséments quon faira sur l'habitation, les Negres pourront arriver En toutte saison.

On voit donc par le Tableau de commerce des Négres, l'armément de deux Negriers, dont le capital Monte a f 280,500 ll. sur lequel le proffit Réel est de 227,680 ll. les Negres pieces dinde valent jusqu'a 1400 ll. cependant Je ne les passe que sur le pied de 900 ll. L'un dans L'autre, Ils pourront Rentrer a d'avantage s'ils sont Bien choisis, et qu'on voulut faire quelque credit, ou qu'on ne se pressera pas de les Vendre, ayant, Comme Je L'ay dit, la Ressource d'une habitation pour les Mettre En attendant la Vente: les Retours sur Tout En indigo peuvent donner un proffit Bien plus Considerable, auquel on verra que sur la Vente Jay fait supporter un dechet de 10 p%.

Pour Prouver que les Mises des deux prémieres années suffiront Et au dela, à faire Roulller ce commerce pendant les huit années proposées suivant les Tableaux, on verra que le Net produit En france des Retour des 2 premiers Negriers la 1'ere année 1755 monte a la somme de		508,180 ll.
Celuy des 3 Negriers de la 2e année a		813,068 "
Le Net produit de la carguaison		1,321,248 "
de la 1'ere anneé 1755 monte a	211,080	419,620 "
Et celuy de La 2e année 1756 Monte a	208,540
		1,740,868 ll.
La mise hors de L'armément des deux Negriers de la premiere anné 1755 Monte a La somme de	280,500
Celle des 3. Negriers la 2e année a	402,930
	£683,430

Celle du Navire En carguaison la 1'ere année monte a	221,642 ll.
Et celle de la 2e année 1756 monte a	191,499	413,141	1,096,571
Dont le proffit Est de la Somme de			£ 644,297

avec Le capital de ces Retours Montant a	1,740,868 ll.
Il y aura aisément de quoi faire faire le 3e armément dont la mise hors des quatre Negriers la troisieme année 1757 Mont a la somme de		524,370 ll.
Et celle des 2 Navires En Carguaison En 1757 est de		384,419

Ainsy l'on voit que le société aura Encore de Reste du net produit en france des Retours de la Louisiane des deux premieres années 1755 Et 1756 montant de l'autre part a La somme de 1,740,868 ll. deduction faitte des arméments cy dessus En 1757 montant a—908,789 ll. la somme de 832,079 ll.

Mais comme dans le commerce on doit prevoir tous les Evénements Et que la Reussitte Ne Repond pas Toujours a notre attente, il sera Nécessaire que les capitalistes prenent des sages precautions, pour En cas de quelque facheux Evénément, pouvoir continuer ce Commerce sur ce plan, Et sur lequel ils peuvent des a present faire un fonds solide, Quand a moy Je Reponds Bien d'apporter tous les soins possibles pour la Reussitte de l'Entreprise, Et Je puis me flatter de conaître asses le pays, et dy etre asses aymé pour pouvoir Espérer qu'on me fournira d'avance les Carguaisons pour Envoyer En france Et a St. domingue soubs les Engagements que je leur faisay de leur fournir des Negres.

Comme les piastres lourdes perdent En france, Il conviendra de N'en Envoyer que le moins qu'il se pourra, Et prendre a la place des Marchandises Sur lesquelles on peut gagner.

Je pense que pour le Bien de L'Entreprise Il convient quil soit choisy une Vintaine de Bons Negres, dont on faira peu a peu des Matelots qui Remplaceront les Matelots qui mourront ou qui desertéront. ces Negres serviront et seroient continuellément occupés a aller Et venir de St. domingue a la Louisiane seulement; ils Epargnéroient considérablement des Gages d'Equipage; Empecheroient le Retardément fautte de Monde; ayderoient a la charge et decharge des Battiments; augmenteroient considerablément de prix, Et seroient dans Touttes les occasions d'une Ressource infinie dont la valeur Retournerois au proffit de la société lors de la liquidation; ces memes Negres dans Loccasion pourront Tranquliser l'esprit des Negres Nouveaux sur leur sort, et leur faire suporter aisement le trajet de St. domingue a la louisiane.

Le Gereur de la Louisiane pourra a L'occasion achetter le Bois de Campetche ou autres danrées des espagnols pour faire des Retours En france soit par Trop de Marchandises Soit En argent.

Et sur les Navîres Negriers les deux premieres années 62,130 " qui fourneroient une mise hors de moins de la some de 85,515 ll.

438. Gilbert Leonard to Governor William C. C. Claiborne, 1804.[1]

New Orleans, January 25, 1804.

Sir: In reply to your excellency's request for information, relative to the arrangement of the Spanish Government of this province, concerning the importation of slaves, I beg leave to represent:

That by an order of His Majesty, dated at Aranjuez, the 24th of January, 1793 [8?], the prohibition which restrained the importation of slaves was expressly removed, free of duties, to favor the commercial interest of His Majesty's subjects, and the said order was promulgated in due form by the Intendant of this province, Don Ramon de Loper[z] y Angulo, on the 29th of November, 1800.

Subsequent to the retrocession of the province to France, but pending the existence and the exercise of the Spanish authorities, three vessels have arrived, and been admitted into this port with slaves for sale, consigned to John Francis Merecu, viz: the French brig African, Peter Farmuel, master, charged with one hundred and forty-three Africans, the French Brig La Confiance, John Louis Sacray, master, charged with one hundred and seventy Africans, and the French brig Sally, Augustus Buibert, master, charged with one hundred and fifty Africans.

It is proper for me to observe to your excellency, that the Royal Edict required Spanish bottoms and Spanish masters for this commerce, but the Spanish authorities which existed but after the retrocession had been formally announced, considered it their duty to pursue the obvious spirit of this edict, which had for its object the particular interest and accomodation of His Majesty's marine and his subjects, and therefore they deemed it both reasonable and just, that these privileges and advantages which had been generously intended for Spanish Louisiana should not be withheld from French Louisiana during the existence of their temporary authority.

To this candid exposition of facts, I will beg leave, with great deference, to add the opinion that should a change of policy be found expedient by the Government of the United States, it should be promulgated a reasonable time anterior to the interdiction of such commercial expeditions as may have been projected under and permitted [438] [1] American State Papers: Miscellaneous, I. 390. This letter and that of Governor Claiborne, of Jan. 31, 1804, which follows, were sent by Jefferson to Congress on Mar. 8, 1804. During the brief period that Louisiana remained in the hands of the French they were not unmindful of the market for slaves offered by the colony: "Extract of a letter dated London, 13th December, 1802, to a gentleman in this city [Charleston]. 'We have several Frenchmen here, soliciting our African Houses to send eight or ten thousand slaves to Louisiana, and assuring them that they shall be paid in dollars by the return of the vessels—such assurances will not do—the wise men to whom they apply cut the business very short, by saying, we will send you plenty of slaves, but we must have a guarantee in London for the payment of the dollars or pounds sterling.'" Charleston Courier, Mar. 17, 1803.

by the Government of France or Spain previous to the sale and transfer of the province by the French Government to the United States.

439. Governor William C. C. Claiborne to the Secretary of State, 1804.[1]

New Orleans, January 31, 1804.

A vessel arrived at this port a few days since, with fifty African negroes for sale. I immediately applied to a Mr. Leonard, the late Spanish contadore at this place, a man of great integrity of character for information, as to the laws and customs of Spain, relating to the African trade, and received from him a letter upon the subject, which is herewith enclosed. Finding, from Mr. Leonard's communication, that the bringing of African slaves to Louisiana had been permitted by the Spanish authority, and doubting whether I was vested with power to forbid their sale, the importer has been left to pursue his own wishes.

440. Governor William C. C. Claiborne to James Madison, 1804.[1]

New Orleans, May 8, 1804.

. . . The emigration from the West Indies to Louisiana continues great; few vessels arrive from that quarter, but are crowded with passengers, and among them, many slaves. I am inclined to think that, previous to the 1st of October thousands of African negroes will be imported into this province; for the Citizens seem impressed with an opinion that, a great, very great supply of slaves is essential to the prosperity of Louisiana. Hence, Sir, you may conclude that the prohibition as to the importation, subsequent to the 1st of October is a source of some discontent; [2] Nay Sir, it is at present a [439] [1] American State Papers: Misc., I. 390.

[440] [1] Robertson, Louisiana, II. 263. Claiborne here expressed a more optimistic view than that of his letter to Madison on Mar. 10, 1804, just after unofficial news of the prohibition of negro importation had reached New Orleans. "This intelligence has occasioned great agitation in this city and in the adjacent settlements. The African trade has hitherto been lucrative, and the farmers are desirous of increasing the number of their Slaves. The prohibiting the importation of Negroes therefore, is viewed here as a serious blow at the commercial and agricultural interest of the Province. The admission of Negroes into the State of South Carolina has served to increase the discontent here. The Citizens generally can not be made to understand the present power of the State Authorities with regard to the importation of persons; they suppose that Congress must connive at the importation into South Carolina, and many will be made to believe, that it is done with a view to make South Carolina the sole importer for Louisiana. An adventurer by the name of Tupper, a native of Boston (and if report be true of little respectability) who arrived in this city from France about three weeks ago . . . has proposed a meeting of the people on Monday next, in order to state their grievances to Congress. . . . " Claiborne wrote again Mar. 16, 1804, describing the meeting. Ibid., II. 259, 260.

cause of much clamor, but I am indulge a hope, that the Louisianians will very soon see the justice and policy of the measure.[3] . . .

New Orleans, 12 July 1804.

Sir . . . At present I am well assured, there is nothing to fear either from the Mulatto or Negro population: but at some future period, this quarter of the Union must (I fear) experience in some degree the Misfortunes of St. Domingo, and that period will be hastened if the people should be indulged by congress with a continuance of the African Trade.

African Negroes are thought here not to be dangerous; but it ought to be recollected that those of St. Domingo were originally from Africa and that Slavery Where ever it exist is a galling yoke. I find however that an almost universal sentiment exist in Louisiana in favour of the African traffic. I am myself Solicitous for the arrival of the first of October: Slaves are daily introduced from Africa, many direct from this unhappy Country and others by way of the west India Islands. All vessels on board with slaves on bord are stopped at Plaquemine,[2] and are not permitted to pass without my consent. This is done to prevent the bringing in of Slaves that have been concerned in the insurrections of St. Domingo; but while any importations are admitted, many bad characters will be introduced. The citizens of Louisiana are greatly apprehensive of the West India Negroes but no effectual Stop can at present be put to their introduction.

New Orleans, Oct. 28th, 1804.

Sir, On yesterday I was informed by a Mr. Dubourg, a respectable Merchant of this City, that a Capt. of his with 40 Negroes on board had entered the Mississippi, Since the 1st of October; that these [3] On July 1, 1804, the citizens of New Orleans met and agreed upon a memorial to Congress, which, among other things, asked that they be allowed to decide for themselves whether to admit slaves or not, since not only did the climate of their territory require negro labor, but the need for an available supply to keep the banks of the Mississippi in repair was peculiar to them (Memorial presented to Congress, 1804, p. 18). This memorial was read in the Senate Jan. 4, 1805 (Annals, 8 Cong., 2 sess., p. 30). Claiborne's letters to Madison, of May 29, June 3, 22, reported no modification in the resentment of the inhabitants of Louisiana. Dunbar Rowland, ed., Official Letter-Books of W. C. C. Claiborne, 1801-1816 (Mississippi, State Dept. of Archives and History, 1917), II. 175, 187, 217.

Negroes belonged to his Father Yanothn Inhabitant of Louisiana; that owing to contrary winds and bad weather the vessel was prevented entering the Mississippi until Subsequent to the 1st October.

Mr. Dubourg prayed that the Negroes might be permitted to land, and pledged himself, that they should be forthcoming on the arrival of the Judges in the Territory and that he would await a Judicial decision.

I did not well know how to act on the occasion; It would seem as if it was more particularly the duty of the District attorney to notice and bring before the Court persons who had violated the law; But as neither of the Judges or the attorney General have arrived I esteemed it my province to take measures to enforce the observance of the Law; But on the present occasion, as the Importer was himself the informer, I permitted him to land the Negroes upon giving me an [on] oath their names, and number, and satisfactory assurances, that they should be forthcoming on the arrival of the Judges.

Mr. Dubourg showed a permission which he had procured from the Spanish Governor (Grand Pré) to introduce into the Settlement of Baton Rouge, Sixty Negroes, and intimated an intention to avail himself of said permission. If Negroe Vessels are permitted to pass up to Baton Rouge, the law prohibiting the African Trade in this Territory will in effect be a nullity, and I pray your Instructions whether or not I am to oppose their Passage.

I have understood that several African vessels were sent out in time to return previous to the 1st of October, but from some cause, they have not arrived yet, and their delay is a source of anxiety to the persons concerned! [2]

443. Governor William C. C. Claiborne to the Officer commanding at Plaquemines, 1805.[1]

New Orleans Novr. 11th, 1805.

Sir, I learn from Mr. Brown the Collector, that an English Vessell, with a cargo of African Slaves, is in the Mississippi. You will cause this Vessell to be brought to at the Fort, and not permit the landing of a Negro.

[2] On Nov. 25, 1804, Claiborne wrote: "The late admission of foreign negroes has also been a subject of complaint against me. The Searcher of all hearts knows how little I desire to see another of that wretched race set his foot on the shores of America, and how from my heart I detest the rapacity that would transport them to us. But, on this point, the people here were united as one man. There seemed to be but one sentiment throughout the province. They must import more slaves, or the country was ruined forever. The most respectable characters could not, even in my presence, suppress the agitation of their temper, when a check to that trade was suggested. Under such circumstances, it was not for me, without the authority of previous law, or the instructions of my government, to prohibit the importation."

[443] [1] Official Letter-Books, III. 230. On Oct. 14, 1806, Claiborne wrote to Venter and Harman, merchants of New Orleans, that no vessel from a foreign port with negroes on board would be allowed to pass the first military post on the Mississippi. Ibid., IV. 30.

Nassau (N. P.), March 18 [1806].

Schr. Atalanta, of Charleston, Captain Mitchell, owned by Charles Guiloden, of Orleans, sailed from Charleston on the 9th inst. for New-Orleans, in ballast and some slaves. On Thursday morning got ashore on Pensacola Reef N. The captain, crew, and negroes were saved, with some provisions; they remained on the key 10 days when they were fallen in with by the sch. Centipede, Sawyers, and carried to Nassau.

[444] [1] Charleston Courier, Mar. 28, 1806; for similar items see ante, no. 378n. The remaining items carry the date of the paper in which they appeared. The illicit entry of negroes began immediately and was so flagrant that Claiborne himself was (without doubt unjustly) accused of conniving at it. He had no means of preventing a trade which the inhabitants were eager to encourage and which many traders were entirely willing to attempt. The smuggling of slaves into Louisiana continued on a considerable scale long after the law of 1807 forbade importation into any part of the United States. Indeed, the Louisiana trade of the years subsequent to this were of more significance to the history of the trade than that of any portion of the period preceding prohibition.

445. Act to prohibit the Importation of Slaves into the United States, 1807.[1]

An Act to prohibit the importation of Slaves into any port or place within the jurisdiction of the United States, from and after the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eight.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eight, it shall not be lawful to import or bring into the United States or the territories thereof from any foreign kingdom, place, or country, any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, with intent to hold, sell, or dispose of such negro, mulatto, or person of colour, as a slave, or to be held to service or labour.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That no citizen or citizens of the United States, or any other person, shall, from and after the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eight, for himself, or themselves, or any other person whatsoever, either as master, factor, or owner, build, fit, equip, load or otherwise prepare any ship or vessel, in any port or place within the jurisdiction of the United States, nor shall cause any ship or vessel to sail from any port or place within the same, for the purpose of procuring any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, from any foreign kingdom, place, or country, to be transported to any port or place whatsoever, within the jurisdiction of the United States, to be held, sold, or disposed of as slaves, or to be held to service or labour; and if any ship or vessel shall be so fitted out for the purpose aforesaid, or shall be caused to sail so as aforesaid, every such ship or vessel, her tackle, apparel, and furniture, shall be forfeited to the United States, and shall be liable to be seized, prosecuted, and condemned in any of the circuit courts or district courts, for the district where the said ship or vessel may be found or seized.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That all and every person so building, fitting out, equipping, loading, or otherwise preparing or sending away, any ship or vessel, knowing or intending that the same shall be employed in such trade or business, from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eight, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, or any ways aiding or abetting therein, shall severally forfeit and pay twenty thousand dollars, one moiety thereof to the use of the United States, and the other moiety to the use of any person or persons who shall sue for and prosecute the same to effect.

The progress of federal legislation can be followed in the pages of DuBois and the sources for such a study are easily accessible. The most important preliminary restrictions were the acts of 1794, which forbade the exportation of slaves or the fitting of slavers from the United States, and of 1800, which forbade American citizens to take part in carrying slaves to foreign countries. See DuBois, Slave Trade, pp. 71-108, 237-245.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, If any citizen or citizens of the United States or any person resident within the jurisdiction of the same, shall, from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eight, take on board, receive or transport from any of the coasts or kingdoms of Africa, or from any other foreign kingdom, place, or country, any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, in any ship or vessel, for the purpose of selling them in any port or place within the jurisdiction of the United States as slaves, or to be held to service or labour or shall be in any ways aiding or abetting therein, such citizen or citizens, or person, shall severally forfeit and pay five thousand dollars, one moiety thereof to the use of any person or persons who shall sue for and prosecute the same to effect; and every such ship or vessel in which such negro, mulatto, or person of colour, shall have been taken on board, received, or transported as aforesaid, her tackle, apparel, and furniture, and the goods and effects which shall be found on board the same, shall be forfeited to the United States, and shall be liable to be seized, prosecuted, and condemned in any of the circuit courts or district courts in the district where the said ship or vessel may be found or seized. And neither the importer, nor any person or persons claiming from or under him, shall hold any right or title whatsoever to any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, nor to the service or labour thereof, who may be imported or brought within the United States, or territories thereof, in violation of this law, but the same shall remain subject to any regulations not contravening the provisions of this act, which the legislatures of the several state or territories at any time hereafter may make, for disposing of any such negro, mulatto, or person of colour.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons whatsoever, shall, from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eight, purchase or sell any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, for a slave, or to be held to service or labour, who shall have been imported, or brought from any foreign kingdom, place, or country, or from the dominions of any foreign state, immediately adjoining to the United States, into any port or place within the jurisdiction of the United States, after the last day of December, one thousand eight hundred and seven, knowingly at the time of such purchase or sale, such negro, mulatto, or person of colour, was so brought within the jurisdiction of the United States, as aforesaid, such purchaser and seller shall severally forfeit and pay for every negro, mulatto, or person of colour, so purchased or sold as aforesaid, eight hundred dollars; one moiety thereof to the United States, and the other moiety to the use of any person or persons who shall sue for and prosecute the same to effect: Provided, that the aforesaid forfeiture shall not extend to the seller or purchaser of any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, who may be sold or disposed of in virtue of any regulation which may hereafter be made by any of the legislatures of the several states in that respect, in pursuance of this act, and the constitution of the United States.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That if any ship or vessel shall be found, from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eight, in any river, port, bay, or harbor, or on the high seas, within the jurisdiction limits of the United States, or hovering on the coast thereof, having on board any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, for the purpose of selling them as slaves, or with intent to land the same, in any port or place within the jurisdiction of the United States, contrary to the prohibition of this act, every such ship or vessel, together with her tackle, apparel, and furniture, and the goods and effects which shall be found on board the same, shall be forfeited to the use of the United States, and may be seized, prosecuted, and condemned, in any court of the United States, having jurisdiction thereof. And it shall be lawful for the President of the United States, and he is hereby authorized, should he deem it expedient, to cause any of the armed vessels of the United States, to seize, take, and bring into any port of the United States all such ships or vessels, and moreover to seize, take, and bring into any port of the United States, all ships or vessels of the United States, wheresoever found on the high seas, contravening the provisions of this act, to be proceeded against according to law, and the captain, master, or commander of every such ship or vessel, so found and seized as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and shall be liable to be prosecuted before any court of the United States, having jurisdiction thereof; and being thereof convicted, shall be fined not exceeding ten thousand dollars, and be imprisoned not less than two years, and not exceeding four years. And the proceeds of all ships, or vessels, their tackle, apparel, and furniture, and the goods and effects on board of them, which shall be so seized, prosecuted and condemned, shall be divided equally between the United States and the officers and men who shall make such seizure, take, or bring into port for condemnation, whether such seizure be made by an armed vessel of the United States, or revenue cutters thereof, and the same shall be distributed in like manner, as is provided by law, for the distribution of prizes taken from an enemy: Provided, that the officers and men, to be entitled to one half of the proceeds aforesaid, shall safe keep every negro, mulatto, or person of colour, found on board of any ship or vessel so by them seized, taken, or brought into port for condemnation, and shall deliver every such negro, mulatto, or person of colour, to such person or persons as shall be appointed by the respective states, to receive the same; and if no such person or persons shall be appointed by the respective states, they shall deliver every such negro, mulatto, or person of colour, to the overseers of the poor of the port or place where such ship or vessel may be brought or found, and shall immediately transmit to the governor or chief magistrate of the state, an account of their proceedings, together with the number of such negroes, mulattoes, or persons of colour, and a descriptive list of the same, that he may give directions respecting such negroes, mulattoes, or persons of colour.

Sec. 8. And be is further enacted, That no captain, master, or commander of any ship or vessel, of less burthen than forty tons, shall, from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eight, take on board and transport any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, to any port or place whatsoever, for the purpose of selling or disposing of the same as a slave, or with intent that the same may be sold or disposed of to be held to service or labour, on penalty of forfeiting for every such negro, mulatto, or person of colour, so taken on board and transported, as aforesaid, the sum of eight hundred dollars; one moiety thereof to the use of the United States, and the other moiety to any person or persons who shall sue for, and prosecute the same to effect: Provided however, That nothing in this section shall extend to prohibit the taking on board or transporting on any river, or inland bay of the sea, within the jurisdiction of the United States, any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, (not imported contrary to the provisions of this act) in any vessel or species of craft whatever.

Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That the captain, master, or commander of any ship or vessel of the burthen of forty tons or more, from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eight, sailing coastwise, from any port in the United States, to any port or place within the jurisdiction of the same, having on board any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, for the purpose of transporting them to be sold or disposed of as slaves, or to be held to service or labour, shall, previous to the departure of such ship or vessel, make out and subscribe duplicate manifests of every such negro, mulatto, or person of colour, on board any such ship or vessel, therein specifying the name and sex of each person, their age and stature, as near as may be, and the class to which they respectively belong, whether negro, mulatto, or person of colour, with the name and place of residence of every owner or shipper of the same, and shall deliver such manifests to the collector of the port, if there be one, otherwise to the surveyor, before whom the captain, master, or commander, together with the owner or shipper, shall severally swear or affirm to the best of their knowledge and belief, that the persons therein specified were not imported or brought into the United States, from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eight, and that under the laws of the state, they are held to service or labour; whereupon the said collector or surveyor shall certify the same on the said manifests, one of which he shall return to the said captain, master, or commander, with a permit, specifying thereon the number, names, and general description of such persons, and authorizing him to proceed to the port of his destination. And if any ship or vessel, being laden and destined as aforesaid, shall depart from the port where she may then be, without the captain, master, or commander having first made out and subscribed duplicate manifests, of every negro, mulatto, and person of colour, on board such ship or vessel, as aforesaid, and without having previously delivered the same to the said collector or surveyor, and obtained a permit, in manner as herein required, or shall, previous to her arrival at the port of her destination, take on board any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, other than those specified in the manifests, as aforesaid, every such ship or vessel, together with her tackle, apparel and furniture, shall be forfeited to the use of the United States, and may be seized, prosecuted and condemned in any court of the United States, having jurisdiction thereof; and the captain, master, or commander of every such ship or vessel, shall moreover forfeit, for every such negro, mulatto, or person of colour, so transported or taken on board, contrary to the provisions of this act, the sum of one thousand dollars, one moiety thereof to the United States, and the other moiety to the use of any person or persons who shall sue for and prosecute the same to effect.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That the captain, master, or commander, of every ship or vessel, of the burthen of forty tons or more, from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eight, sailing coastwise, and having on board any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, to sell or dispose of as slaves, or to be held to service or labour, and arriving in any port within the jurisdiction of the United States, from any other port within the same, shall, previous to the unlading or putting on shore any of the persons aforesaid, or suffering them to go on shore, deliver to the collector, if there be one, or if not, to the surveyor residing at the port of her arrival, the manifest certified by the collector or surveyor of the port from whence she sailed, as is herein before directed, to the truth of which, before such officer, he shall swear or affirm, and if the collector or surveyor shall be satisfied therewith, he shall thereupon grant a permit for unlading or suffering such negro, mulatto, or person of colour, to be put on shore, and if the captain, master, or commander of any such ship or vessel being laden as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to deliver the manifest at the time and in the manner herein directed, or shall land or put on shore any negro, mulatto, or person of colour, for the purpose aforesaid, before he shall have delivered his manifest as aforesaid, and obtained a permit for that purpose, every such captain, master, or commander, shall forfeit and pay ten thousand dollars, one moiety thereof to the United States, the other moiety to the use of any person or persons who shall sue for and prosecute the same to effect
